

International Journal of Modern Physics C
© World Scientific Publishing Company

We Discovered Alien Bases on the Moon***

FRED STECKLING and GLENN STECKLING

Translated from German using Google Translate 2012

Over 120 photographs documented by NASA with enlargements

KOPP Publishing Hirschauer Str 10 72108 Rottenburg Tel (74 72 0) 9 12 65 Fax
(07472) 9 12 61

German version scanned 2005 from Watz1 + Montauk2

DOCUMENTED WITH OVER 120 PHOTOS AND NECK NASA PRINTS

JOCHEN KOPP Publishing

PACS Nos.: 11.25.Hf, 123.1K

*For the title, try not to use more than 3 lines. Typeset the title in 10 pt roman, uppercase and boldface.

4 FRED STECKLING and GLENN STECKLING

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Biographical Introduction 17
Introduction 25
Capital: The moon-General Information 29
Chapter 2: The Apollo Moon missions of the United States 31
Chapter 3: Behind the secrets of the moon 35
Chapter 4: UFO-analysis 45
Chapter 5: Analysis of advanced civilizations 57
Chapter 6: New ideas replace old Theorien 71
Chapter 7: The true colors of the moon 77
Chapter 8: Gravity and atmosphere on the moon 79
Chapter 9: water, clouds and vegetation 85
Chapter 10: A photographic analysis of the images in front Moon 89
Chapter 11: Symbols, signals and markings on the moon 119
Chapter 12: NASA experts reveal the facts 129
Chapter 13: Adamski claims to the test 163
Chapter 14: long-overdue changes 167
Chapter 15: Why is space exploration? 171
Chapter 16: Beyond the Moon 175
Chapter 17: Recent Developments 191
Afterword by Glenn Steckling L95
References 205

BIOGRAPHICAL INTRODUCTION

Several years have passed since my father in 1991 died, and asked people from around the world since then me again and again, the material that we, in our original version of his second book , we discovered alien bases on the moon presented to expand. During this period, demand grew steadily after the world kind of logic and reason combined with scientific facts and realities as they tried to represent my father in his more than 35 years working in the field of research on UFOs and visitors from other worlds.

Few people today can rightly the sense of history. Revelation and the experience for lay claim to which my father was privilegiert. To share in and contribute. Fs would indeed be an understatement to say that I am fortunate that perpetrates thirty-four years of my life with parents and friends, too, had nothing directly to do with this topic. And mainly because of my knowledge to deliver first-I country and because of the need for clear and concise reports of the events that have marked these years, and also because of my desire to strengthen the principles of integrity and WVahrheil. with the continuation of the heritage of both my father and Mr. Adamski are connected, I've decided to take advantage of this opportunity.

Many readers today have vanishingly little knowledge about the history of UFO sightings and reports of visits from other worlds. Too oll logic, reason and science were the victims of the demand for the latest. spectacular, sensational news. Of such logical approaches grazing noll ignored by those with intent or out of convenience overlooked that want to mess up the whole "process, and as a result of the public is rarely a complete or balanced picture presented. But even if you foolishly the many valuable publications and reputable archaeological studies, which are ancient texts, Pictographs and transmitted reports have grown, the act of flying objects and their occupants, overlooked by focusing only on events wanted, which were recorded in the last hundred years, would move the mountain of information that most people truly in awe.

Since childhood my father was fascinated by the principle of flight. In a sense you could say that flying - traveling through the atmosphere-almost a peculiarity of our family. His father was a military transport pilot and his uncle had to do at the same time with missile systems, consequently, he was-I-and no doubt attracted by the magnetic aviation. Because of his early talent in the fly as a teenager, he was selected to attend a flying school on the islands along the German coastline.

Here he developed the early desire to control aircraft. Over the years, and with the growing desire to fly ever more sophisticated machines, he followed with a passion for the development of aviation. During his career, he was briefly a member of the German Air Force. Because of an increased allocation of pilot sites, however, which eventually led the military to fulfill its contractual obligations could not meet, they gave him the opportunity to resign and pursue other opportunities.

This meant the mid-50's an exciting time for progress in the development of aviation. With the improvement of both military and civilian as war planes, the advent of the jet and the nuclear age, the study of the sound barrier and the missile technology, there were many things that drew everyone's attention. And more importantly, exactly at this time also made numerous reports about unidentified flying objects over objects that could perform maneuvers that far surpassed anything that had been produced by terrestrial technology, the world's headlines.

From the skies over Europe, England, Washington DC and the United States, Canada, Australia, South America and countless other countries echoed the reports. Newspaper reporter, pilot, astronomer, air traffic controllers, military personnel and ordinary citizens not only watched this spectacular machine in flight, some even had the chance, even with its human occupants to come into contact. In the years 1947-1960 with respect to this phenomenon, there was much less censorship, and so led the undisguised curiosity of both the media and of governments to a much larger flow of information. This situation should change after a few years.

Not only the frequency of such sightings, but also the nature of extraterrestrial aircraft aroused the curiosity of my father. In his youth, was the idea of other inhabited worlds in the infinite cosmos is a very logical idea for him. As a teenager in Berlin, he collected many articles about UFO activity and marked their presence with the utmost care on a large world map on the wall. Years later he told me that in the short period of five years before he and my mother emigrated to Canada and later America, the card literally littered with hundreds of markers.

After my parents had come to the United States in 1960 and the end of 1961 in Denver, Colorado, settled, they were personally witness of several UFO sightings over the area. Largely because of nuclear testing programs, military operations and other specific events such UFO sightings had become even since the late forties to the almost daily occurrence. In fact, in these western states not only alien spacecraft were discovered, some people were even photographed it in flight and reported contacts with their occupants.

But it was in the spring of 1961, we lived in Washington DC that our family, a newspaper reporter for the Washington Daily News , and about thirty other witnesses of a very memorable and spectacular UFO idea was. Something that has been described as a bell-shaped saucer, hopped in about 600 meters above the skies of the city, hovering about fifteen seconds over our heads and then shot with an incredible high speed into space. For days, this seemed Vorfall as well as reports from neighboring areas in the newspaper.

Given his familiarity with the development of aviation and his experience in the collection of data about UFO's, my father decided, with the U.S. Air Force to contact to obtain their explanation for the repeated and significant sightings. At that time, the military of the United States developed strictly regulated processes in dealing with the UFO situation and therefore denied any knowledge of the result in the matter. However, at the same time, however, they admitted some knowledge about a matter, because they assured repeatedly that these extraterrestrial spaceships no threat to the security of the United States represented. It is also interesting to note that a textbook of the Air Force Academy cadets about the existence of UFOs and how to deal with them and therefore instructed the reality quite seriously.

In the growing desire for more concrete information, my father went to the Library of Congress and met with the review of non-fiction, not the Science-fiction literature. a book titled Flying saucers have landed by George Adamski. This clear, accurate images were exactly the same bell-shaped space ship, as we had observed them in Colorado and a few weeks earlier in Washington. Standing foot, he wrote a letter to Mr. Adamski in Vista, California, and asked for a "meeting. We quickly received a reply, (he let on a lecture tour in the Eastern States came in and around Washington DC would be in order before a speaking congregation of reservists of the Air Force. He told us to, with Mn and Mrs. Rodeffer in Maryland to contact living will in which he, if he were in the area, we would be able to close soon with his acquaintance. short , it developed a great respect and deep friendship Celts between Mr. Adamski, the Rodeffers and us. In the following years, we estimated all of us happy, to enjoy not only his confidence but also help to be able to arrange his papers in the area. This brought with it the opportunity to experience his presence in a number of UFO sightings and contacts.

In February 1965, Mr. Adamski and Mrs. Rodeffer get amazing footage of a bell-shaped space ship maneuvered in twenty-five feet away from the trees outside her house in Maryland (see pictures inside). Immediately thereafter, Mr. Adamski called our family in the house. The next morning my father brought the film to Dynacolor in Virginia to develop this and let him twenty-four hours later took off again. When he saw the amazing results, my father arranged quickly an international press conference in Mayflower Hotel, just a little above the White House. At the press conference representatives of most foreign embassies and correspondents from major newspapers and television stations were present. The entire meeting lasted well over two hours, leaving all sides astonishment. This film was later an engineer the Eastman Kodak in Rochester, New York, analyzed, confirming that it is authentic and specific distances, dimensions, and so on shows.

The wealth of knowledge, information and experience, the (sparse Adamski had, has angered skeptics like debunker always amazed at the same time. The fact that he was of officials, of royal houses of religious and educational institutions throughout empfangen in the world and recognized, created a lot of envy. also have their pictures and movies that he recorded worldwide under various conditions, survived the technological analysis of each decade, whatever you tested it, too. His information that he was before the space age on the conditions in space, our planet and gave neighboring worlds, still represent a challenge for any new discovery, and his contacts with extraterrestrial human beings who brought valuable message of peace out of date, never.

Several weeks before his death in April 1965 and instructed Mr. Adamski asked my parents, his education program on this important work to continue. Then my parents reinforced its efforts to make this information accessible to all who were interested. In September 1966, my father and our family were on a lecture tour, which was arranged by contacts in Europe. On the flight to Germany, he was filming with his always 8-mm film camera ready by the window of the Boeing 707, a cigar-shaped ski carrier sent the small bell-shaped scouts over the North Atlantic. Several days later, on a train from Schifferstadt to Mannheim, almost everyone watching in the train, and my father filmed once again, a fleet of cigar-shaped spaceships that herflog side in formation alongside the train. Both events were a sensation in the local press and eventually led to a documentary that was shown in the following year in Europe. After an enthusiastic response in Europe, we returned to Washington, and my parents accepted both with NASA and the Pentagon contact. , and invited them to the movies and this Adamski to take another look. In the spring of 1967 my parents took in the company of Mrs. Rodeffer an invitation from Colonel Freeman and his staff to speak at the Pentagon. They talked with twenty-two scientists at Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt, Maryland, and later spoke to Radio Free Europe.

Each meeting proved that information about Mr. Adamski work, his photos and films, the type of spacecraft, their propulsion systems and the origin of their human occupants great respect, they took to with courtesy and acknowledgment. They were, in fact, much of our understanding of the ongoing relationship between the visitors from space and our company is interested, rather to try than to conceal information about their existence. I emphasize especially the fact that these officials admitted that aliens appear exactly like Earth humans, differ in size and color as we been around forever and mingle with us. Then my father took a number of scholars sympathetic to the appropriate channels to obtain additional information from NASA and conduct further research to be able to represent in part the direct result of this book.

Up to the time when in 1981 the first edition of We discovered alien bases on your moon appeared, included the tireless efforts of my father's also an appearance on television with Art Linkletter in 1970, after numerous speeches on the radio and at universities, another trip to Europe as well as appearances on national television and lectures in Japan. We also acquired a 12-inch, and later a 18-inch reflector telescope, with detailed Mondbeobachnngen to perform, standing with some of the amazing photos in which we had received from the catalog of NASA. This approach helped us in collaboration with a network of other amateur astronomers to confirm many observations of UFO activity, building on the moon and other atmospheric anomalies around the moon. For years my father and I studied with great care, thousands of images from NASA, spent many nights at the telescope, and worked to collect only a portion of the information that you will see the following chapters. It is needless to say - we were all very pleased and excited about the reaction should follow the.

1984, invited Lord Clancarty up my parents and arranged a presentation before a special committee of the House of Lords. And again, they showed great surprise and great respect for the fact that such high-quality information was presented in such a sensible and rational way. Then gave Lord Clancarty interested participants in an oral lock tree copy of the book. A few months after his return from England, my father got to his delight a personally signed Acknowledgement of a Member of the Royal family, which thanked him for his book.

In the few remaining years, our family traveled to public invitation to Australia, Germany and across the United States, we offered our insights and data that has been asked wherever and whenever the time allowed and the professions it. We agreed that a number of documentary interviews were conducted in our house, with the intention of giving the public a broader perspective regarding the information that are crying about this issue in circulation. Since the first publication of the book, the overwhelming reaction of the English edition has discovered alien bases, we on the moon in the eighth edition brought, and we are fortunate to have received thousands of letters from various people who support our work. We have spoken with hundreds of people who watched the similar UFO sightings: pilots, military personnel, scientists, officials, teachers and everyday people - they have all helped and supported it, that this information is public. Our correspondence with the Prime Minister of a Caribbean country - a most eloquent advocate of this and favorable information has contributed to this beautiful country issued stamps UFO memory.

My father had to have neither the time nor the respect for noisydispute. He was aware of the pressures and constraints under which public agencies and their employees are fully aware of and appreciated their efforts.

Fig. 1. The son of the author, Glenn Steckling, who wrote the introduction for the German-language edition or the death of his father relations, therefore, without charge or prejudice. He was of the opinion that ultimately allowed each individual the right and opportunity must be given to examine information itself, to decipher and explain rationally. We hope to give this book as well as our other publications, the reader is privileged to make that choice freely.

Fred cuttings had a personality that protected the truth, information, evidence, the reasons behind the facts, ideas and reports. He did not only delight in finding answers, but he also enjoyed the questions, which were connected with this finding. He regarded himself as a rationalist, in many respects, the tangible evidence needed to be convinced of something. He, like Mr. Adamski also believed that the reasons behind the visits of extraterrestrials and the benefits to humanity still be hot by far more important than the mere knowledge of their existence. Both believed that we should all want as a people and as a planet, much better if we survive and realize our future potential. And both were willing to selflessly contribute to this potential.

In addition, I remember both excellent sense of humor, they could laugh heartily at himself. They were both very serious and relentless when they faced things that had to do with life, yet compassionate and tolerant of the various manifestations of human understanding over. In these thirty-five years, our family received all the evidence we would ever be able to ask, and we are grateful for the opportunity to share with those who are willing to listen with an open mind and heart.

Glenn Steckling

Transport pilot an airline GAP International / Adamski Foundation

INTRODUCTION

For some readers like my discoveries of UFO bases on the moon and NASA published the photos in this book come as a complete surprise. However, I can assure you of perfect validity and authenticity of all the photographic evidence.

I intend neither the intelligence of the public, nor the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA), from whom I received the photographs, Apollo catalogs and microfilms to offend. In this book you will find nothing secret or even top secret is.

The photographic analysis of Apollo moon photos and most of the orbiter photos of me were performed over a period of twelve years. I relied heavily on my experience as a trained observer who used a large mirror reflective telescope. My astronomical studies, albeit at an amateur basis, can date back to the sixties. Moreover, I was a pilot for many years and am so familiar with all types of missiles. I feel sufficiently qualified to identify aerial photographs from every angle can. My interest in aviation, astronomy and space travel have encouraged my unusual interest in the UFO phenomenon.

Many pilots, civilians and those who were formerly in the military, have studied my NASA photographs. Most have responded with the same astonishment and noted: "Look at all the clouds on some of these photos," A retired Air Force colonel asked me, "Where did you get these incredible shots?" My answer was: "From the archives of scientific data from NASA, of course. May I add that are not secret, because if they were, I wanted nothing to do with them. "

The Danish Air Force major H. Petersen, with whom I am well known, examined hundreds of lunar photographs from NASA. And also my own Research and analysis of over 10,000 Apollo photos provided to me as well as for the Major Petersen's overwhelming evidence that have out-of-earth bases on the moon. The results of my inquiries and my guess about the living conditions on the moon are presented in this book.

If only fifty percent of the content of this book and the photographs are accepted, it will undoubtedly spark controversy. To be honest, I even hope.

I have faith in our fellow citizens in the Constitution and that, what it stands for. The presentation of the findings in this book, I exercise my fundamental right as a citizen of the United States of America.

This right, I feel it, obliged me to express myself freely, responsibly and with respect.

The official leadership of the U.S. moon exploration program seems to have resolved this important task of our time into abzudrngen mysterious reasons that are purely speculative. Perhaps the lack of interest of the general public has encouraged them to our space program officials to do so. Much information about the moon and outer space were released piecemeal for the press, and this required the public to read between the lines. Nevertheless, many official NASA announcements clearly and spoke of water, air and volcanic activity on the moon.

Fig. 2. The son of the author, Glenn Steckling, who wrote the introduction for the German-language edition of the death of his father ..

It is generally believed that NASA is responsible for informing the public in all its discoveries space. This is obviously a mistake. Unfortunately, NASA has been reported many times, understaffed, and working with a minimal budget. I believe that many of my discoveries were not noticed in terms of lunar photographs from NASA because of the poor financial situation of this. NASA should require each

Citizens of this country are supported. Our space research program provides people with more gradual, as it expands its perspective, and it enables him to draw new boundaries in space and on other worlds. If future generations are to survive, it seems that space exploration is the only alternative to be.

I know from personal experience that there are UFOs. I have some off the plane from the ground and seen through telescopes. In 1976, I managed to film nearly eleven feet of an 8-mm Kodacolor film with a UFO, which hovered over the northern San Diego County.

In the present backward state of the art, it would be quite impossible to construct cigar-shaped spacecraft of several kilometers in length. Nevertheless, these amazing aircraft had been shot, not only in our atmosphere, but also in the vicinity of the moon.

The Air Force of the United States notes that represent UFOs pose no threat to the security of this nation, and if there were already hostile reports of UFOs on Earth, what chance we would have compared to even one of these giant spaceships, let alone a whole army of them? According to my information, since 1965 several countries in the world have designed machines that fly with free energy. Their efforts for reconstruction of small scouts who visit our planet from other worlds have finally been successful. The analysis of the data shows that most of these small aircraft will be transported between the planets of extraterrestrial origin in the interior of the giant carriers. But there is also reason to believe that some of the hostile actions of UFOs, which were reported after 1965, are part of a secret program in order to frighten the public and create confusion regarding the real visitors from outer space.

I hope that this book, the general public and the scientific world will be encouraged to support not only our space program, but also to require any information about what purpose it serves.

With confidence, I hope that when the public shows genuine interest, NASA again more information about the moon out there than ever before. Just as some scientists suggest, "We must draw the curtain of the ridiculousness of the UFO thing and do research and thought on prejudice."

1. THE MOON-GENERAL INFORMATION

Our moon could be due to the fact that he is much bigger than any other satellite in relationship to its parent planet, a "double planet" are mentioned. The distance of the Moon from the Earth varies from 356,410 km to 406,740 km. The difference is caused by its elliptical orbit around the Earth. The diameter of the moon is about 3475 km, while its surface occupies an estimated 37 million square kilometers. If we imagine the moon set on the United States, he would cover a distance of Las Vegas to Philadelphia.

Its gravity is about one-sixth, according to measurements of gravity of the earth. I guess a sixth, because the attraction varies, depending on the height and location. Certain areas of the visible and on the far side have some highly concentrated masses of matter visible below the surface. We have this phenomenon "Masscons" called. It was shown that gravitational remarkable changes as were noted in the Apollo space flights. While the astronomical records show the moon, that its atmosphere is very thin, I will try to prove that the atmosphere of the moon is dense enough to allow clouds and vegetation.

It's amazing how many people are still not aware of the fact that the moon rotates around its own axis. A full revolution is 29.9 days or one full calendar month. During this time the moon takes about 59 perc. of the surface of the earth almost the same face. This is due to the Librationseffekt.

The age of the moon was determined to be about four and a half billion years. It was assumed that the earth and the moon around the same time and probably originated from the same cloud of cosmic dust. The mass of the moon is on one / si estimate of the mass of the earth, its density to  $3.34 \text{ g / cm}^3$ , its escape velocity to  $2.38 \text{ km / sec}$  and its mean orbital velocity of  $3672 \text{ km / h}$

2. THE APOLLO MOON MISSIONS OF THE UNITED STATES

On 25 May 1961, President John F. Kennedy set the United States, the goal that still end up before the end of the decade, an astronaut on the moon and return safely back to Earth should. But as with most things mankind had some accidents are unacceptable.

On 27 Killed in January 1967 a fire aboard the Apollo-liter rocket three U.S. astronauts. A short circuit in the circuit, the atmosphere generated from pure oxygen in the Apollo space capsule in seconds, a lot of heat. The atmospheric mixture was subsequently modified and made safer. Improvements to the Apollo capsules and various Apollo missions to orbit the moon led on 20 July 1969 to the victorious landing of Apollo 11 on the moon. The inscription on the plaque on board the lunar landing module was as follows: "Here sat a man from the planet Earth first set foot on the moon, July 1969 AD. We came in peace for all mankind. "

As advertised on our Apollo missions on earth very nearly every citizen was advised of our first landing - one can safely assume that the message was on the board intended someone other than terrestrial humans. There are people in academic circles, which I alluded to above, that this is in itself proof that it was expected that other people, not of this earth, this sign would read. On earth, but we also get nowhere without a sign of the certainty that they will be seen. The moon is certainly no exception, here

At the end of the Apollo program, the U.S. astronauts had spent about one hundred and sixty hours of work per man, to study the moon walk and electric-powered SUVs. The astronauts conducted experiments and were diverse, with over three hundred and eighty kilograms of lunar rocks and soil samples returned from their common missions.

The information from the Apollo landings have taken the attention of scientists for many years. While it is true that much of the data were analyzed, it is also equally true that much because of the reduction in funding from NASA and the consequent lack of staff was ignored. There are rumors that numerous moon rock disappeared over the years in mysterious ways. I recently on a flight back to Washington DC the Smithsonian museum visits. This time I found a selection of umnssende moon rock, which was exhibited at the Institute's gemstone division. I looked at these rare specimens with care. Without major geological knowledge but I can say categorically that each of these rocks could be replaced with an appropriate piece of ground rock and no one would notice the difference. (See the pictures of this Chapter 1 to 3 see soap 68 and 69)

The Apollo missions were as follows:

Apollo 8: 21 to 27 December 1968, which photographed the moon from orbit. The astronauts were Bomian this mission, Lovell and Anders. Apollo 8 came back with a remarkable selection of color photographs of the far side of the moon.

Apollo 10: 18 to 26 May 1969, a flight into the orbit of the moon, manned by astronauts Stafford, Cernan and Young.

Apollo 11: 16 to 24 July 1969, the first manned moon landing by astronauts Armstrong and Aldrin. Astronaut Collins commanded the mother ship in orbit. the first moon walkers back expected.

Apollo 12: 14 to 24 November 1969, another successful landing on the moon where the astronauts Conrad and Bean walked on the moon and astronaut Gordon in orbit of the moon waiting for their return.

Apollo 13: 11 to 17 April 1970 with the astronauts Lovell, Swigert and Hamburg on board. Apollo 13 was the fateful flight that because of a previous mysterious explosion of a tank of oxygen could not land on the moon. The astronauts of Apollo 13, however, fulfilled their tasks in the photographic lunar orbit.

Apollo 14: 31 January to 9 February 1971 reached the moon without mishap and landed safely. The astronauts Shepard and Mitchell walked on the moon, while astronaut Rossa drove the mother ship in orbit around the moon.

Apollo 15: 26 July to 7 August 1971, another successful landing mission, the astronauts Scott and Irwin on the Moon by the experiments conducted, while Astronaut Worden awaited their return in the mother ship. It should be emphasized (that all the astronauts who controlled the mother ships that had carried out a number of experiments and also did a series of photographic tasks. Moreover, the radio communications of the astronauts on the Moon has been reinforced by the mother ship sent to Earth. The public should understand that deserve the astronauts who could not walk around on the moon, just as much prestige and respect as the others.

Apollo 16:16. to 27th April 1972 ended with the astronauts Young and Duke on the moon, the experiments conducted by the surface, while astronaut Mattingly orbited the moon, and awaited the return of his companions.

Apollo 17: 7th to 19th December 1972 was the last country in the emission of Apollo. Your landing site was Taurus-Littrow valley. The crew of Apollo 17 astronaut Cernan was made, science astronaut astronaut Schmitt and Evans, who circled the moon in orbit. Apollo 17 was also commissioned to photograph the intense side of the moon. The area around the crater King seemed to have been one of its main goals.

Many reputable scientists were disappointed at the end of the Apollo program, which ended with the flight of Apollo 17 abruptly. There was so much to explore the moon, and there were so many questions and puzzles to solve. Others who most of the photographs came from NASA had studied, I like to the undeniable conclusion that we had discovered too much up there. This is the reason why the whole thing ended so suddenly.

The authors of the British book Alternative 3 assumed that our lunar exploration program was continued, but under complete secrecy! I think they're right and I agree that we have explored the moon in secret with electromagnetically driven vehicles continue to differ, except for the size, not significantly different from those who visit us from other worlds.

If some nations of the earth have managed to recreate even the smallest of the UFOs that crashed during the last thirty years on earth, they would have in addition to the discovery of devices for monitoring the Earth and limitless possibilities of transport found have. Alternative 3 assumes that this is so and that we are building together with people from other worlds on the moon bases and conduct studies. In our time when so much is covered up, disfigured in the facts, twisted and hidden in secrecy, fear and distrust our lives dominate, it seems, in fact, quite possible that some truth behind all these assumptions.

3. BEHIND THE SECRETS OF THE MOON

In our high school we were taught a relatively complete collection of facts about the moon. We were - and strangely, even today - a story that the moon was not able to sustain life, that he was airless, covered with craters of extinct volcanoes, and he is - in simple terms, a ball of dead rock. The problem is that these "facts" are no longer acceptable, have been exploring our moon by the Apollo missions provided abundant evidence to the contrary.

Decades ago, long before the modern rocket technology develops, the astronomers puzzled about what revealing their telescopes on the moon. "Cities grow," hundreds of domes on the moon have now been mapped individual lights, explosions and other weird geometric shadows that can not be explained by the known laws of nature were both professional as well as amateur astronomers sighted.

Let us study the reports! Something is happening at the top, the lights can wander, prune mountains, builds domes, walls, pyramids, tunnels and water tanks with reinforced walls. When the moon has no air cover, he does have a very good substitute, something that carries clouds, light breaks up and wears meteors burn up.

Science is often taken aback by the fact that some huge moon craters are in fact active volcanoes. During the Apollo missions are volcanic eruptions and moonquakes were observed and measured. In contrast, that the Moon is widely seen as "dead", can be found that he has something that grows and changes with the seasons. What could it be other than vegetation? The findings of the American and Soviet moon exploration programs are surprisingly, so incredible that they actually have many sleepless nights preparing scientists.

One hundred and thirty years of observing astronomer Gruithuisen north of the crater Schrter formations of criss-cross running lines and squares, a striking resemblance to aerial photographs of inner-city blocks and roads, which were taken from a distance. Even if the astronomer was at his time as a madman Gruithuisen branded, so had his detractors but no better explanation for the formations. However, later in the thirties, similar sightings from the Mount Wilson Observatory was made. When you set up the 100-inch telescope (2.54 meters) on the crater Gassendi, a remarkable "Rhrensystem" was photographed (see Figure 4). While some of these designs grew, others were removed.

The astronomer Nininger discovered long ago a kind of glass-like tunnel of thirty-two kilometers, the crater Messier and Pickering joins Wh. In December 1915, the crater Aristarchus grabbed a Christmas surprise for the observers in the form of a beautiful, new, black wall that had previously not be there. It runs from the center to the edge, much like the walls and connecting tubes in the crater Gassendi. In 1922, the "hill builder" extraordinarily active. Three long, artificial-looking hills or objects appeared at the bottom of the crater Archimedes. Later, not far discovered from three other objects that were grouped together in a triangular shape. reported during this time the French magazine L'Astronomie by a long curved and straight walls with arches, which had an incredible resemblance to a viaduct or bridge type.

During the month of November 1970 my son and I run serious studies in the field of "Archimedes." We used our 12.5-inch reflector (31.75 cm). The observation height was 2,300 meters above sea level. One night we saw our surprise three very large, cigar-shaped objects on the basis of "Archimedes". All three objects keep the same size, two of which were parked in the northern area, the other was located in the southern area. We compared them with reviewing the map section of the Air Force from the moon of this area. On this map of the crater floor was relatively flat. and there are no indications were recorded for these objects. They stayed for several hours in the crater. The diameter of the "Archimedes" is approximately 80 kilometers. According to our survey this cigar-shaped structures were least thirty-two miles long and about four and a half kilometers wide (see Figure 5).

The famous astronomer Walter Haas once said that he knew of a case seen in the well-known astronomer things on the moon would have, but categorically refused to report it or to even talk about it. In the 10th night ahead July 1941 Walter Haas saw themselves in a period of five minutes, two meteor flashes in space. A group of astronomers who had summoned Haas observed, within one hundred and seventy hours of observation a total of twelve meteor flashes through the dark disk of the moon. This proves that the moon has an atmosphere that is thick enough to

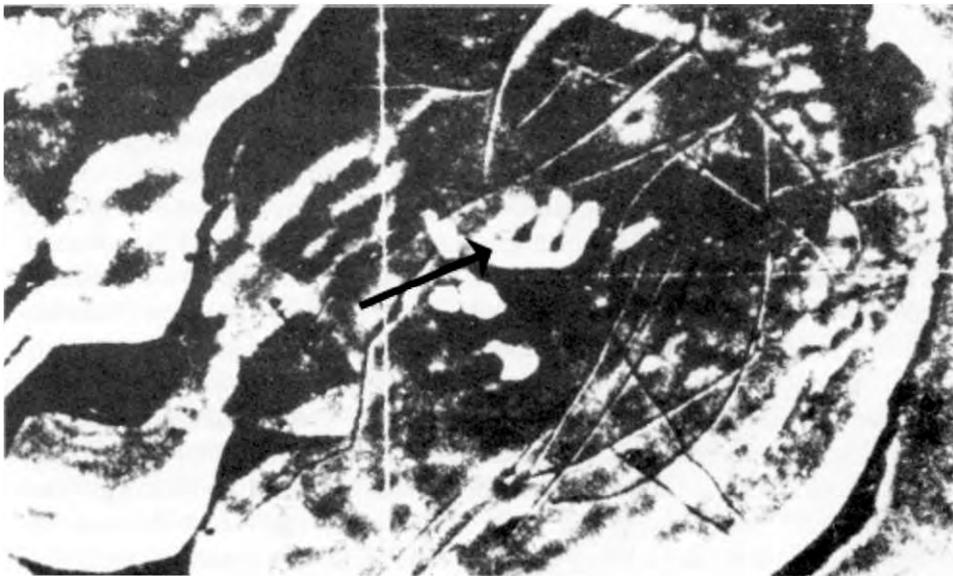

Fig. 3. Figure 4: The Gassendi crater, taken 45 years ago with the 100-inch telescope (2.54 meters) at Mount Wilson Observatory. Note the tube system in the Gassendi-sole. Note also the mountain in the middle, which was cut to a platform that represents the letter "e".

To allow meteors glow. This atmosphere creates clouds in shades of white, gray and red are some so dense that they throw shadows visible.

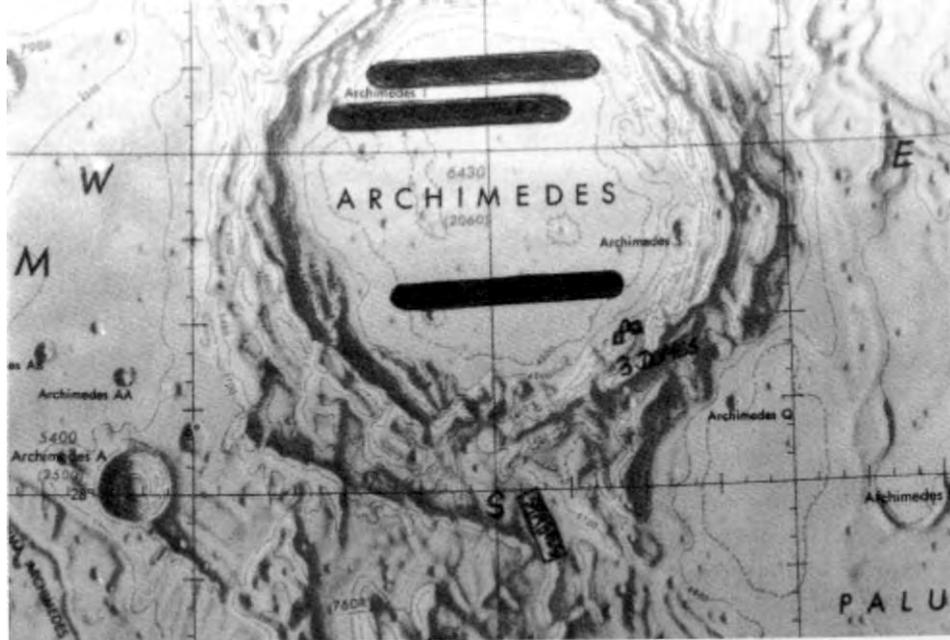

Fig. 4. Figure 5 (drawing): Huge objects in the crater Archimedes, as they were by the author and his son with a 12 1/2-inch-Meskop (31.75 cm) was observed.

The crater Plato near the north pole of the moon is sometimes covered large parts of its 4,500 square kilometers of cloud and has a whitish frost or snow on the crater rims. Studies of the North and South Pole regions suggest a greater concentration of clouds over these regions. This suggests that the temperatures over the age of 50 Degrees north latitude and 50 Degrees south latitude, seem to be more moderate, because the sun's rays strike at an angle. This shows that change is agreeable to the otherwise dramatic lunar temperatures in the polar regions values. Perhaps we could call the polar regions of the moon than the temperate zones.

The astronomer Patrick Moore put in the magazine Omni determined by November 1978. "In our current phase of post-Apollo-education, it would be wrong to assume that all the secrets of the moon are solved," Mr. Moore speaks of mysterious things here and there were seen, such as a faint glow, flashing lights, extractor marks, and active volcanoes in other words we could say: "... The moon is alive and well" A reddish luminescence has been reported by Soviet astronomers in and around the crater Alphonsus. Weak moonquakes, as measured by the Apollo instruments, occurred mostly at times when the moon was closest to the Earth.

In any case, seems to be the "moon Industry" to have held for at least the past fifty years in the crater Plato very exciting meetings. Ligaments of moving lights have been observed there, and in crater some time shone long a light triangle. Thirty bright lights flashed all at Once at the bottom of the crater, and went into a confusing bustle about. While extinguish some groups, can at the same moment other groups to move to a full glow. the British Royal Astronomical Society has reported 1,600 observations of a similar nature. incessantly been a bright light in the crater Aristarchus, and another seen at the eastern foot of the lunar Alps. This is done for over a hundred years. In Mare Crisium was a spectacle of spots and streaks of light observed during the crater Messier occasionally in different bright lights lit up. From the crater Eudoxus spread long light lines.

Some twenty years sent the Piton mountain in the northern part of Mare Imbrium from lighthouse-like light rays. There can be no doubt, even in the weakest brain that many of these lights, especially the glowing, moving objects are intelligently controlled.

Dave Darling, an amateur astronomer with a 12 1/2-inch reflector (31.75 cm) informed me of his recent discoveries on the moon. He writes in his letter: "The conviction is growing. that the moon is a base of operations for the UFO activity that are observed in our sky."

He reported the following sightings: a large cigar-shaped object on 16 April 1979 by 1 clock, which had about sixteen miles long and two and a half miles in diameter. His color was silver-and it took a sharp shadow on the lunar surface. The location of the sighting was immediately at Isidore crater, near the Mare Nectaris. The cigar-shaped object landed about eighty kilometers from the sunset point.

On 12 August 1979 at 3.45 clock Darling reported back from a bright cigar-shaped object, this time near the centromere of the crater rim. He said the object was thirty-two km long and also by silbermetallischer color. It was after about a quarter of its length, two wing-like forms, which were produced on each side. Later, the object disappeared from the flat terrace on the west side of the crater rim.

Dave Darling took me some time ago on a large platform, which he had observed south of the crater Archimedes attention. The platform is eight miles long and about 1.6 kilometers wide at a height of 1500 meters. Nearly twenty photographs of both lunar orbiter and Apollo missions, these unusual platform that is not the way to the moon map of the Air Force from the area recorded by the Archimedes (see Figure 6).

I have also discovered some platforms about 48 kilometers northeast of the above. However, there are five in a row, and they may have symbolic significance, since they appear as capital letters (see Figures 7 and 8).

One must remember that over 90 percent of the lunar studies will be operated by astronomers. The large professional instruments such as the 200-inch telescope (5.08 meters) on Mount Palomar be considered too strong for lunar observations. High-performance telescopes tend to atmospheric particles over a large scale and are better suited for studies of distant galaxies. The late George Adamski, a noted author and amateur astronomer, made from 1948 to 1952 at least eight lunar photographs showing UFO activity on or near the moon. All photos were taken by telescopes (see Figures 9 to 13).

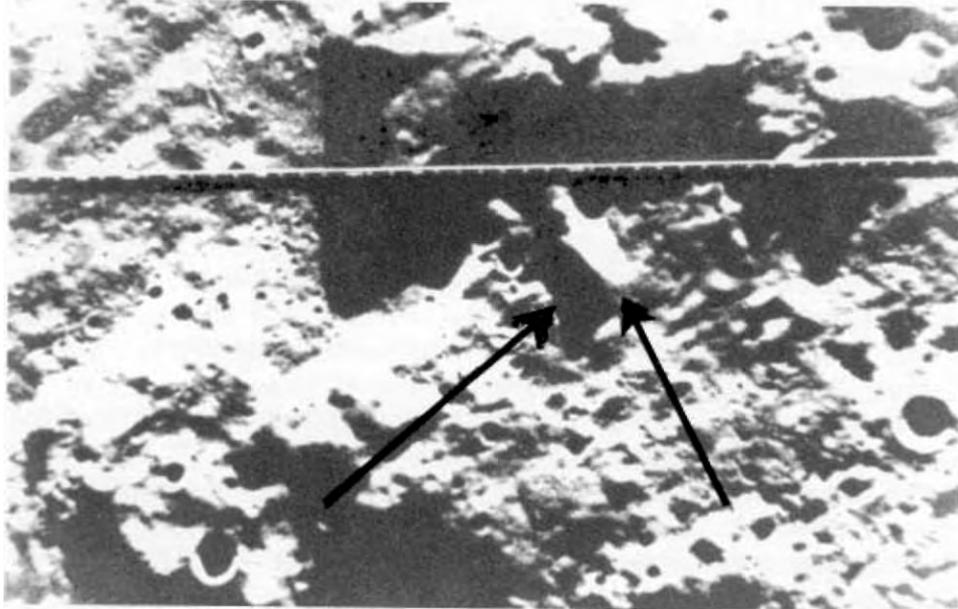

Fig. 5. Figure 6: Large platform south of the crater Archimedes. Discovered by Mr. Darling. Size of platform: 8 kilometers long and 1.6 kilometers wide, height: 1524 meters above the ground.

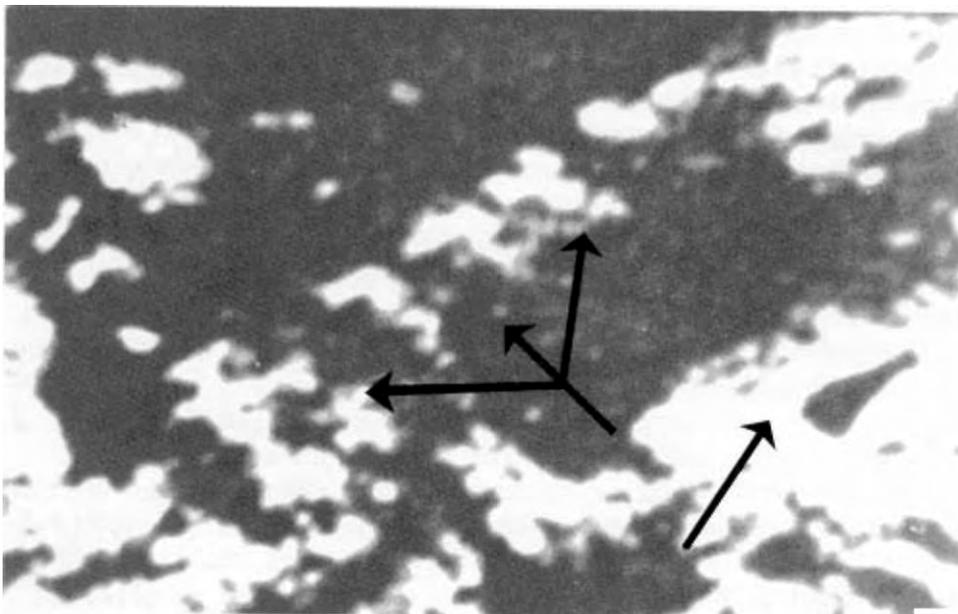

Fig. 6. Figure 7: In the mountain peaks cut platforms that extend over 48 kilometers. South of Archimedes. Each platform seems to be a letter or symbol to represent. Note also the large structure in the valley below.

Fig. 7. Figure 8 (enlargement): The crater Archimedes. Notice the three domes in the southeast crater wall.

Fig. 8. Large cigar-shaped UFO. 1951, photographed by George Adamski. Recording through a telescope.

Fig. 9. A fleet of seven UFOs near the Moon. Telescope Photo by George Adamski, 1951.

Fig. 10. Figure 12 (enlargement): Bell-shaped UFO in the vicinity of the moon. Telescope Photo by George Adamski, 1952.

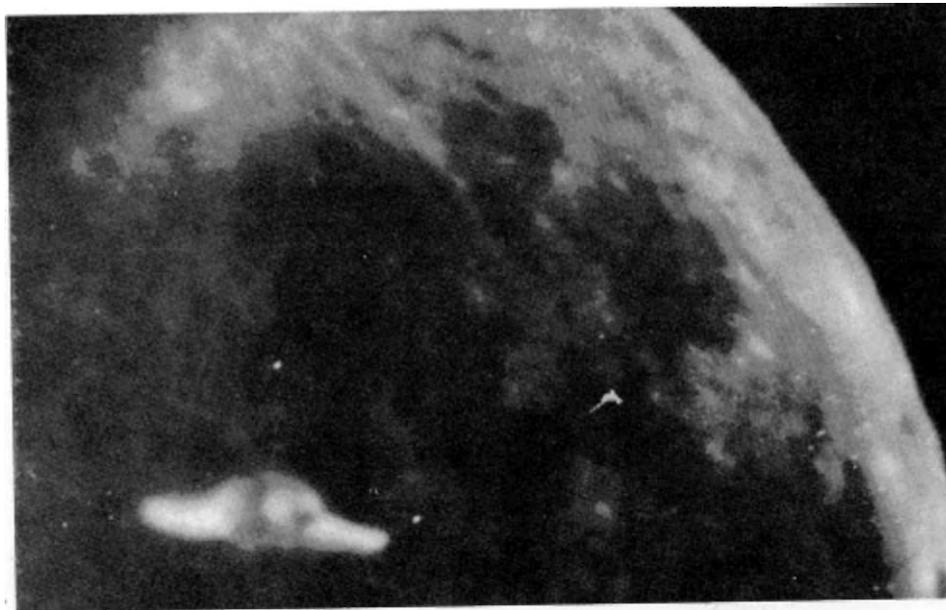

Fig. 11. A flock of six round UFOs. Telescope Photo by G. Adamski, 1950.

4. UFO ANALYSIS

Unknown objects are observed for centuries around the moon and on to him. They seem to be driven by electromagnetic energy. This energy will offer unlimited opportunities to build huge objects and to move and live in almost any environment. The electromagnetic spaceships emit a pulsing glow that under different conditions as the density of the atmosphere, humidity, velocity and the height of the spacecraft. Spectrum produces. Nearly all the photographs of UFOs that have been recorded on Earth, in space and in the vicinity of the Moon show this phenomenon. These ships are only visible as a metallic objects when the force field in which the ship is normally included, is dissolved. Some of the best photographs in private hands was made by the late George Adamski 1950-1955 and M. Rodeffer, the presence of a UFO filmed in Adamski, an 8-mm-Filmka camera from a distance of thirty meters. All these recordings are here with the permission of the George Adamski Foundation used in Vista, California.

Adamski was able not only to take pictures of the scout class objects that have a diameter of about ten to twelve feet, but he also photographed several cigar-shaped space Reeds of gigantic size. Some were several kilometers long (see Figures 14 to 17). The very idea that someone has the knowledge to build spaceships of such monstrous proportions, beyond the imagination. Photographic evidence, however, attest their existence.

It would be useless to determine the material and labor costs incurred to construct uni and only one aircraft several kilometers in length. On Earth, the construction of a huge aircraft carrier or a supertanker of about four hundred meters on a technical masterpiece and is considered to be prohibitively expensive. Nevertheless, our largest ships to some insignificant compared to the UFOs that were seen on the moon, in his presence and in the world rates. No nation on earth could such a vehicle build, not only because of financial inability, but because of the lack of the required materials and labor. There would be on the ground are not enough funds to construct even one of these more than thirty kilometers long, giant carrier ships.

If we follow this idea, it can be concluded that whoever they are still living there on the moon, or use it as a base, the economic aspects of the construction of such a colossal vehicle must have been solved long ago. This can turn a great partnership and close the merger of people, skills and experts to harmoniously co-operating labor. This is indeed a task to imitate us in such a large scale seems impossible. This can in turn suggests that - whoever "they" are up there, they are much more advanced than us.

One might further speculate that result from such a great collaboration and a common language, economic, and perhaps the monetary system would be abolished completely. If we follow this line of thought, it is determined logically, that this appears to be the reason why our officials have chosen to ignore the inexorable truth.

Fig. 12. Gigantic carrier ship extraterrestrial origin. "The mother ship", telescopic photo of George Adamski, 1952.

Fig. 13. Gigantic carrier ship extraterrestrial origin. "The mother ship", telescopic photo of George Adamski, 1952.

in conjunction with the release of released UFO reports of several federal intelligence agencies recently, some evidence suggests that, since the UFOs were in the forties in our skies in appearance, this phenomenon is much more serious, albeit silent interest aroused in government circles. Official reports now through the Freedom of Information Act (the Act on the freedom of information gathering) are available to resolve all doubt that the governments know more about UFOs than they claimed in the past thirty years. The fact remains, however, that despite official denials, the federal monitor, the UFO activity continues to this day zurr.

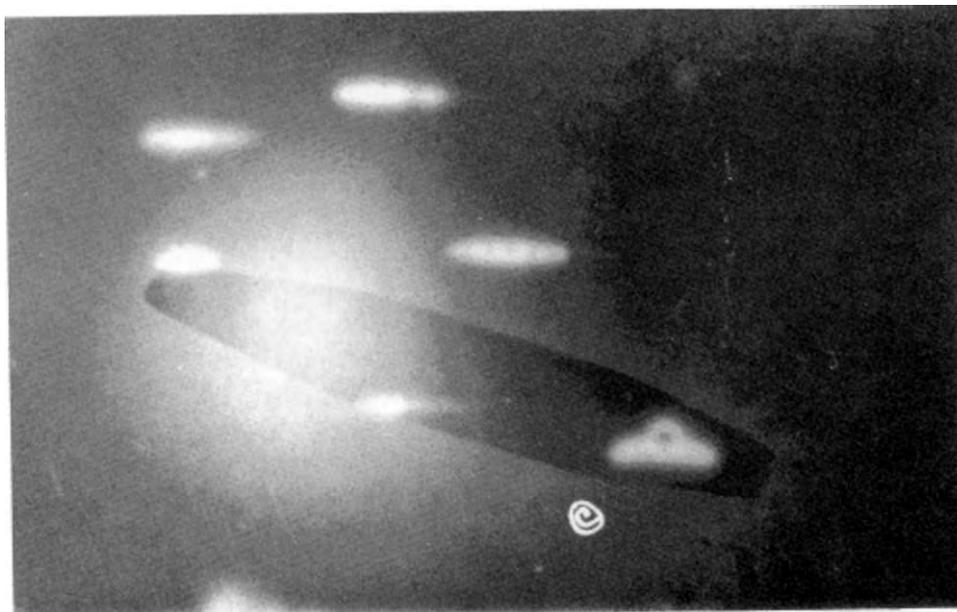

Fig. 14. carrier ship, the "scouts" dismisses Telescope Photo by G. Adamski, recorded 1952nd.

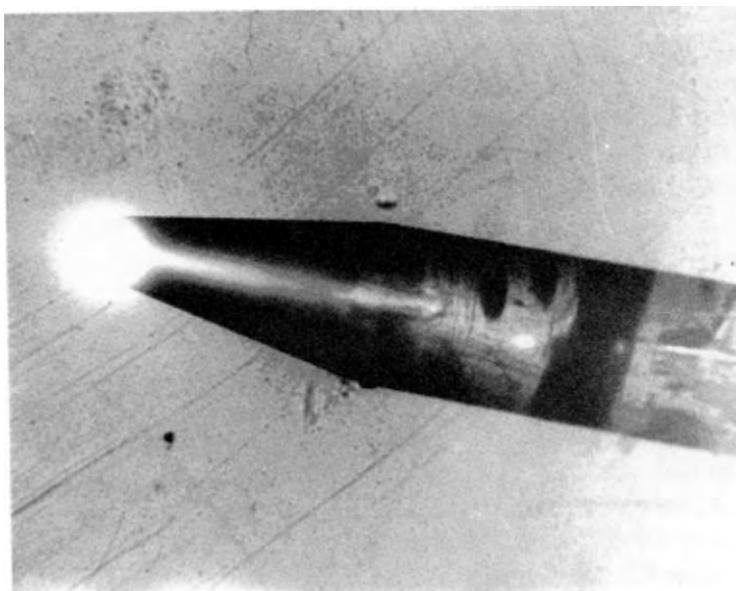

Fig. 15. bullet-shaped spacecraft of extraterrestrial origin. G. Adamski 1951st photographed.

The last contribution to the best Adamski UFO movie I've ever seen, took place on 26 February 1965 in Silver Spring, Maryland shortly before 23 Died April 1965. At that time he was a guest at the home of Rodeffers. As previously reported, were M. Rodeffer (who is now married after the death of her husband) and Adamski been advised by his contacts with aliens, that would appear on that afternoon against 14 clock a spaceship. Mrs. Rodeffer was ready and waiting with her 8-mm movie camera with a 40-ASA Dvnacolor , was tipped film.

As the UFO appeared astonishing, and Adamski filmed Mrs. Rodeffer turn this bell-shaped ram ship. The vehicle was dreikugelige of dark blue color and gave a deep, humming sound. With the hatches could be seen humanoid occupants. Of particular interest is the movement of one of three balls, which like a gimbalartiges control system acted to switch the electric charge like a capacitor. In the film you can see how this ball is lowered and retracted, depending on how the vehicle to the side or up and down, which may cause distortion of the appearance of the object. This creates the optical illusion that the whole object is deformed.

Fig. 16. Image above: Stamp of the country Grenada. This Caribbean country in 1978 investigated the UFO phenomenon under former Prime Minister Sir Eric Gairy.

Some researchers have speculated that this UFO type is driven by an electrostatic magnetic system, caused by the latter and other effects, such as the strong gravitational field, which understandably affects the photons to the spacecraft. The film was developed in Washington DC and by a project manager for the development department of the Eastman Kodak Company in Rochester, New York, analyzed. A series of tests was performed, and the film proved to be authentic.

The size of the UFO was in the image geometry to 8.2 meters in diameter. The distance from the camera was 27.5 meters, the height above the ground about 23

Fig. 17. Middle: Another stamp from Grenada, 1978. Running is the Prime Minister of Grenada, Sir Eric Gairy.

Fig. 18. Below: Stamp Interplanetary cooperation, 1977, Equatorial Guinea, Africa.

meters. I can very well imagine that this new piece of evidence that proves once again that the flying saucers from the Adamski type really is, the critics Adamski has dealt a heavy blow.

This film was the Goddard Space Flight Center shows (NASA Headquarters in Maryland), members of the Weltraumkommittees the White House and the Senate in Washington DC, as well as officials in the Pentagon.

The reproductions of the frames of the famous UFO Rodeffer-Adam-ski-film are shown in this book courtesy of Madeline Rodeffer Johnson of Silver Spring, Maryland, USA. George Adamski described the drive of the UFO's outstanding in his last book, Flying Saucers Farewell.

The following excerpts are in this book with the permission of the George Adamski Foundation played in Vista, California:

"To understand the magnetic driving force of an interplanetary spacecraft better, we must first consider the geomagnetism, magnetic sphere of influence surrounding each planet and each sun and fills the whole space.

We can compare the geomagnetic field of the earth with a series of circular waves, as occurs when one drops a pebble into a pond. These circular waves move forward center, where the stone was dropped away, and they take it in size, but from strength to strength.

If we simultaneously two stones a few meters distance from each other to throw into the pond, two systems arise from the center of each circular propagating waves. Where the waves meet, they form an interference pattern that is propagated between the two center points. This Interferenzmuster takes the form of an extended ellipse, are their narrower ends at the points at which the stones were dropped. Although

Fig. 19. "Scout", by Madeleine Reodeffer Johnson on 26 February 1965 recorded in the presence of G. Adamski, Silver Spring, Maryland (USA) with an 8-mm movie camera.

Fig. 20. Figure 19. The "Rodeffer-Johnson UFO" 26 February 1965, 8 mm film camera.

Fig. 21. The "Rodeffer-Johnson UFO" February 26, 1965 Notice the change in the shape of this amazing vehicle is this changing the force field and the radiation due...

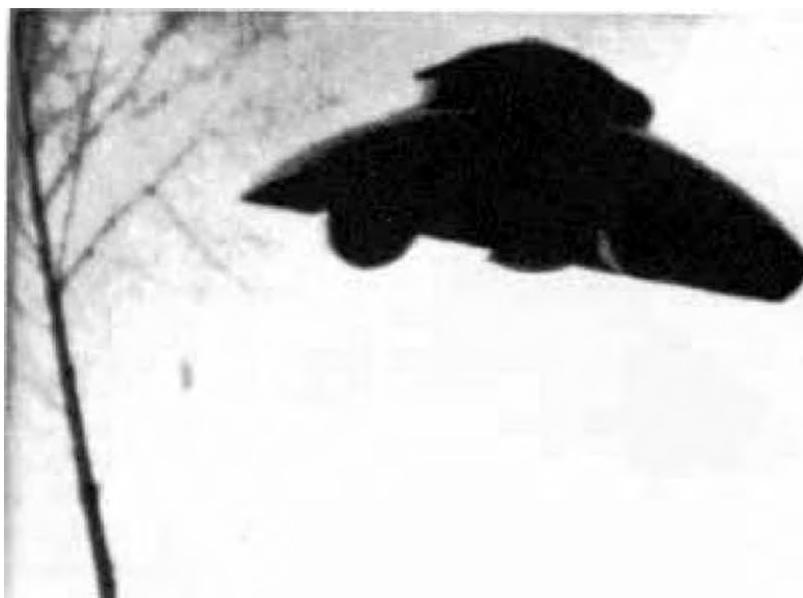

Fig. 22. The "Rodeffer-Johnson UFO" February 26, 1965 Note that one of the three bullets were confiscated...

both waves, while different from their centers outward moving, have diminished in strength, the interference pattern connected part of both forces to form a third force, which remains between the two centers of constant as long as they are active.

The same relationship exists between the expanding spheres of magnetic influence emanating from the sun and each planet or satellite into space. Because these magnetic wave rings emanating from each another center, they form a magnetic interference pattern, which in turn assumes the basic shape of an extended ellipse. Although the geomagnetic field of each planet and the sun decreases in strength as it moves into space, forming the elliptical magnetic field is formed so between the celestial bodies as an interference pattern, a constant magnetic field between the heavenly bodies.

The magnetic field of a planet similar to direct current, which decreases on the way from its source, however, the elliptical magnetic field that exists between two planets can be compared with alternating current, which can be sent over long distances.

These changing elliptical fields that propagate from Sun to planet and from planet to planet, are the invisible straps that hold the solar system in balance. They spread out in a similar manner between systems and galaxies. They also exist between the micro-magnetic fields of the atoms, the "miniature solar systems."

The edges of elliptical fields that affect the rich earth, north of about 58 degrees to 58 degrees south latitude. The axis of each elliptical field is at right angles to the magnetic polar axis, and the magnetic field axis coincides with the magnetic equator of the earth.

The magnetic fluxes between the planets are constantly changing their direction of flow, creating a magnetic pulse two-way between the planets. by using only one half of each two-way pulse, the world-space-liner moving in one direction. When a spacecraft used only as an outward momentum, it moves away from a planet. Use the ship has a pulse moves inward, it is on a planet. Leaves the spaceship, the alternating pulses of two cables to pass through, so it can float.

To explain how moving spacecraft in the gravitational field of a planet, we must first of the relation between the geomagnetism and the rotation of the planet look: On Earth, many authors refer to "anti-gravity devices" and our scientific researchers had the idea that gravity might be to fight to a standstill. This is not a productive approach. spacecraft to visit our world today, from other planets to make use of the "progravitationalen" principle and use the natural forces, rather than trying to fight them. Because this

Operate ships with electrostatic energy, it would be useless for them to fight the geomagnetic forces, because only the geomagnetic field of the earth has an electrical potential voltage of billions.

Planetary gravity is the natural balance between the centrifugal force of the axial velocity of a planet and the centripetal attraction of its electrostatic field. The centrifugal force tries to sling an object from the surface of a planet, while the electrostatic attraction of the object is prevented from flying into space.

The late Dr. Albert Einstein described this balance as an inseparable relationship in his "Unified Field Theory." A flying saucer or a "progravitationales" spaceship works by creating its own gravitational field, which is generally spherical pattern surrounds. This field is set so that it blends harmoniously with the geomagnetic field of the planet. This resonant gravitational field makes the ship weightless. This weightless or balanced state, the ship, wherever it may be, will be moved with a relatively easy drive.

Within its self-created progravitationalen field, the space ship traveling at a speed that exceeds the speed of light. Through the use of the forces of nature can be the same as its motion the forces of nature. The driving force, as it is created by the generator inside the spaceship can be compared with that provide the electrostatic Van de Graaff generators that are used in our own physical laboratory.

Interplanetary spacecraft have often been described as "burning." Such a state is created when are natural particles in space, through which moves a spaceship. In contact with its surrounding resonance frequency field. Vibrations in this field, causing a shimmering effect, similar to heat waves that rise from the pavement, causing the spacecraft looks "alive and breathing." This force can be fooled, the light waves completely around the ship and so cause it suddenly disappears from view, although in reality it is still there and not "dematerialized", as some one want to believe.

There is also another explanation for this sudden disappearance. Since the strength of the field varies. can move through the ionization of each color of the spectrum. Disabled, energy can glide the spaceship behind the visible part of the spectrum, and standing thus the spacecraft to the eye, like a heavy cloud bank a plane hidden.

The intense resonance field also serves as a shield for space debris in front spaceship derived. At the same time automatically sign between this field and the atmosphere or outer space is inserted, through which a spacecraft can move through it. Sun friction of any kind is avoided. Because of this progravitationalen nature of his movements, the occupants of a Spaceship from every bad or uncomfortable maneuvers atmospheric conditions only.

For faster travel than the speed of light, the field of the spacecraft to a high resonance nutshell, thus achieving prime merge. This ship is equipped with an automatic robot sensing and control system, but also has manual control devices.

Contrary to the commonly accepted theory of matter is not under such conditions is transformed into pure energy. You can compare a spaceship in his force field with a planet in its atmosphere, each moving as a unit through space. Thus, a space ship when it speeds up and seems to disappear, only prime merge and reach his force field oscillates faster than visible light. At higher frequencies, it can be permeable to radar signals.

The "hole effect" that can be seen on many UFO photos, is created by a magnetic window. A small portion of the force field of the ship is neutralized and makes visual and radar similar observations possible. This is sometimes needed if the force field of the spacecraft is in a relatively high oscillation range.

The dreikugelige base, which is seen in most flying saucers, serves both as a retractable landing gear as well as electro-static three-point-drive control system. The mother ship using a series of tapes that are built to the same control purpose in the frame construction. How we use recoil rockets uni to control a rocket vehicle, the UFOs use their variable three-point system to maneuver through the regulation of electric charge.

In horizontal flight in the ionosphere of a planet, the spacecraft flying along the geomagnetic lines of force of this planet. They turn abruptly by moving the ball charge. In this way they are led into the eddy currents, which are located throughout the space and make use of them. A change in direction in the movement of a spaceship may appear as a sudden 90-degree turn or as one of the unpredictable maneuvers, which are so often attributed to UFOs.

Another factor that must take account of the designers of our craft are, the multi-wall construction, on the one hand fair security purposes and the other part is required as a space for a large part of the drive gear. It requires at least two charged walls. The outer wall is negatively charged in direct contact with the protective force field that is created around the ship. This electromagnetic force field ionized by its nature all matter particles near the surface of the spacecraft and space debris invites all negative on who comes out of his sphere of influence. The higher the amount of energy is, the more it expands the influence of this field from the ship.

A positive reference field is in an inner wall; remains the central part of the ship in a neutral potential.

Also, an automated filtering and air-conditioning system is important, which is installed between the walls of a vessel in order to purify the air and keep the temperature and pressure in the space ship in a pleasant state to all persons on board.

In fact, the difference between our modern space ships and submarines, which can move both on the water surface where the pressure is low, and at great depths where the pressure against the vessel is very high, low. In any depth, a submarine can be moved freely without its occupants davontrgen therefore harm or discomfort. In exactly is it a spaceship. In the space of bearing down on them, pressure is low. When they enter the ionosphere of a planet and move towards the planet, the pressure intensifies. But where it is, it can move freely without harm or discomfort to its occupants.

As our U-boat captains have become familiar with the many currents beneath the surface of the ocean, so our space captains, the magnetic lines of space and the learned between a planet and its ionosphere. Temperatures, flows and currents vary continuously in recurring patterns in the entire cosmos. This space flows are used as roads, and the energy they generate will have to be converted into motive power, if we ever travel safely and enjoy our interplanetary relations with our neighbors on other planets like. ”

5. ANALYSIS OF ADVANCED CIVILIZATIONS

The identification of an unknown technology, our superior civilization on another planet means the body such as the moon for us, certainly an interesting challenge. Everything with which we are unfamiliar, is difficult to identify. Therefore, we see a lot of artificial objects on the surface of the moon. Also, our preconceived ideas and outmoded theories taught us for centuries and have been pounded into our minds, greatly contributed to our inability to understand such things. We can say that we see it, but there should not be there, we also believe not simply that it exists.

Maybe that's why so many pictures of the moon in many different publications have been published showing clear signs of life on the moon, not only primitive, life-like mosses and lichens, but also shrubs, trees, grass and even a lot of man made facilities. As seen, most of us can not, what is in these pictures, or simply do not have the time and since most of the top scientists, it is for fear of jeopardizing their position, dare not, in some cases, all these photos today almost forgotten .

For me it is quite obvious that the artificial objects, UFOs and intelligent structures were allowed to stay in these photos, so if unveil future developments and research, because what goes on up above, you may find the officials say, and quite innocently, "Well We gave it freely, but we did not know what it was. "In my view this would be the smartest way to save face.

We must realize that not every advanced machine must be complicated. Often facilitate higher technology equipment effectively, their form and their drive. However, there is no doubt true that mechanical progress of a higher civilization by their unlimited maneuverability is achieved in the air. Vehicles of all types and sizes for every conceivable purpose, driven by a sort of free energy, such as the electromagnetic drive force needed to cargo, food and

To transport personnel. Roads and highways will be unnecessary, and something is not on the moon to discover. What to see but streets and is very similar to tunnels and large pipe systems seem to be, who are perhaps under pressure and be used for purposes of mining. Traces of vehicles, which roll up and down the hills over the ground, have been photographed. As far as I can tell, these seem large vehicles twenty-three feet in diameter in the lunar soil for future mining opportunities to study through. The traces left by these vehicles show signs of definite impression of a tracked vehicle type (see Figures 22 to 26).

Even in advanced civilizations, have complete maneuverability in the air, soil samples must be taken of vehicles with ground contact. One must also make clear that we in many ways our technology can not compare with the other on a planet. Although I'm sure that some similarity exists, but like all other inventions for transportation, agriculture, housing, etc. have been developed that go far beyond the comprehension of most people on earth.

Progress never stands still, not even for a more advanced civilization, for the - I'm convinced - the same as there is a need for us to evolve even higher.

An example: Seventy years ago we were building airplanes out of wire and cotton

38 FRED STECKLING and GLENN STECKLING

cloth, and today we are flying machines, the early airplane models hardly

Fig. 23. NASA photo. Lunar Orbiter V. objects roll down on the moon craters and hills and up. The large object has a diameter of about twenty-three meters in the interior of the crater Vitello.

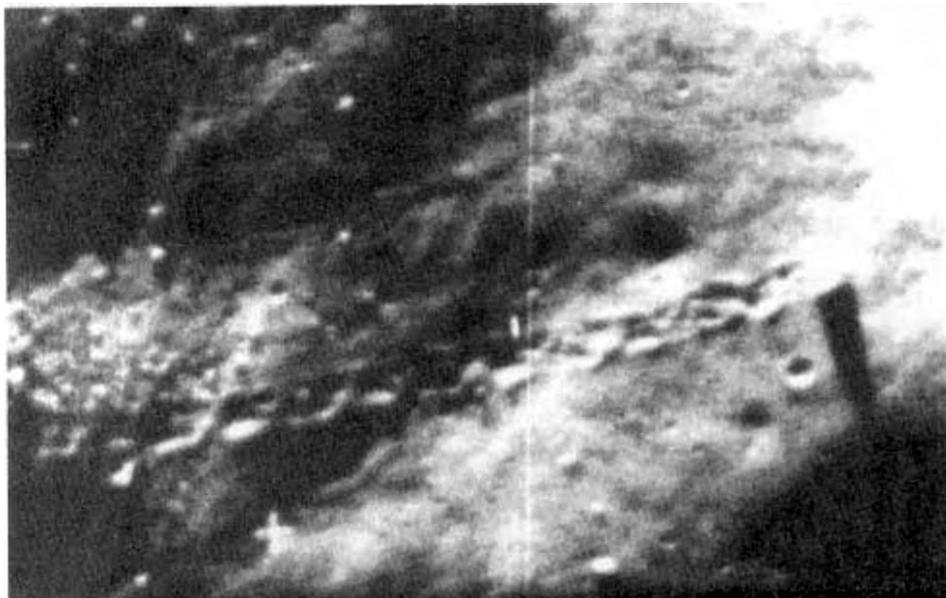

Fig. 24. LO V NASA photo, no 67-1-1-1135 (enlargement). The small object, 4.6 meters in diameter, rolled about 370 meters up the hill and down or similar. The same as you came to be applied to other transport modes. In just eighty years have seen our world-technically - has completely changed. We must learn to look for signs of higher technology on the moon, and because of the photographs. presented in this book, mu ft give even the most conservative reader that something unusual happened there above.

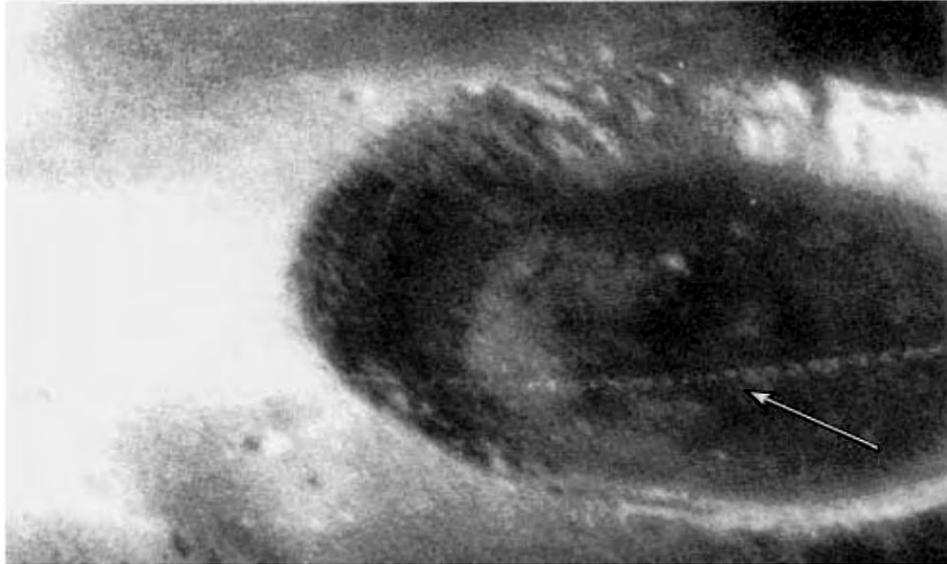

Fig. 25. Apollo 16 Photo No.: 16-19067 (enlargement) Photo by NASA. About forty-eight km impression straight tracks running up and down the hill and leave marks that are identical to those in figure 23. Moon back.

It would be the height of absurdity to say simply that, because there seems to be there, no motorways, with its mile-long traffic jams, smog, and a poisoned atmosphere, where nobody lives. Someone moves things on the moon back and forth. We need to find out why. One reason may be the mining industry. According to NASA, the moon is very rich in minerals and metals with nearly unlimited resources. Several areas on the moon may also be used by aliens to observe the Earth. I would think that this is an excellent place for them to study our development and progress, while they themselves remain out of range. Apparently it can be said that the moon is not like the earth and its living conditions have to be very hard in some places, but I'm sure how many of NASA photos, that there are several areas on the moon, where life is possible It is not only for plants but also for animals and humans.

Our assumption that man can not live in an environment that is different than on Earth. does not seem to resist. At 31 Photographed in July 1952 an Italian engineer, Gianpero Monguzzi in the Italian Alps a UFO that had landed in the snow. Monguzzi was only 90 meters away from the spacecraft, and he managed to make six photos of them. A human figure walked around the landed spacecraft, she wore a pressure suit with a backpack and antenna, resembling so much of our astronauts who walked around only seventeen years later on the moon (see Figures 27 and 28). Logic tells us that this UFO pilot, from wherever he may be, must have come from a planet with either higher or lower than atmospheric pressure, we have him here on earth. This proves that life as we know it is possible elsewhere, even though the environment may be different.

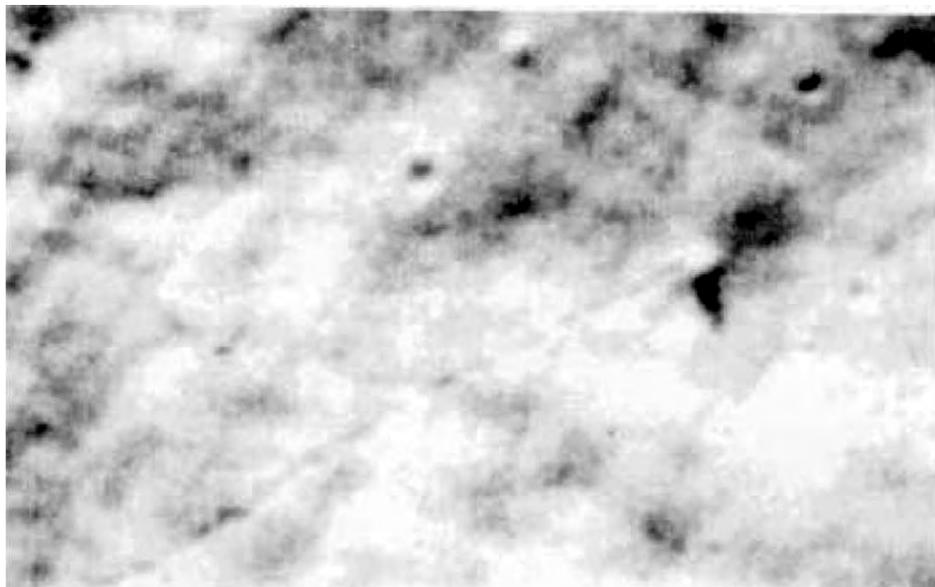

Fig. 26. Figure 25: LO V NASA photo, no 67-1-1-1135 (enlargement). The small object, 4.6 meters in diameter, rolled about 370 meters up the hill and down

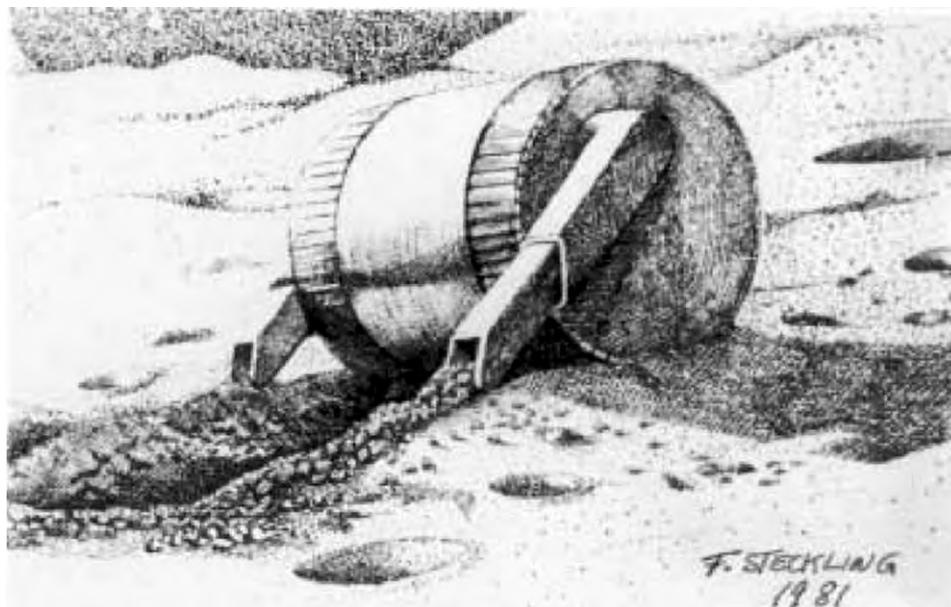

Fig. 27. Figure 26 (sketch by Fred cuttings): The idea of the author, what could the rolling objects in the images 23 and 24. A kind of Mining or ground vehicle investigation unit?

The Erdastronauten on the moon had a pressure of 0.35 kg / cm in their space suits, what about, I guess, the twin pressures of the Moon meets. If the UFO pilot who was shot by Monguzzi, the moon, as his pressure suit would probably not contain more than 0.175 kg / cm pressure. That is approximately one sixth of the earth pressure or 16 millibars.

In my search for large buildings and hangars on the moon I was there primarily to the "dome type." I realized quickly that even we on Earth, the effectiveness and strength are recognized by dome structures. We built mostly in harsh environments such as Arctic stations, but more recently, in family homes. The dome is climatically be controlled with greater efficiency than any other construction. The even know the Eskimos, and they heat their igloo very effectively with the force of a single candle. The igloo is a dome of ice and snow. On the Moon, a plethora of such coupling was observed. For example, in Darwin Crater, east of the crater Copernicus to find a whole group of domes and a few dozen of them at the base of the wall and straight at the heart of many unnamed crater on the side of the moon (see Figures 29 to 34).

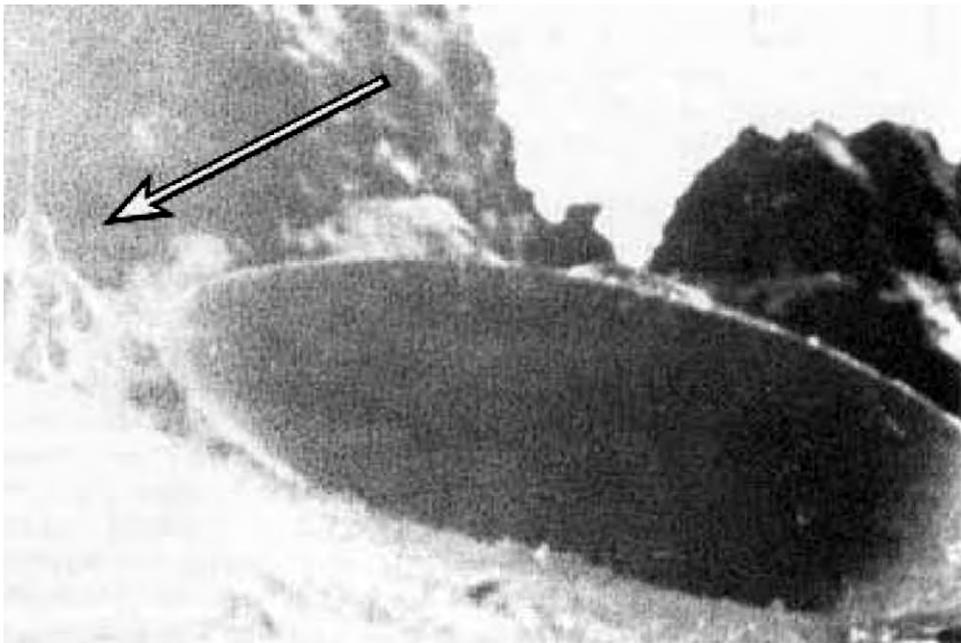

Fig. 28. An alien spaceship landed high in the Italian Alps. Note the UFO pilots left in the photo, wearing a pressure suit, backpack, helmet and antenna. Taken by G. Monguzzi 31 July 1952.

One can only speculate why some craters to be found in domes and not in others. The answer could of course easily accessible groundwater and possible mining. In the mountainous regions of the world are usually the settlements - built in the valleys - with some exceptions of course. In fact, most of the valleys on the lunar crater floors, and here we find all kinds of objects and structures, which due to natural causes should not be there. On the side of the moon are in and near the crater King to see many domes. Studies suggest that in the area of the crater King intensive mining is operated. It seems that large appliances dust swirling in the air as they grind the mountain sides and terraces. The domes can be found at the bottom of the crater, miles away from the mining operations (see Figure 35).

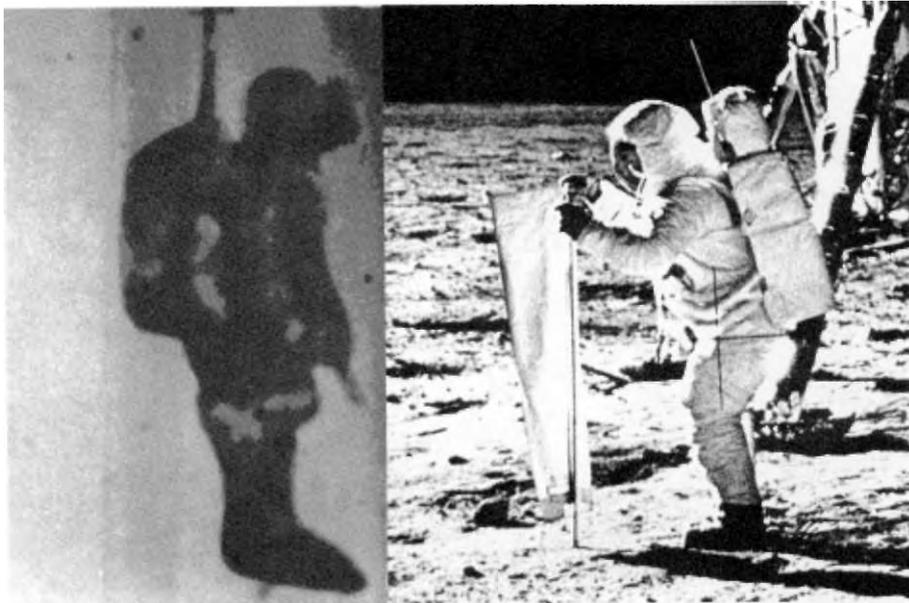

Fig. 29. The UFO pilot and an American astronaut in comparison. Both are wearing space suits, and both are people who live, but in different environments.

NASA reported that the mineral wealth of the moon is made of iron, magnesium silicate, aluminum silicate, and many other elements. The most abundant element is oxygen, about forty weight percent of the lunar samples. The oxygen is incorporated into chemical compounds with other elements. Silicon makes up about twenty percent, aluminum, titanium and iron together as fifteen percent. With this wealth of available materials, it should not be difficult to construct anything on the Moon by giant domes and hangars for machinery and up mile-long spacecraft. NASA plans to continue to build colonies in space. Huge, over thirty kilometers long cylinders are made entirely from materials that are to be mined there on the moon from Earth people. Ground missiles are the devices that are used to bring the container with the minerals and metals in the lunar orbit. Here it must be taken by our spaceships for the construction of the space colony. The idea and the technology are available. Only the missing funds.

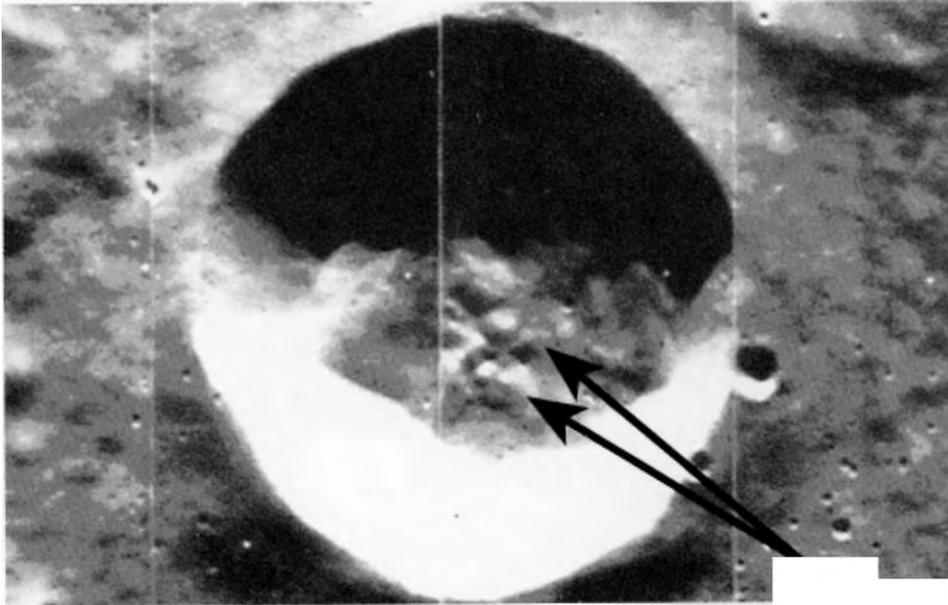

Fig. 30. NASA's Lunar Orbiter photo IV, No. 168-H3, moon back (enlargement). Two domes on the crater floor g3

But there are other issues that occupy the space sociology experts. How will people cope as above? One can only guess how far our civilization would have progressed, it was not for the money and the wars that we, as it seems, every time we have taken two steps forward, one step back cast.

Demonstrated recently at the University of Arizona conducted research on hydroponics, why is there little or no evidence of open arable farming on the moon. It seems that a kind of hydroponic cultivation technology is unquestionably part of an advanced civilization, since the method is more efficient than conventional farming. The experiments in Arizona show that vegetables, grains and fruits can be grown without soil altogether with a yield increase of 500 percent compared to conventional farming in the open field.

While the "open-field methods" of the United States compared to the productivity of other nations are undoubtedly highly efficient, so the cultivation leads to an open field on a large scale, as it is operated in the United States, unfortunately, with absolute certainty to the fact that large areas are turned into dust bowls. If the natural ground cover is once plowed under, the bare soil is blown away by the wind. hydroponic cultivation methods in a controlled environment producing high yields permit regardless of weather conditions, rain and temperature fluctuations. Farmers develop forward field workers to highly trained scientists. The results of the experiments indicate that ten thousand people could live on only four thousand square meters of hydroponic cultivation. If you were to apply this method to the moon with its mineral-rich soil, it could be unspeakably many people just a hydroponic farm under a dome of one kilometer in diameter are malnourished.

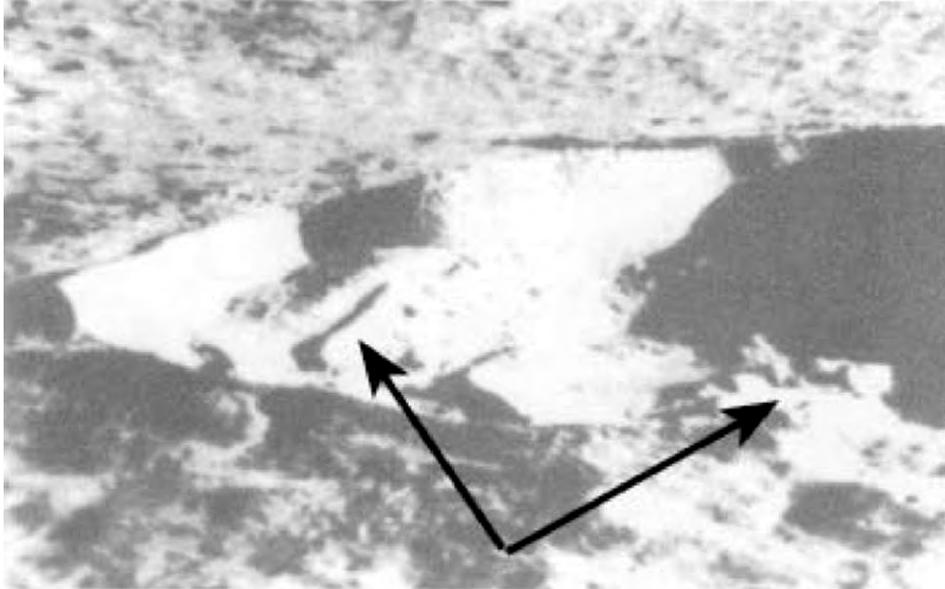

Fig. 31. NASA Luna. Orbiter 111, Photo No. 67-1-1-201 (enlargement). Close-up of the crater Kepler in Oceanus Procellarum. Notice the three domes on the crater rim to the right photo. Pay attention to the left ridge of the crater, which appears to have been cut or edited. Kepler has 32 kilometers in diameter:

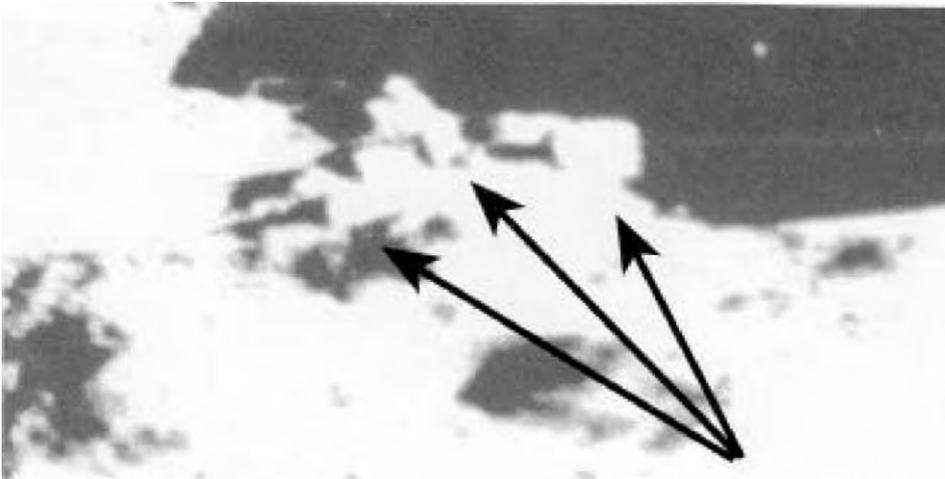

Fig. 32. NASA Luna / 'Orbiter III, Ne 67-H-201 (enlargement). The three domes in the center of the crater Kepler closely. You are really on a large platform at the edge of the crater.

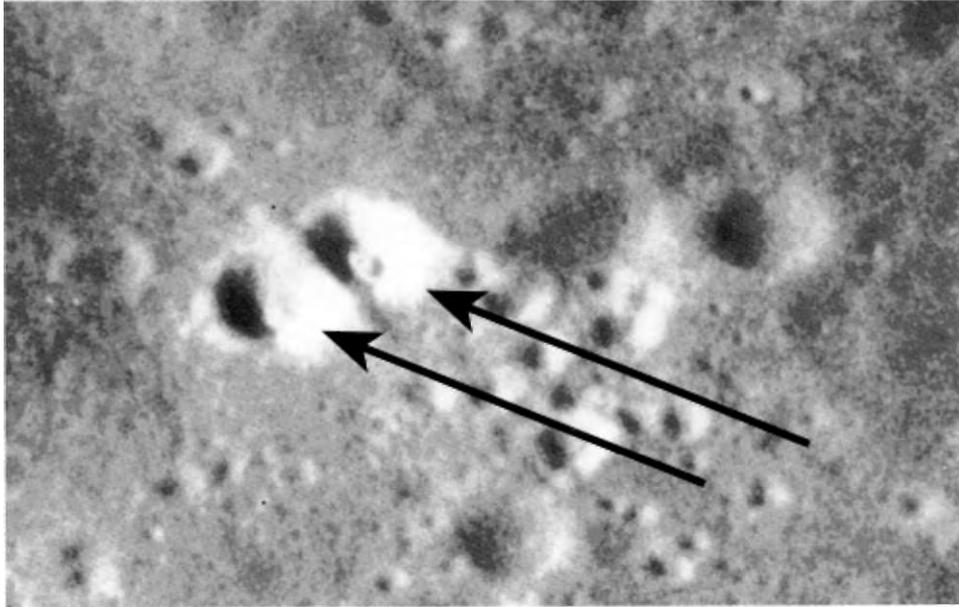

Fig. 33. Apollo Hasselblad Photo No. 16-19081 (enlargement). A double crater with two dome-like structures or objects. Note the long object between the craters.

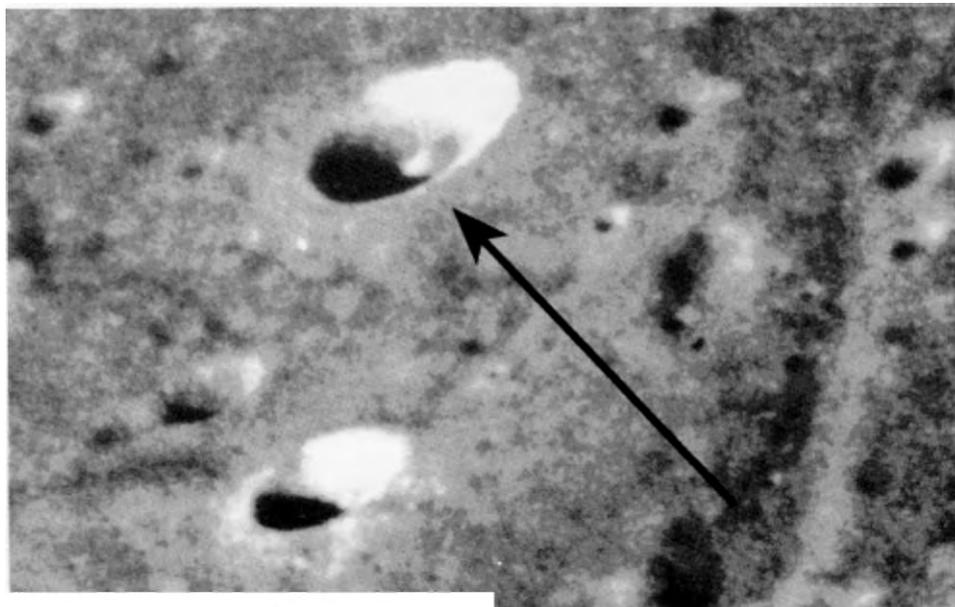

Fig. 34. Apollo 14, Picture No. 14-10116 (enlargement). The photo shows a white dome in the crater.

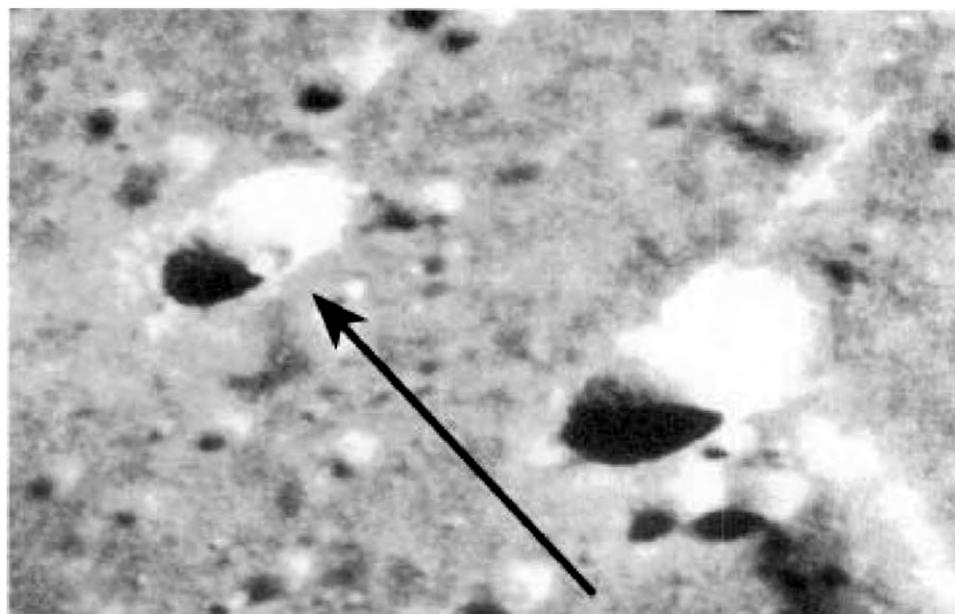

Fig. 35. Apollo 14, 14-10116 Ne Photo (Ausser i mittvergrerung). Even a cupola.

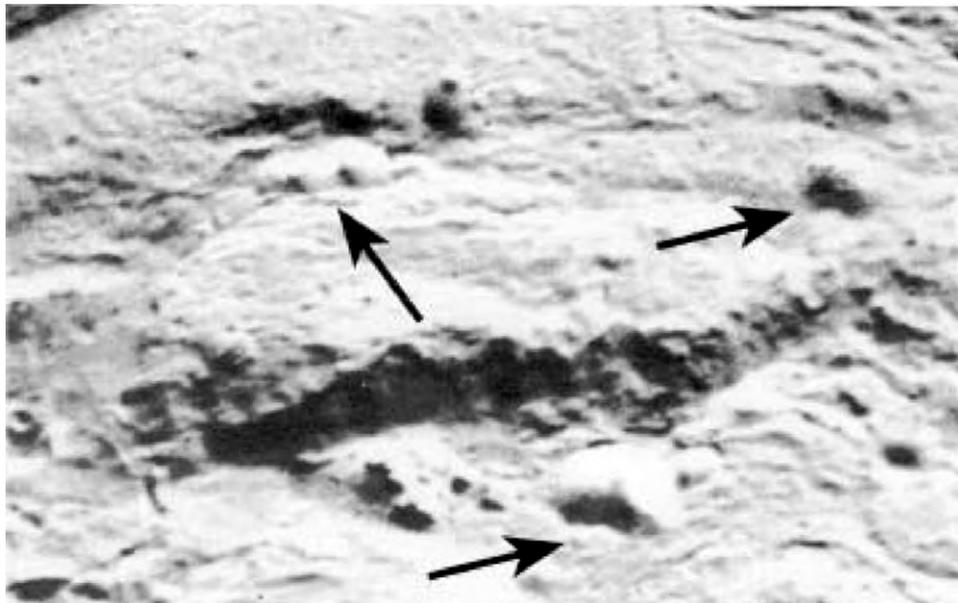

Fig. 36. Apollo 16, 16-19229 Ne Photo (enlargement). "The Domes" as they call NASA. Area around the crater King. The large dome in the center seems to be a double dome. (Moon back).

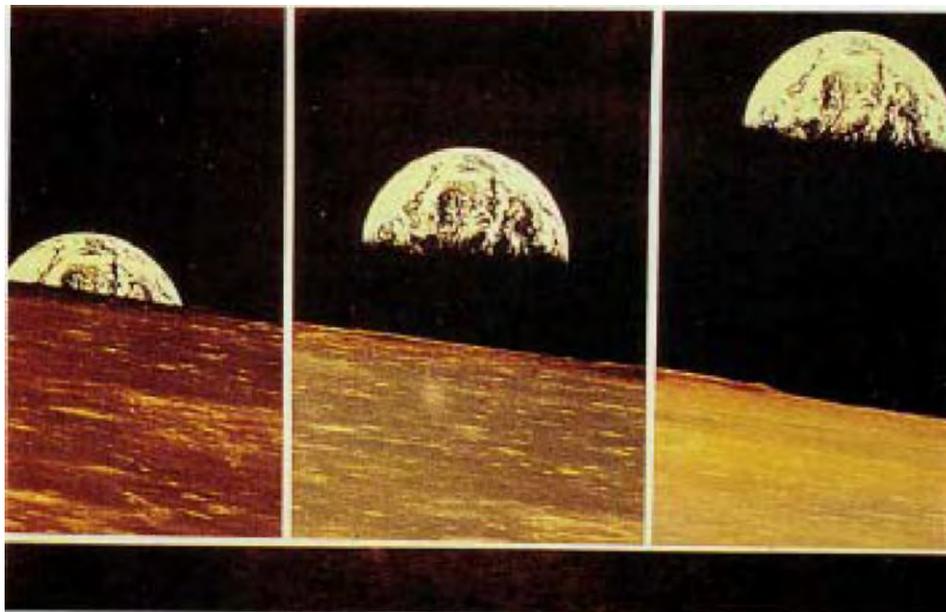

Fig. 37. The Seen "rising" of the earth from the moon.

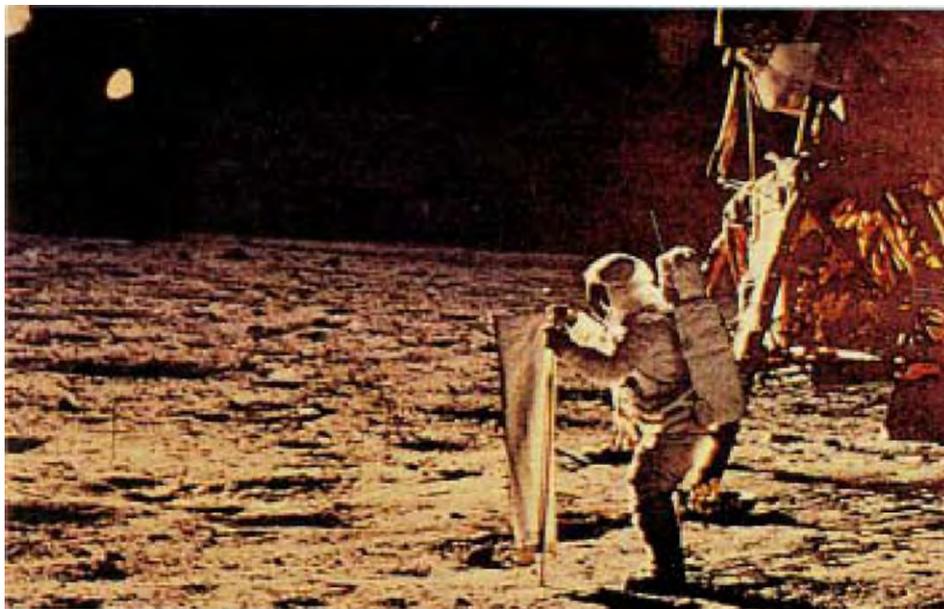

Fig. 38. Notice the objects left in the picture above.

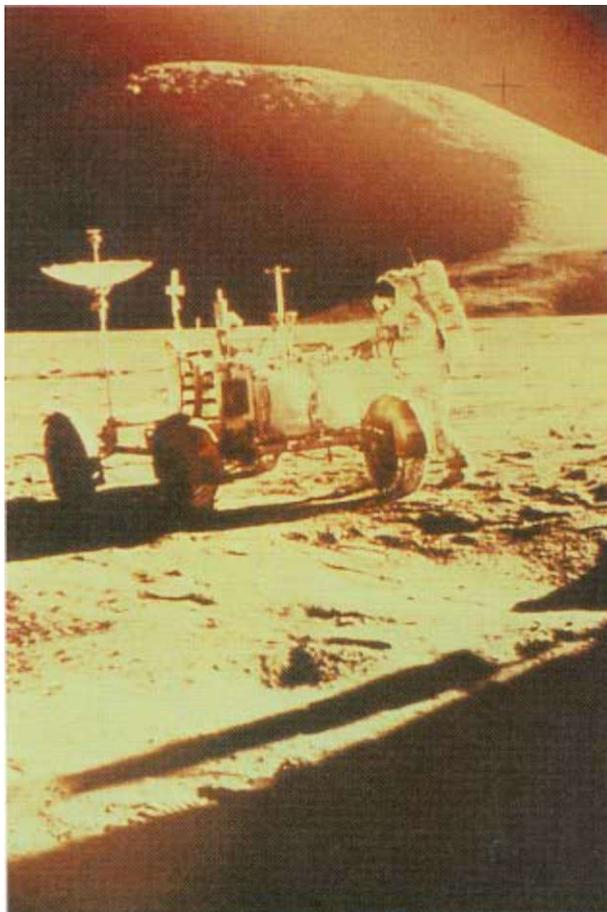

Fig. 39. lunar rover, which has been used in several Apollo missions to explore the lunar surface.

Fig. 40. Apollo 12 astronaut on a moon walk. Note the halo effect around the space suit, this effect is caused by prolonged space travel. People that the occupation of alien spaceships on Earth have seen reported on a similar effect.

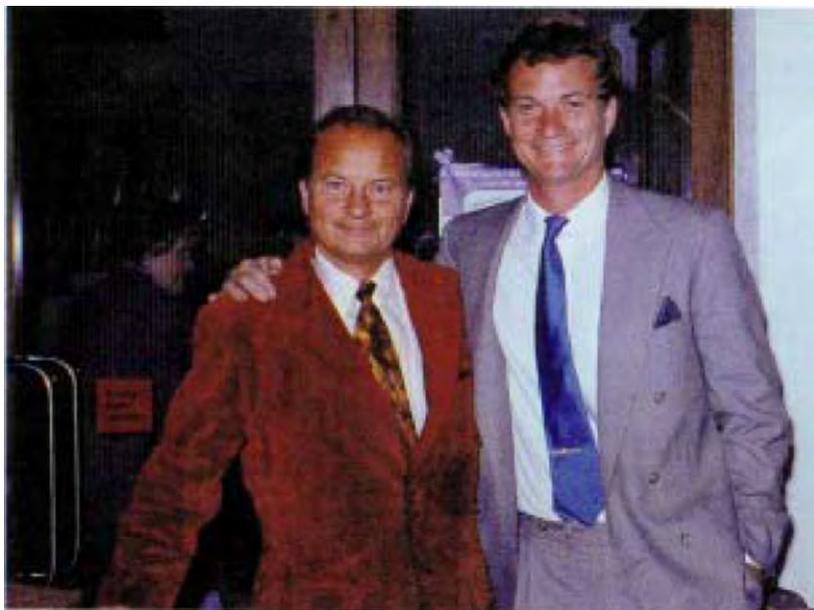

Fig. 41. The author of this book, Fred seedling (left) and his son Glenn, who updated the German-language edition and expanded.

6. NEW REPLACEMENT. OLD THEORIES OF CONCEPTS

The outdated view that the moon can not bear life without air and only a ball of dead rocks clearly need correction. In the past 15 years, the space research program of the United States in national and international press reports of new facts about the moon has revealed.

The magazine Time reported in the 24th edition front October 1969, that was found on the moon a detectable magnetic field. In the same article it was admitted that the moon has a thin atmosphere. Nuclear-powered instruments that the Apollo crews had installed there were, the atmospheric density.

The Washington Daily News on 6 December 1968 printed an article entitled: "Is the moon really is a dead world?" Reported astronomers have spotted geometrically shaped light pattern, a 80 kilometer wide opaque object, large white domes and long bridge-like structure at the base of the Mare cesium. . Scientists at the U.S. and the USSR observed a huge, oval-shaped, glowing appearance.

Another article in the Washington Daily News reported that the surface of the moon contains the same material as the Earth. Plants and seeds, vegetables like normal be drawn on the lunar surface, such as wheat, tomatoes, cucumbers and lemons, are stronger and greener than sibling plants that were grown in soil. The laboratory investigation of lunar discoveries in Houston, Texas, found that germination experiments in the lunar soil to hints that it acts as a food source.

On 16 October 1971 published a UPI press release in the newspapers of the world under the headline: "clouds of water on the moon, discovered" The water clouds broke forth like geysers from crevices in the moon's surface, thus demonstrating that the moon is a dead and inactive place both.. Apollo 12 as well as the Apollo 14 moon discovered geysers. The water cloud covered an area of over sixteen square miles. Funnily enough, they made these discoveries on the eastern edge of the sea of storms.

Dr. W. Freeman said: "The discovery of moonquakes, the outflowing gas and water means that the moon is not dead."

Astronaut Borman, who observed the moon through the window of his spaceship in orbit, made this astonishing discovery, which was published in the publications of NASA to the public. He said: "This looks like as below clouds."

The astronauts Pete Conrad and Allan Bean of Apollo 12 were playing in a respite on the Moon Frisbee with a metal cap, which had covered an experiment. The astronauts reported by radio that the air held the moon frisbee in the air. The former astronaut Brian O'leary reported that Frisbee event of Apollo 12 in the Ladies Home Journal of March 1970.

The next article, NASA published reports, from the experiences of Apollo 10: "Moon volcanoes sighted." United Press International reported on May 22, 1969. "Astronaut Stafford observed in one orbit of the moon in only one hundred five kilometers high two volcanoes. " One of them was black outside and white on top. The astronauts also reported from many different colors on the side of the moon and of many craters, their centers glowed. Glow only when the moon, "said astronaut Cernan.

In the February 1972 issue of National Geographic Magazine, a complete record of the experiences of Apollo 15 was read. On page 245 there is found that the moon has a magnetic field and actually create an atmosphere, albeit an extremely thin. Moonquakes and water vapor have been recorded by the instruments of Apollo 12 and 14. On page 250 it is reported that the astronauts of Apollo 15 is a whole series of small cone-shaped volcanoes discovered, were letting the gases from the interior of the moon. These sightings were made in the crater Littrow. On page 252 is that the astronauts of unexplained haze clouds and flashes of color in the crater Aristarchus and around him reported. On page 257 you can see a beautiful photograph of a brown moonscape. Incidentally, in this issue were many beautiful lunar photographs, in color and black and white, published. Some show on the vegetation-color photos as well as artificial structures in the interior of a crater. The backside of the moon is, it is reported, be gentle and lively. In fact, Apollo 8 brought many beautiful color pictures of the backside of the moon, showing him in direct sunlight in a rich brown, suggesting that this is the real color of brown. Apollo 8 was the mission of 21 to 28 From December 1968. Could it be that this comes from the brown vegetation in this winter season? Several other color photos of Apollo 8 proved beyond a shadow of a doubt that there is green vegetation on the moon. One can distinguish the brown color of the desert-like landscape very well by the vegetation that grows in shady areas of the wings and craters (see Figures 38 to 41).

This color photograph shows the existence of vegetation, although there are other, was in the book Footprints On The Moon by Associated press releases.

Finally, the report geography on page 260, that the crew of Apollo 11, the three days spent on the moon, the satellites could not bare and desolate, but, as she expressed it, "dynamic and beautiful."

Radio astronomers, the cool Ve r studied clown around cosmic dust in space with microwaves discovered clouds of complex molecules composed of many compounds of the basic atoms such as carbon, oxygen, hydrogen, nitrogen and other existed.

This proves that the basic "life molecules", the DNA already in the clouds between the stars there are, the clouds from which new solar systems are formed. The seeds or germs of life are already there and need only the appropriate circumstances, uni into complex life forms to develop, according to the size of the pressure and the temperature of a planetary body.

The atmosphere of each planet, including our moon must be enriched with such molecules, which are combined into more complex life forms when they are called by the laws of nature to do so.

1977 was discovered in observations of more complex molecules in space, the occurrence of "Cyanotriacetylen." This is the largest organic chemical molecule that has ever been discovered in space, and differs only slightly from one of the amino acids, which in turn produce proteins, nucleic acids and genes .

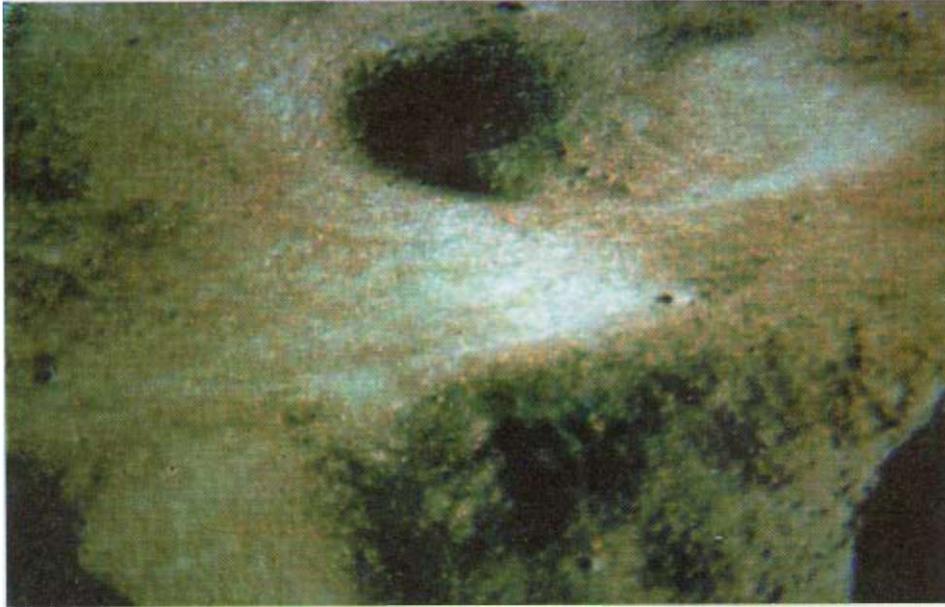

Fig. 42. Photo of Apollo 8 (enlargement) of the side of the moon, which shows the original color green vegetation.

This new discovery came from the famous astronomer Sir Fred Hoyle and his colleague Professor C. Wickramasinghe. In the book, Birth of a Star, the two astronomers in their observations grasped these words: "The story begins with carbon granules, sooty particles that are coated with ice and stick together in tiny pieces of interstellar material. This is more than pure conjecture, because grains of this type have been found in meteorites that contain organic molecules themselves. Such small dust grains are the ideal place for the slow emergence of complex molecules. In a cloud of gas and dust grains in space, atoms must collide from time to time with a speck of dust, and as a carbon Eiskorn provides the ideal surface to bind an atom. Thus, if no other atoms and collide with the same grain, they have the opportunity to react with each other and to form molecules. From time to time, like collisions with other grains or the impact of energetic particles, cosmic rays known to cause the molecules to emigrate until they collide with another molek-verkrusteten particles and thus enable simple molecules to form little by complex systems."

These newly discovered facts show us that life, even so we think, to know it, probably to be found everywhere in the cosmos.

We see that the seeds of life are already there and that organic molecules that are the foundation of life on Earth are found everywhere in the infinite cosmos.

In nature there is the urge to expand, often under extremely hostile conditions for our understanding. Perhaps it easier for us because of finite these new discoveries,

Fig. 43. The picture shows the true brown color of the moon's surface. Perhaps dry vegetation, much like a desert landscape?

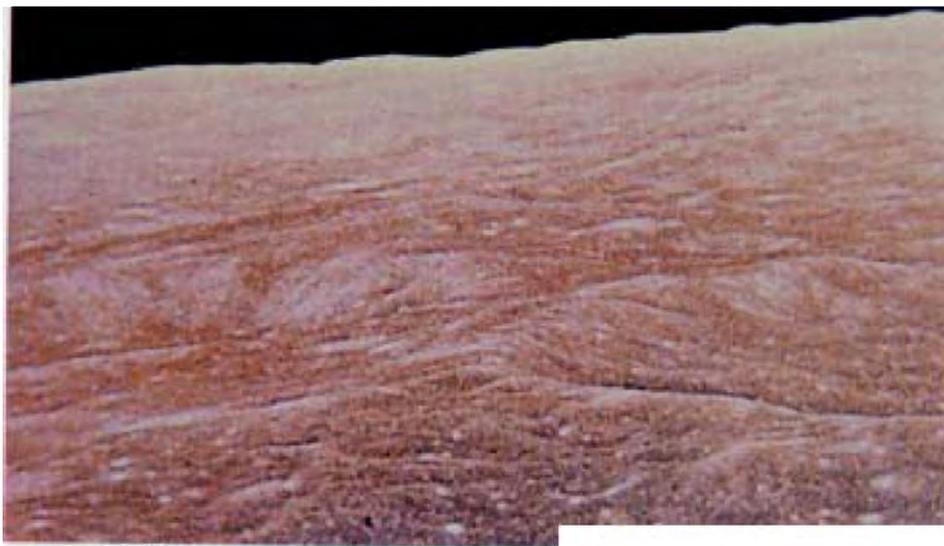

Fig. 44. Color photo of Apollo 8 from the side of the moon. The moon on the original color appears in full autumn colors. Note the clearing in three rows near the edge of the largest crater on the right.

Fig. 45. The true brown color of the moon's surface. Perhaps dry vegetation, much like a desert landscape?

to accept the idea that our moon is alive and well.

7. THE TRUE COLORS OF THE MOON

The analyzes of many color photos of the moon appear the effect of earthshine photography show. In this case, when taking the near side of the moon is the reflection of the moon during Erdscheins ten times as bright as the moonlight that reaches the earth. Unfortunately, however, the earthshine on the moon just a cold blue reflex that makes it impossible to get good color pictures, even if the light is sufficient. Also, color photographs appear in the pristine overexposed sunlight when they are taken vertically from the space ship in orbit, because the rich composition of the lunar soil, high albedo (reflectivity) has. The true colors could be better detected immediately after sunrise and just before sunset, but even on the earth appear color photos that were taken around midday in desert regions, faded. It simply exists too much light reflection.

Some scientists have accused the astronauts to have committed many photographic mistakes, but I disagree with that. Our astronauts, all senior officers were, for all phases of the moon missions, carefully trained, especially for photography, because everyone wants to see good pictures. I think that if during these missions a few bad shots were taken, so that certain things should be hidden, for reasons that only the concerned official bodies are known.

For example, no Apollo crew reported that the color blue, although there are several color photographs have been published by NASA in blue:

If you have accused the astronauts made the mistake of using a AFILM for exterior shots to have, I disagree again. I think that these photos were taken with a blue filter over the camera lens. Test photographs that I made with a blue filter from the air show almost the same effect as those blue NASA photos. Unfortunately, I could not take it from a height of 160 kilometers, for in that case they would have looked just like those blue NASA photos. Nevertheless, my photographs provided the same result. The colors of brown fields, green meadows and Forests were all one mass of blue. It would be difficult for a visitor from another planet, in consideration of these photos make out vegetation on Earth, especially if it is not assumed here that there are any.

I think that all photographs, recordings, the astronauts were carefully planned and prepared. Few scientists have so trained eye as professional pilots. One can say that the astronauts were only following orders, and we should not fail to praise them for their excellent work.

In the book, Footprints Of The Moon , the astronauts reported a very bright earthshine and that the moon is like a small planet. Apollo 10 discovered only fourteen and a half kilometers altitude a landscape that resembles the desert and wasteland in the southwestern United States. They spoke repeatedly of brownish soil on the side of the moon. Apollo 11 reported by some strange white spots on the inner wall of a crater. These spots seemed to reflect light. While the colors were gray in the twilight, it was up in sunlight shades of brown yellow brown. Two minutes and twenty seconds before touchdown, they were slightly drifted. This would continue to slide the ship in twenty-three meters high and landed manually. This drift seems to be the effect of a denser, not as predicted lunar atmosphere to be.

To adapt to the appeal of one-sixth was no problem and seemed completely natural. This all Apollo crews reported that walked around on the moon. The lunar soil is similar to the color of cocoa. He almost looked wet, told the astronauts. This seems a lot of moisture in the lunar soil to him, as all the footprints of the astronauts were clearly outlined. The Italian scientist Dr. Maria found after the examination of the lunar soil and rocks, that if you bring everything on the moon water located at the surface, would be a fifty-foot deep ocean cover this completely.

8. GRAVITY AND ATMOSPHERE ON THE MOON

The exact composition and density of the actually existing lunar atmosphere as well as gravity factors that differ from the orthodox 1/6-Regel be accepted by the officials still held strictly confidential. Every effort is made to convince the minds of the uninformed public that Newton's gravity law and the theory on the airless moon are nothing but the truth.

Over the years my many insightful articles and a very good book arrived on his desk, written by engineers, hiring their own research. There is overwhelming evidence that the gravity of the moon on the surface at least sixty-four percent of Earth's gravity, that is three times higher than for the t4-theory. Due to this fact corresponds to the lunar atmosphere, about forty percent of Earth's atmosphere is so dense enough to sustain life.

In his most revealing book called Moon Gate, which includes previously undisclosed findings of the American space program, provides the core engineer William L. Brian 11 highly convincing mathematical revelations about the real gravity and atmosphere on the moon dar. Moongate was published in 1982, one year after the first edition of my book.

Mr. Boys Petersen, editor of the Danish magazine UFO CONTAUT, writes in the June 1985: "The stereotypical slow-motion speed of the astronauts on the moon was created, no doubt, by slowing the images before they are to television viewers around the world submitted, to produce the impression of low gravity. You must have practiced many times before they left Earth, but nonetheless did something John Young, which was probably intended hardly livable. He unexpectedly tried to jump high, but could reach only a height of about thirty-five centimeters. A bouncer of fifteen centimeters on the earth corresponds to a gravity of only one sixth as it is slotted on the moon, at least three meters.

Several times we have seen that the astronauts were able to walk fairly normal on the moon. That would be impossible in a gravity of only one-sixth, even if they bore a burden on his back, which would correspond to ninety kilograms on Earth. Every step she would whirl at least three meters in height and at the same time they would come forward at least fourteen feet before they could take the next step. Could not get the reflexes and the physical condition of a shaky old man, one would stumble into a gravity one-sixth, and never fall down like an astronaut Chas Duke, not even in a space suit. Just five and a half miles above the lunar surface was clearly a sound atmosphere, since objects were clearly visible by sight, and the sky was still clear. Occasionally clouds were visible. "

All this could not naturally occur in a vacuum. In a vacuum, so does Mr. Petersen, the majority of the equipment would not work, and all connections, where friction occurs, would freeze together quickly due to the lack of separating molecules. This would have made the same car of the Apollo moon gebrauchsunchtig if there were no air on the moon. Objects in shadow would reach such low temperatures that they would disintegrate when touched. During their missions, the astronauts talked about a lot of waving flags, fluttering cables and cords of experimental instruments. Apollo 16 finally used a stronger flag that could not blow in the breeze.

The scientist, Joseph H. Cater wrote the following opinion about the Apollo-16 mission: "This mission is now history, and the usual contradictions, or at least were at the sharp observers on TV obviously

Through mathematical calculations of the neutral point between the center of the earth and the center of the Moon Mr. Cater specific gravity of the moon at least 60 percent of the earth, as opposed to 16.7 percent, of which the orthodox science still emanates.

Mr. Daniel Ross, also an engineer, is the Public Interest Space Center (Wehraumzentrum for the public interest) in Walnut Creek in California. He presented the following revealing information: Comparison of discoveries in space by gravity mild moon, and the density of its atmosphere. (Note: The density of air is in meteorology seldom measured directly because it is the combination of three atmospheric properties-pressure, temperature and humidity. Nevertheless regularly take the pressure and density in the troposphere with height. For simplicity, we can say that the density of air is a relative measurement of the pressure, if we keep this in mind that according to the temperature and moisture variations are local. But with the substantial gravity and atmosphere of the moon if they were only small differences, and the density would depend on the height.)

Sources:

Brian W. II: Moongate

Showed that the gravity of the Moon is 64 percent of Earth's gravity. This calculation showed, along with other data point to a dense lunar atmosphere, but there was no value to be determined.

George Adamski: The interior of the spacecraft and lecture in 1965 Noted that a visitor must pass through on the Moon a 24-hour pressure adjustment to adjust to the atmospheric density of the moon to adapt to, as he said, about 1 kg / 1 cm<sup>2</sup> - nearly forty percent of the density of Earth's. Either he knew the value of gravity is not, or he did not announced.

Herbert Riehl: Introduction to the atmosphere

In the South American Andes and in Tibet, the human living area extends up to an atmospheric density of 0.6.

NASA and the orthodox science say: The moon has one sixth of the gravity and no atmosphere.

These worthless information can be ignored completely.

Table:

Earth Andes Moon (craters, Elevation 5333 m Levels)

Gravity A A 0.64 g

32 feet / sec 2 32 feet / sec 2 20 ft / sec 2

(9.7536 m) (9.7536 m) (6.0960 m)

10010064

Table 1. Comparison of acoustic frequencies for piston-cylinder problem.

Earth	Andes	Moon
1.0	281.0	280.81	0.07
0.1	876.0	875.74	0.03
0.01	2441.0	2441.0	0.0
0.001	4130.0	4129.3	0.16

Atmosphere 14.7 lb / in<sup>2</sup> 8.8 lb / in<sup>2</sup> 6 lb / in<sup>2</sup>
 Pressure (5.586628 m) (3.284 m) 2.2400 m)
 Density 1000 mb 600 mb 400 mb
 1006040

Conclusion:

We know that the people of Tibet mb and the Andes at a gravity of 1 g and at an atmospheric pressure of 600 live quite well and can work normally. Let's say, the inhabitants of the moon would be at a gravity of 0.64 g and live an atmospheric pressure of 400 mb. To live with a slightly lower gravity would require less force to counteract gravity. This required that less oxygen, the lungs were filled to normal. So that all things were considered.

If we were looking for, whether the ideas correspond to:

Air density of the Moon 400

= 66

Air density of the Andes 600

This corresponds exactly: Gravity of the Moon 0.64

= 64

Gravity of the items 1

and also:

Air density of the Andes 60

= 0.6

Gravity of the Andes 100

This agrees well with: air density of the moon 40

= 0.6

Gravity of the moon 64

The ratio of the atmospheric density of gravity is the same in the Andes and the moon. If people can acclimate to the Andes, then they could certainly also acclimatize to the atmosphere of the moon. The human lungs can adapt to both very low and very high pressure when the bill is not too fast is going on. An example that is quite familiar to us, are the deep-sea divers who are slow to adapt to the decreasing pressure when they return to the surface.

This flexibility would also apply to all other life forms, animals and vegetation. The conditions in the temperate zones of the Moon seem to favor surface water, lakes, forests and clouds, such as George Adamski in 1955 reported. The data also indicate that there is a natural planetary balance between the internal pressure of the moon and the atmospheric pressure outside.

The information from the book Moongate clarify for the author a lot of unanswered questions. It notes that seven publications and books on astronomy before the Apollo missions reported, the neutral point between the Earth and Moon befnde between 35 546 km and 40 561 kilometers, when the conventional one uses / 6 rule.

The large discrepancy with respect to the neutral point officially began with the announcement of the magazine Time , 25 July 1969. Time reported that the new position of the neutral point, as it was discovered by Apollo, befnde 70 027 kilometers in distance from the moon. Quickly followed by other publications, which contained similar preferences.

The edition of 1969 of the History of Rocketry and Space Travel (History of rocketry and space travel) also reported the neutral point would be at 70 027 kilometers. The Encyclopedia Britannica cites 62.79 thousand km. The book We Reached the Moon and 62,629 kilometers, the book Footprints on the Moon 61.18 thousand km. While the performances vary 48300-70027 kilometers, but a big difference with the previous notion that the applications under  $g$  was obtained and the neutral point 1/6-Regel 32200-40250 kilometers away from the moon stipulated.

If we calculate the gravity of the moon on the basis of new findings, it is about sixty-four percent. A man of a hundred pounds weighs 16.6 pounds on the moon, as previously thought, but at least sixty-four pounds. This allowed could be that the moon car drove so fast and turned at such a high speed in such tight circles, which would be in a gravity one-sixth have been devastating. Mr. Brian concludes that the high gravity of sixty-four percent holds a thick atmosphere, clouds, and brings forth vegetation and allowing life.

It might be interesting for the reader to determine that if the neutral point of 83.72 thousand kilometers away from the moon would be the gravity at the surface would be exactly the same as on Earth.

The atmosphere of the moon is very, very clean, because it contains much less water vapor and dust particles than ours. These particles may be in the diffusion of light through the atmosphere of the most significant factor. Due to the lack of oceans, which have long since dried up and because of the long days and nights produce the atmosphere of the moon very rarely strong winds as input to the earth and there. Because the ocean basins are dry, fill the densest atmosphere of this cavity, leaving the mountain heights essentially airless.

Moongate comes to the conclusion that the space suits worn by the astronauts really were unnecessary and were only worn for show. The higher gravity on the moon also meant that an entirely new technology could be used to bring back our Apollo spacecraft. The quantities of fuel that would have been required to withdraw this hot higher gravity of the moon can would have been astronomical, have therefore shown a weight problem and threw the whole project probably overboard. It is very likely that the new electromagnetic technology has been used since its discovery in 1965 also. From this perspective, the entire Apollo program was probably just a cover for a super-secret space program.

I think, however, that even if these new discoveries would not have been published, the calculation of gravity to one-sixth would have been sufficient to allow for life on the moon, if this  $1/6$  would have applied rule on the atmospheric density. A pressure of 166 millibars at the surface of the moon should, in combination with a lower gravity, also allow life on the moon.

It is a fact that there is still seismic activity on the moon. These activities produce enormous pressure, as did hot gases and molten mass beneath the crust. When this planetary body when it is much smaller even than the earth, no substantial atmosphere, possessed if not prevalent enough pressure and enough density on the outer side of the moon and thus neutralized the pressure of your interior, then this body would never have come. This is called the natural balance.

9. WATER, AND VEG CLOUDS ETATION

The fact that water exists on the Moon, was already established in the NASA publication, which reported on "sparkling water geysers." Based on the photographic evidence in this book will recognize the reader that not only natural lakes and ponds exist on the moon, but also man-made water reservoirs (see Figure 54).

During my studies I have found that large areas of the North Pole appear at certain times and certain places covered by clouds. Clouds are the product of condensed moisture that rises up from warm surface and condenses in height. For the formation of water clouds must exist on the ground moisture. The photographic analysis shows that the density of the cloud takes place at very low altitudes. I guess this altitude 600-1800 meters above the ground. It must be strange, indeed, to stand in broad daylight in one of the low-lying valleys of the moon and see shreds of white clouds in the black sky. It seems that the densest part of the atmosphere can be found on the moon in the valleys and near the so-called moon Kratem sea level. This law applies on the ground and it should also apply to the moon. The moon clouds that form at these low levels seem to keep the mountain side, just as the monsoon clouds over the tropical islands of the earth. Although heavy cloud formations are quite rare and apparently depend on the seasons, they still appear occasionally, mostly in the northern and southern hemisphere of the moon.

near the North Pole, there are several natural lakes on the moon. These appear in the photographs with a very black surface. Photographs taken from space taken up by the earth, in monochrome or even color, most of the lakes also show black. Because the sky is almost black on the moon, of course, all the lakes and look, in fact, all water surfaces in black on the moon.

On the back side is the lunar crater Tsiolkowsky. Our astronauts have this crater, "the lake" called. Its black surface looks just like a lake full of water, told the astronauts. Other vertical Close-ups that were made at various missions seem to show that the water in this lake is very shallow and very clear, because you can see the ground. Only when the sunlight reflects off the water appears, from the air, this is not black, but silver-white in the photographs. Figures 52-54 show some artificial reservoirs, which reflect sunlight. Aerial photographs, which I've done over Southern California show, water reservoirs, which are very similar to the moon. In California, these reservoirs can be used with reinforced walls for irrigation purposes.

The presence of surface water on the moon seems very reliant on the seasons, just like in the deserts of the southwest United States. However, oceans are not found on the moon, and when they should have existed for a long time, so they must be dried out. It's no secret that our solar system is old. Under these circumstances, it seems that smaller planets dry out before the larger body. In my search for vegetation on the Moon, which I also found I have not plowed or cultivated fields discovered. As mentioned earlier, would definitely hydroponics under those transparent domes significantly more productive. It has a lot of ground in the mountains of the moon to be present, particularly erdabgewandten on the page. Color photos clearly show the color green in the shady areas of brown-colored wings and craters, just like in the desert areas in the southwestern United States. While some color photos appear brown, others have to clear green color. One can only surmise that this is due to a change of seasons. We have to realize that takes place even on the moon, just as on Earth, a natural balance.

If there are water clouds and vegetation on the moon, then it is also reasonable to assume that there exists a kind of animal life. To maintain a natural balance, even a kind of animal life would be necessary. One wonders how life would look like under different pressure conditions. Here let a few Leute, writers as well as film producers of their imagination run wild.

I think we can say that living things do not change their geometric appearance significantly, if they live at higher or lower pressure than we are accustomed to on Earth. In our oceans, the fish that live close to the surface a very similar shape as the fish in the great depths. Even humans can safely dive to several hundred meters below sea level, if he is breathing a mixture of oxygen and hydrogen. One could repeat here, that man is not only the most adaptable machine in the universe, but that his place is the universe. Man is never bound, and everything you need in order to travel anywhere in the cosmos, is the technical knowledge.

In a recent scientific article, the scientists argued that surface water on planets with lower attraction strong as the Moon could not exist. They theorized that the water molecules rapidly due to the low appeal and because of the low atmospheric pressure would dissipate into space. However, this statement seems contradictory. Many dry river beds on the moon can assume that has existed here strongly flowing water. If the surface water was suspected as quickly disappeared in space, were it not for these riverbeds. The water takes eons to dig these riverbeds.

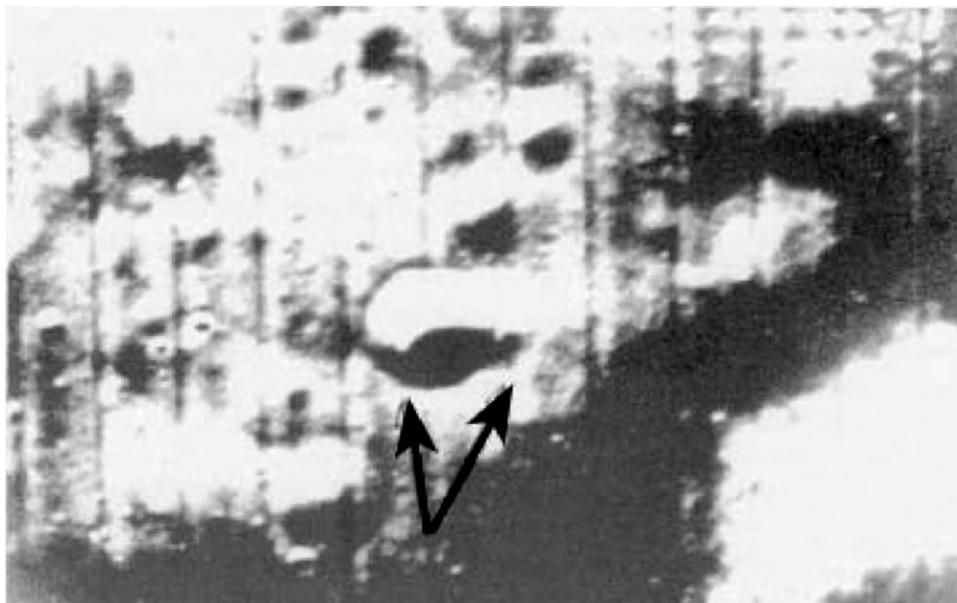

Fig. 46. Lunar Orbiter III (enlargement) of a crater, the two Crater walls in this show, which is located in the southeast of Mare Tranquillitatis

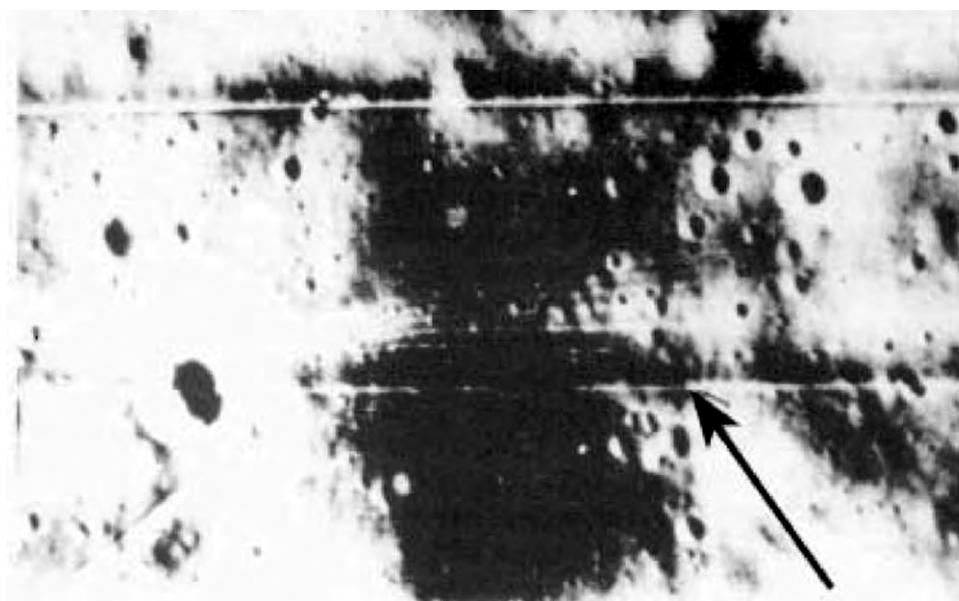

Fig. 47. Photo of Lunar Orbiter III (enlargement) of the same area as on picture 42nd The traces are clearly visible.

10. ANALYSIS OF PHOTOGRAPHIC IMAGES OF MOON

This chapter is written for the serious astronomers and scientists, but also for the serious amateur who is interested in detailed information on the locations of official NASA photographs in this book. The reader should know that a lot is on the side of the moon is still unnamed. In this case it is of course impossible to provide details on the location.

Picture No. 42 No. HR NASA LO III 006

Area: South of Maskelyn F, in the southeast of Mare Tranquillitatis.

Position: 34° 4' east longitude, 3° 1' north latitude.

Dimension: The whole picture shows an area of 13.6 km x 13.6 km.

Note: On the left you can see an area that emanate from the strange tracks. In fact, they go by a dome of the terrain. Note also the small crater southeast of this dome. The latter has the right and left in two formations, similar to two walls surrounding a reservoir.

Picture No. 43 No. HR NASA LO III 006

Area: Close to picture no 42

Note: The tracks are now clearly visible. They are like traffic signs in open space. These tracks are all out of the crater to the left and away from each other are so precisely that one can say with certainty that they come from a kind of vehicle. On the moon is intensively operated mines in order to examine the ground on its mineral content. The ground contact of a kind of soil testing equipment is inevitable.

Picture No. 44 LO V NASA No. MR 168

Area: Vitello crater and its surroundings.

Position: 37° 35' west longitude, 30° 20' south latitude.

Dimension: The diameter of the crater is about 50 kilometers.

Note: The mountain was in the middle seems to be a great way to cut his platform. Vitello is the crater, where astronomers have observed many strange activities. Many small dots and white lines appear on the bottom of the area and the lower corner of Vitello float. From the perspective of a pilot can see from these points and lines like fleecy clouds when flying high above them.

Area: Again Vitello and environment

Note: Again, this white formations that hang over the rugged mountains that surround the Vitello.

Picture No. 46

Figure 46a and

Area:

Position:

Dimension:

Note:

Apollo 8 NASA No. 8-12-2296 Tsiolkowski crater (Lake) 128° east longitude, 22 degrees south latitude about 250 miles.

NASA claims that the black mass is unknown in this crater, but that they must come from inside the moon. It seems quite obvious to be water, but as this would bring most of the scientific world, as amended, it is probably the best, as long as possible to delay publication.

Fig. 48. Picture No. 45 LO V NASA No. ER 168 2

Astronaut Aldrin of Apollo 8 commented: "When I looked into the crater Tsiolkow-sky, it reminded me of a mountain lake with calm surface and a small island in the middle." But Tsiolkowski does not seem to be the only lake in this area, recognized as other lakes in this picture are easy.

Figure 47 and Figure 47 Area: Note:

Apollo 8 NASA no unknown

Side of the moon, near the North Pole even a lake with water. Note the cloud formations north of the crater.

No pictures (Figures see pages 58, 59 and 60)

22, 23 and 25 LO V NASA No. HR 168 2

Area: detail of vitello-crater. Area at the foot of the central mountain

Position: 37 35 ' west longitude, 30 20 'south latitude

Dimension: the original image represents an area of 900 mx 900 m dar. Note: NASA calls these structures as rolling stones, the larger one is estimated to be 23 meters in diameter, the smaller just under five meters. However, reveal detailed studies of light and shadow, that these objects do not roll down, but rather up, they come here from the lower to the higher light shaded area. It is interesting to note that the top object emerges clearly from a crater, while the larger the slope of a crater crosses without roll down into it. Most unusual, however, are the traces left by the larger object. The patterns and impressions are exactly apart and look like stitches.

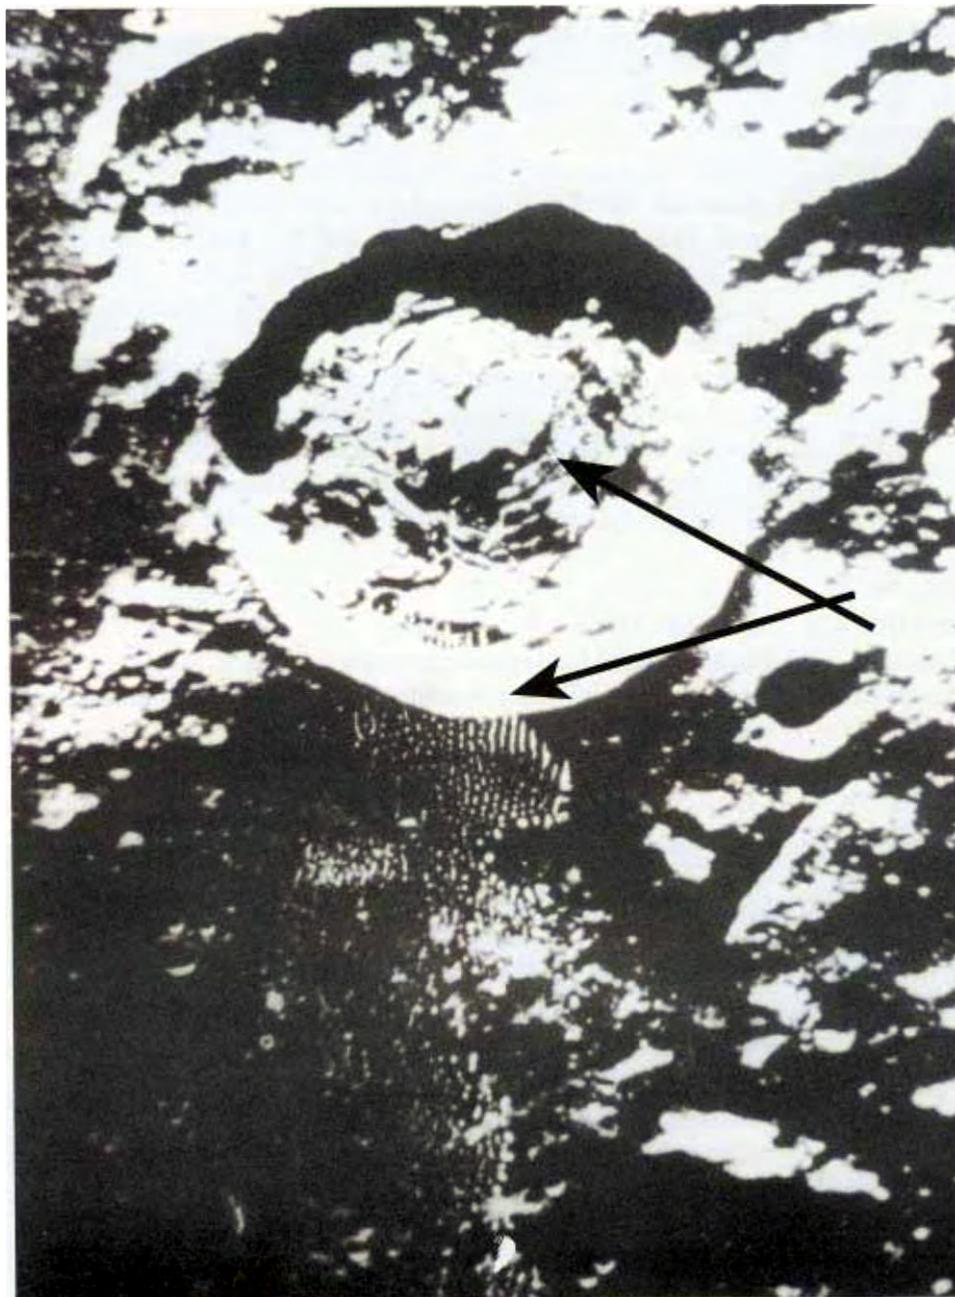

Fig. 49. Figure 44: NASA's Lunar Orbiter Ne MR 168 (enlarged). The crater Vitello. Note the fluffy clouds below Vitello. Watch out for the Platform in the center of the crater.

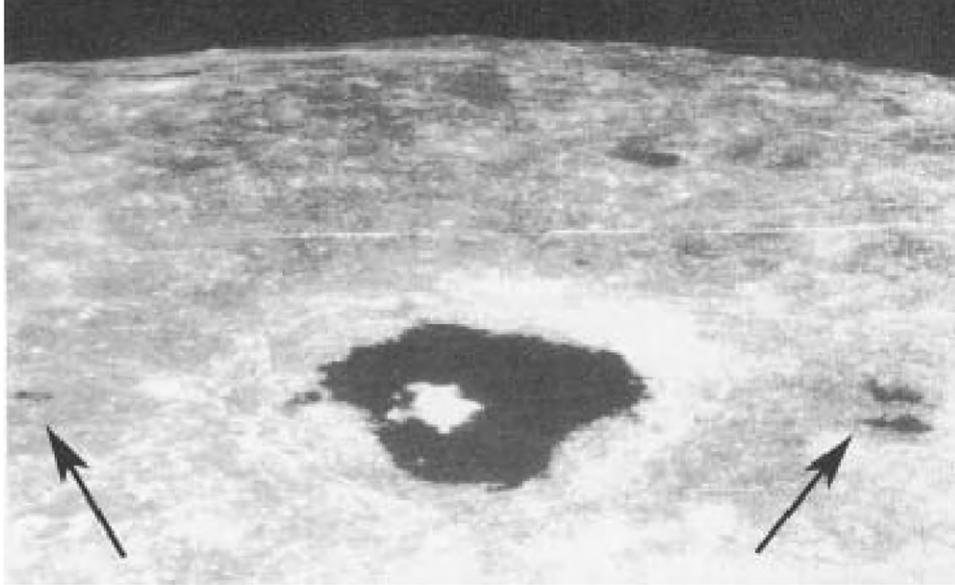

Fig. 50. NASA's Apollo 8 photo of the crater Tsiolkowski on the back of the moon. Note Be the large and small "lakes".

Picture No. 26 by the presentation of the author's larger vehicle or object. (see picture on page 60)

Picture No. 48 No. LO IV NASA HR 128

Area: Crater Plato

Position: 10 west longitude, 52 north latitude

Dimension: approximately 96.5 km

Note: the crater Plato and the surrounding area are located on the northern half of the moon. And it was also observed in the last 150 years, the place where professional and amateur astronomers, the highest activity. For example, flashing lights, glowing triangles, bright lines, as well as fog and clouds have been seen. The late American astronomer Dr. Pickering had seen something that he himself described as a "storm" that raged in the interior of the crater Plato.

The most striking feature in this picture are the two ponds or lakes with reinforced walls that resemble a watering system. They are triangular, one on the lower side of the picture, on the top, with an almond-shaped island (perhaps a pumping station?).

The very rough terrain is similar to water-bearing ravines with rich vegetation.

Picture No. 49 LO II NASA No. MR 213

Area: south of the crater Marius

Position: 50 40 'west longitude, 11 55' north latitude

Fig. 51. Figure 46a: The crater Tsiolkowski, taken by Lunar Orbiter V NSAS.

Note: Refer to the hill to the left of center, like a piece of cake was cut. The cut is perfect. Also, just over this hill a large dome, which casts a shadow to the left. Furthermore, the image on the right are some perfectly cut holes or craters.

Note: Two aerial photographs, made by the author of Southern California, USA, and the very similar with various irrigation ponds. reinforced walls show. The difference, however, that these two ponds are much larger on the moon and that it is not visible on the surface streets are, how they can be seen in the photos of the reservoirs in California. As described in Chapter 5, requires an advanced civilization, the perfect mobility in the air has, with few exceptions, no roads on their planet.

Pictures 52, 53 and 54:

Area:

Position:

Dimension:

Note:

LO IV NASA HR No. 151 3

The area northeast of the crater Aristarchus. The crater in the middle is called Warriors. 46 west longitude, 29 degrees north latitude. Warrior has about 80 kilometers in diameter. Note above triangular, Krieger five irrigation ponds or reservoirs, like the preceding in the pictures except for the fact that here the sun shines from the north, just at the right angle and the right height, so that its light reflects off the water, which on a black and white photo is white.

Picture No. 55 No. LO IV NASA HR 157 1

Fig. 52. Photo of Apollo 8 from the side of the moon, near the North Pole. Note the large lake in the top left photo. North of the lake clouds are visible, while at the shores of the lake ten objects are neatly lined up.

Area: The area west of Aristarchus

Position: 55 west longitude, 25 north latitude

Dimension: The whole picture represents an area of about 390 x 80 km dar.

Note: Two artificial plants, without doubt, bring out the nature of such things as not well-formed crater and this perfectly straight mountain or hangar, which is about 40 kilometers long.

Picture No. 56 LO IV NASA nr 161 3

Area: Prosper Henry Crater

Position: 59 east longitude, 22 north latitude

Dimension: The diameter of the crater is thirty kilometers.

Note: The picture clearly shows the existence of clouds on the moon.

Note the large white cloud that hangs over the lower crater wall. More clouds will be on the edge of the crater the next above Prosper Henry.

Picture No. 57 LO V NASA No. HR 103 3

Area: Mare Moscovience

Position: 140 to 150 east longitude, 20 to 30 north latitude.

Dimension: Approximately 160 x 100 kilometers.

Note: Re-clouds that float above the crater rim.

Mark 1: large long cloud

Mark 2: kaulquappenartiges structure marking 3 + 4: cigar-shaped objects

Picture No. 58 LO V NASA No. HR 81

Fig. 53. Figure 47a: The lake. Note the objects on its banks

Area: That part of the crater Ritter C

Position: 19° east longitude, 2° 30' north latitude

Dimension: 10 x 8 km

Note: These bright structures look like cone-shaped clouds on the edge of Ritter C.

Also note the lumpy, cumulus-like clouds in this picture.

Picture No. 59 No. LO IV NASA HR 182 2

Area: Crater Vasco Da Gama

Position: 85° west longitude, 15 degrees north latitude

Note: A white haze pillar rises almost vertically from the crater Vasco Da Gama.

Picture No. 60 The Apollo Metric 16-758, whose exact location is unknown is, once again shows the definitive proof of fog and low clouds on the moon.

Picture No. 61 In another picture, also Apollo 16-758, but northwest of the above described area is misty, seen on the left side of the crater to clear a large cloud, which holds close to the mountain side and full of shadows.

Picture No. 62 and

Picture No. 63 The Apollo pictures 14-10279 and 14-10280 show a kind

Mist, fog or cloud, the first of a large part of the crater and then covered 14-10280, 14-10279 on photo, free of clouds is the same crater. The time it took Apollo 14 to be closer to the next photo to approach must have been enough that the cloud could drift in northeast direction.

Figure 64 The photo of the Lunar Orbiter V, No. 187 H2 shows a large white

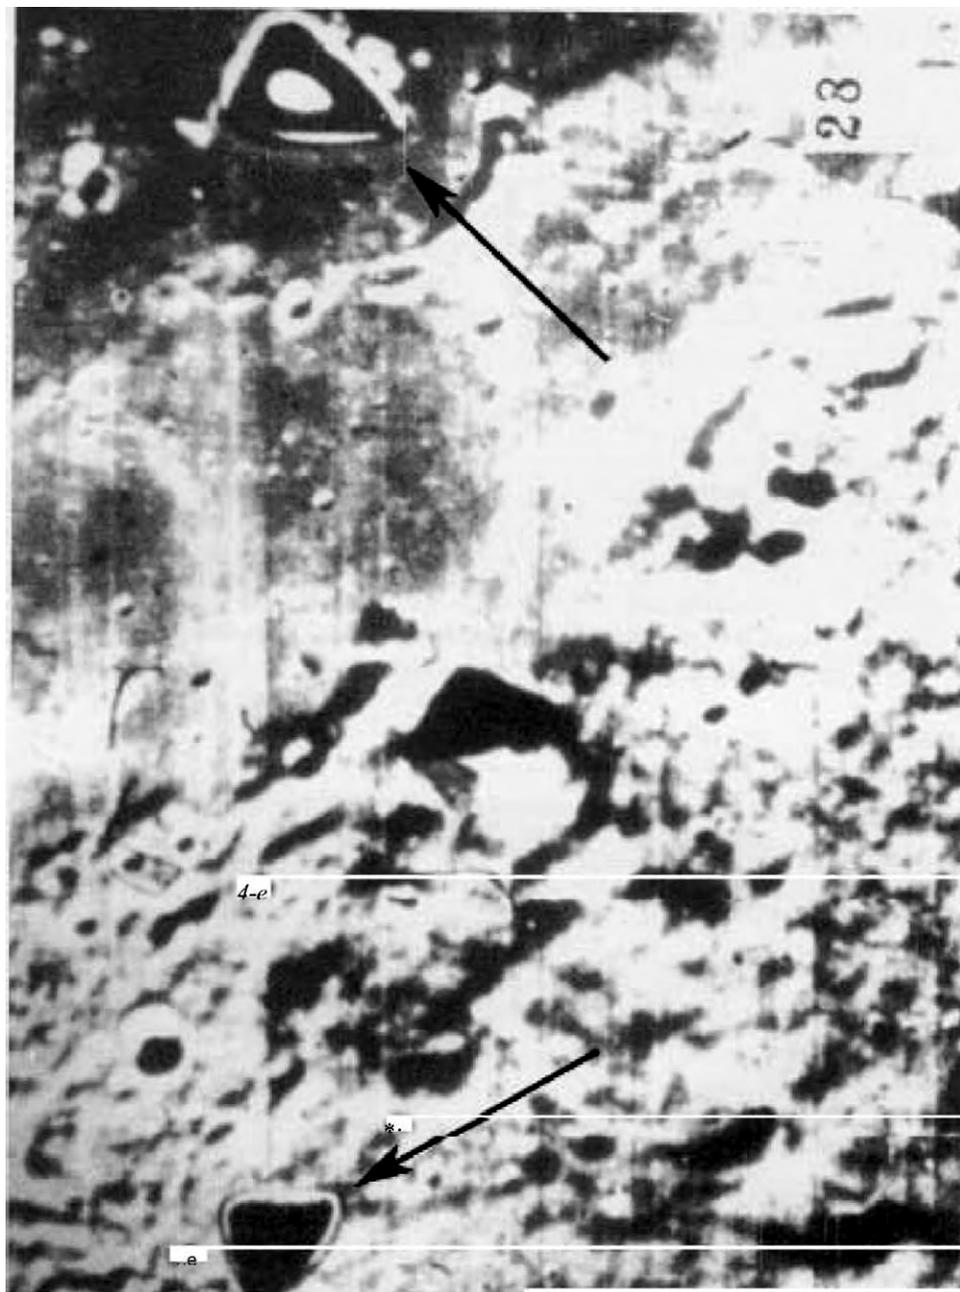

Fig. 54. NASA Luna / 'Orbiter IV photo No. HR 128 (enlargement), recorded in the vicinity of the crater Plato. Please refer to the two ponds or lakes above and below the picture that look like irrigation ponds. Also look out for the almond-shaped island in the upper lake.

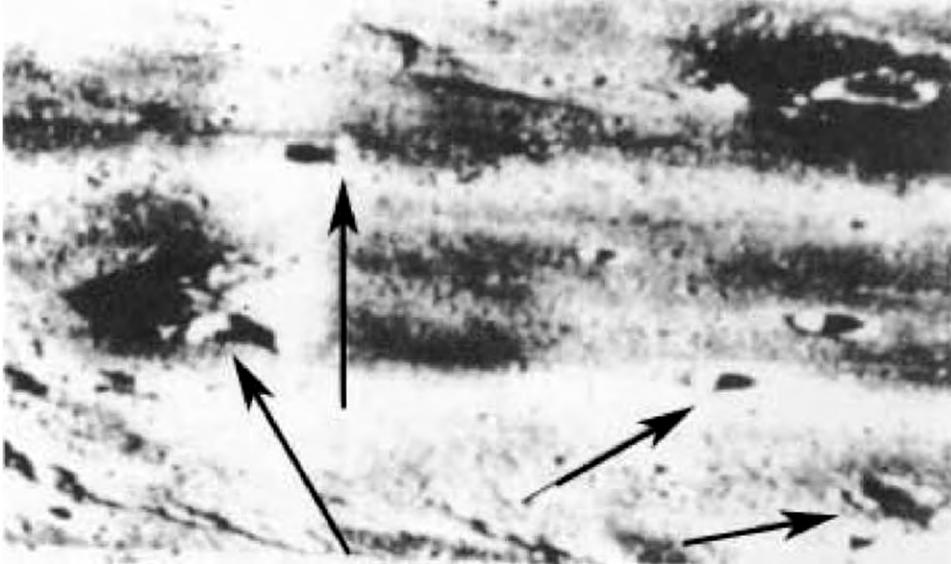

Fig. 55. Photo by NASA Lunar Orbiter 11, No. MR 213 (enlarged). Note that the hill on the left seems to be cut from the middle like a piece of a cake. Also look for the large radar dome-like over the hill, which casts a shadow to the left. Note the right of the picture perfect cut several holes (or crater?) And two oval objects.

cloud that half of the crater in the middle covered. The approximate location of this image is east of the Alpine valley on the moon. Another large oval cloud about a mile above the large crater could be a UFO because it is known that they operate within a clearly defined cloud of ionized air, or a force field. This image LO IV 187 H2 also shows the area east of the Alpine valley.

Figure 64a , the next photo of the same image No. LO IV 187 H2 is a direct recording of part of the Alpine valley, showing a large cloud in the valley.

Many of these photos were shown a retired Air Force colonel, of these clouds - identified and she showed me the pictures - independent of me.

Picture No. 65 No. LO IV NASA HR 127

Area: Western part of the crater Plato

Position: 10 west longitude, 52 degrees north latitude.

Dimension: Plato has a diameter of about 96.5 kilometers.

Note: (? Cumulus) clouds are heavy white law on this Area to see. This is not unusual in the area of Plato, since there is evidence for vegetation. Vegetation needs water to grow, while moisture evaporates and condenses into clouds, if the appropriate level is reached for the densification.

Picture No. 66 No. LO IV NASA HR 128

Area: again, the western part of Plato

Position: as in picture No. 65

Note: This photo was taken in the vicinity of No. 65, only to

Fig. 56. Irrigation pond with reinforced walls in California. From the author received from his plane.

Fig. 57. The same pond, the author added. Note the identical shape and identical appearance of these ponds with which 48th on the Moon picture a later time. Apparently enough time has elapsed to show definite changes in

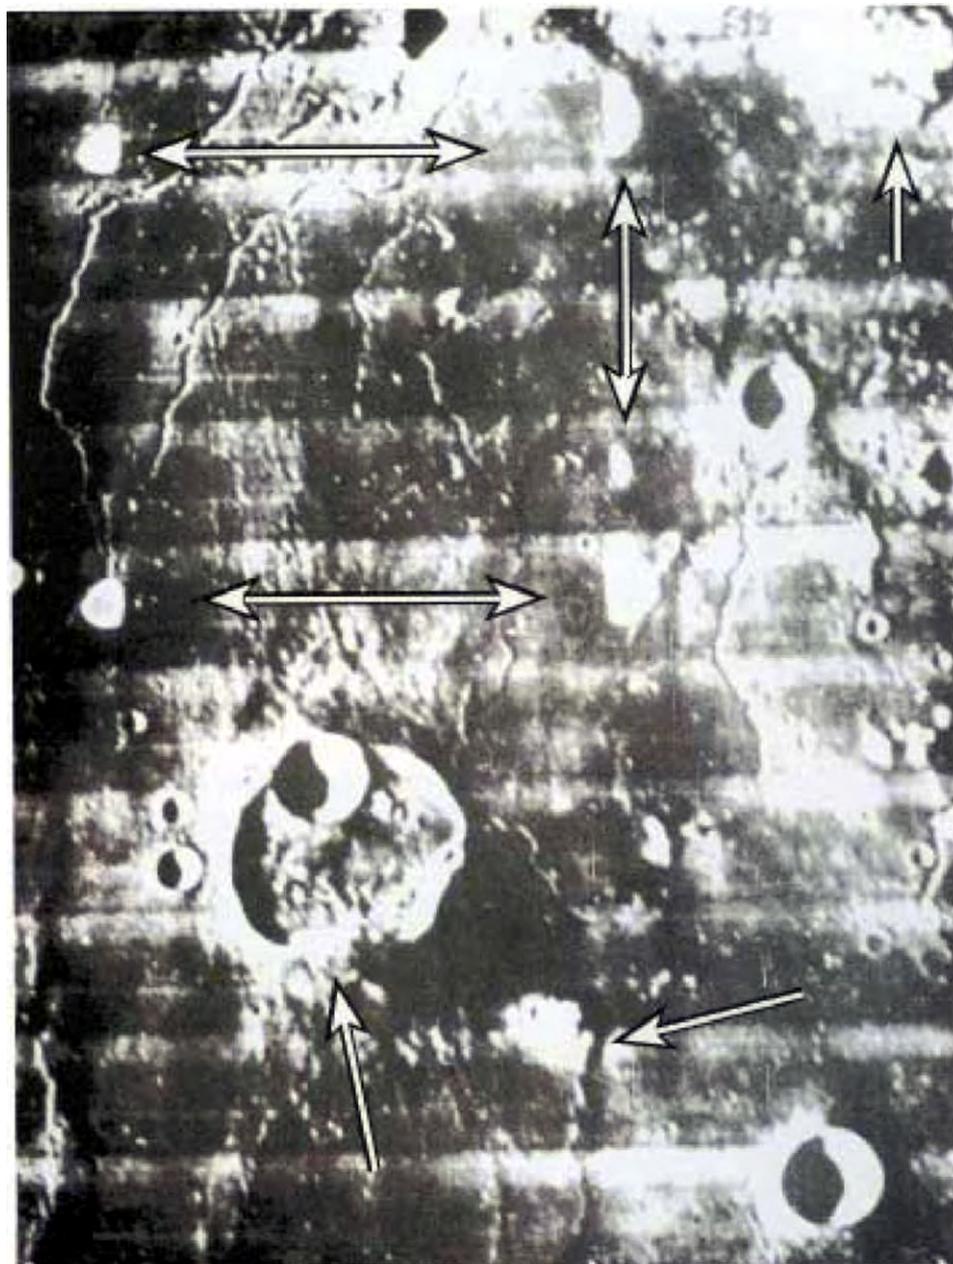

Fig. 58. Photo by NASA Lunar Orbiter IV, 151 'from the crater and its surroundings warriors. Note above five triangular white warriors, pond-like structures that reflect the sunlight-. Also look for the clouds at the edge of war as even fifty miles below the crater.

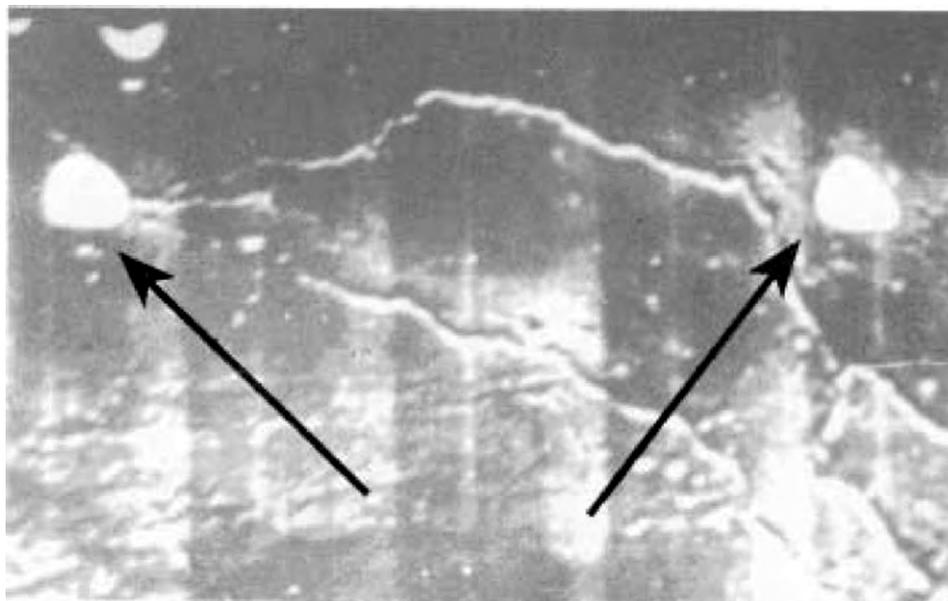

Fig. 59. (enlargement): LO-IV-Photo of ponds or lakes, which reflect sunlight. Also note that it seems as may be water in these river beds.

Fig. 60. LO IV, No. 151 (enlargement): Photo from LO IV from the other ponds that reflect sunlight.

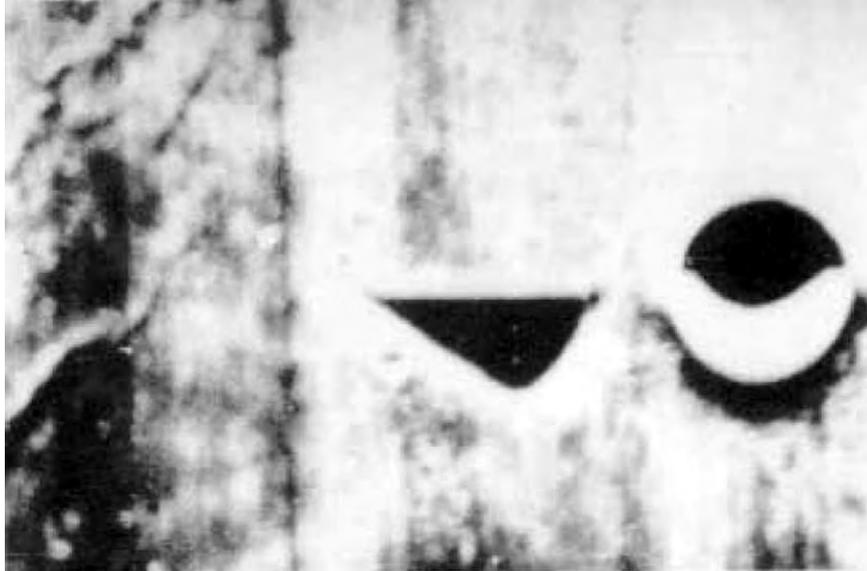

Fig. 61. Photo of Lunar Orbiter IV, No. 157 (enlargement), east of the crater Aristarchus. Two artificial-looking institutions: the perfectly formed crater and the 40-kilometer mountain or hangar.

the cloud forms over the previous photo can. Presumably it is to Plato in the rainy season.

Pictures No. 67-69 LO IV NASA HR No. 161 'Area: Damoiseau around the crater (southeast)

Position: 60 west longitude, 4 south latitude

Dimension: The image shows an area of 139 x 98 kilometers.

Mark 1: D Damoiseau

Mark 2: Damoiseau (30 km diameter);

Mark 3: leading a column of smoke rising from the area left of the valley.

Note: The valley, which runs west to the southeast of Damoiseau D looks suspiciously like a river bed. Damoiseau D has two panels, left and right, surround the crater as large dams. Is Damoiseau D is a pent-up reservoir? It seems to bear this out.

Picture No. 70 LO IV NASA No. HR 86 '

Area: Crater Posidonius

Position: 30 east longitude, 32 north latitude

Dimension: The crater is about 100 kilometers in diameter.

Note: Please note two objects in the crater, near the center of Posidonius. Also look for the cloud above the crater round clock at 10, which covers the largest gap. These fractures can see from the air and river beds.

Picture No. 71 No. LO IV NASA HR 181

Area: unnamed crater on the side of the moon

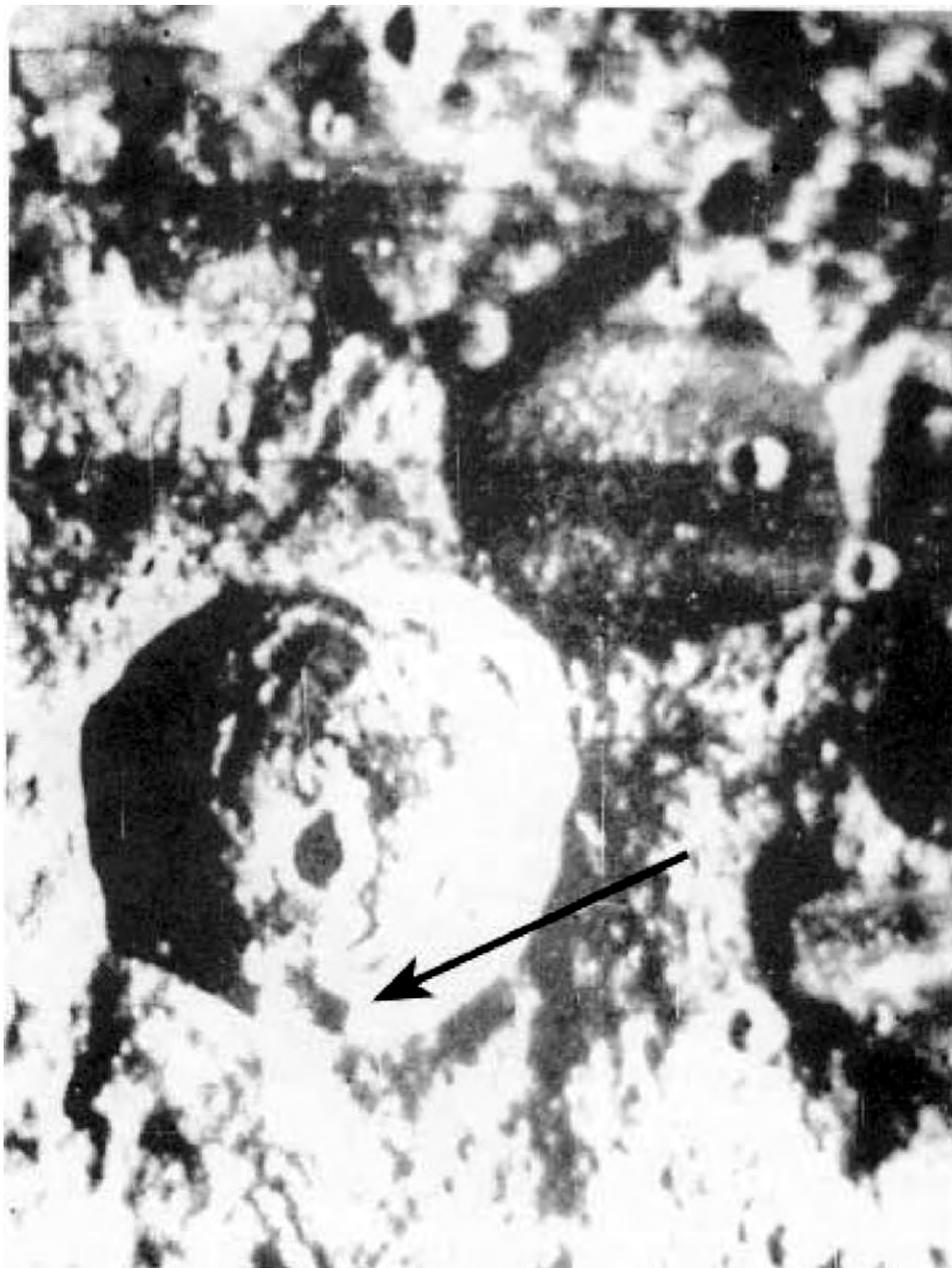

Fig. 62. Photo of Luna NASA - Orbiter IV, Ni, HR 161 3 (enlargement), the crater Prosper Henry: Please note the large white cloud that hangs over the lower wall of Prosper Henry. Top right corner of the crater next to Prosper Henry are still visible more clouds. Pay attention also to the various objects near the oval cloud in the middle crater

Fig. 63. Photo by NASA Lunar Orbiter V, No. HR 103 3 (enlargement). Marc Moscovience on the side of the moon. Note. the following markings: Nil 1 - a big cloud hanging over the crater rim, No. 2 - an object next to kaulquappenfrmiges; No. 3 and 4 - cigar-shaped objects in the air; No. 5 - a very large dome.

Position: Unknown

Dimension: The crater has a diameter of 29 kilometers.

Note: The mountain in the middle looks as if he were at a table mountain been shaved off. The area around the crater appears to be terraced To Basket.

In most cases, objects, buildings, perhaps, to discover on these terraces, especially the clock at 1.

Many of the pictures in this book except the Apollo every number, indicating the name and location are missing on the moon. The crater on the side of the moon are unnamed. Nevertheless, all photos are originals NASA, with the exception of the crops. None of the photos were manipulated, retouched or altered in any way.

All things of interest, which I have described, such as domes, UFOs, lakes, structures. Vegetation, reservoirs, objects in craters and so on can be found by anyone who wishes to find them.

NASA has worked very well with me. I hope I have helped my research by NASA a little to find those unexplained mysteries, and to identify or at least to propose what might be the objects in the air and on your floor.

Bild 58: Foto von NASA Lunar Orbiter V, Ni: MR 82, Teil des Kraters Ritter C. Kegelförmige Wolken und Kumuluswolken.

Fig. 64. Photo by NASA Lunar Orbiter V, Ni: MR 82, part of the crater Ritter C. Cone-shaped clouds and cumulus clouds

Fig. 65. Photo by NASA LO IV, No. HR 182 2 (enlargement): Smoke rises almost perpendicularly out of the crater Vasco da Gama. Also note the many clouds in the middle of the photo under the smoke.

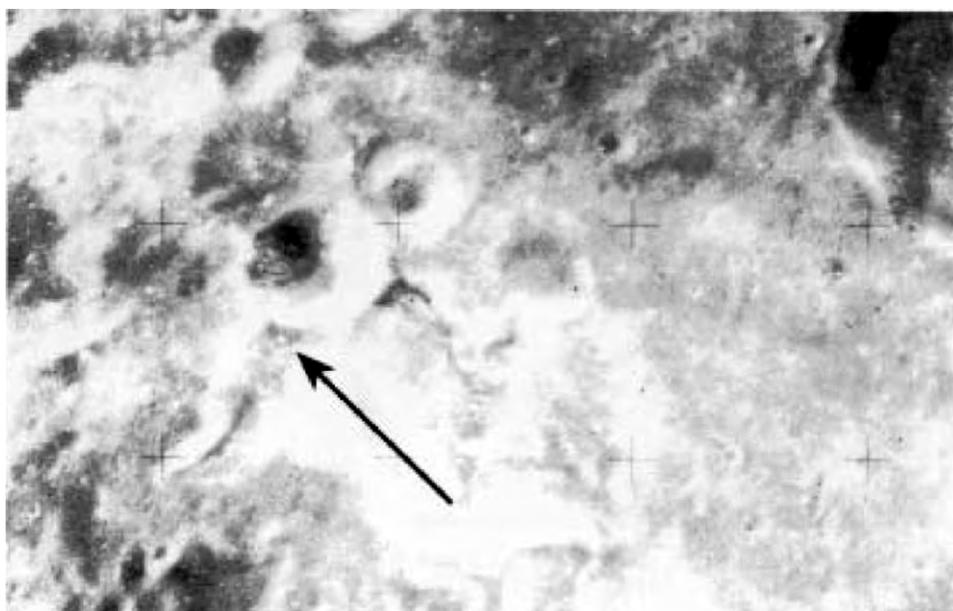

Fig. 66. Photo by NASA Apollo 16, No. 16-758 (enlargement). Fog and cloud-rags in the area of the crater Lobachavsky.

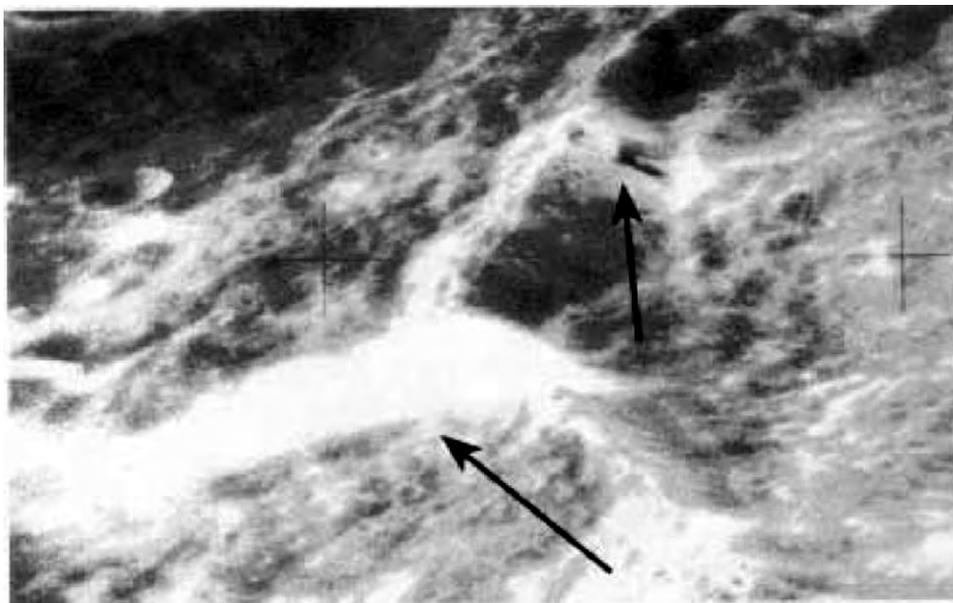

Fig. 67. (enlargement). A large cloud bank holds in this photo of Apollo 16, No. 16-758 close to the edge of the crater Lobachavsky. Also note the large oval object on the crater rim that casts a shadow.

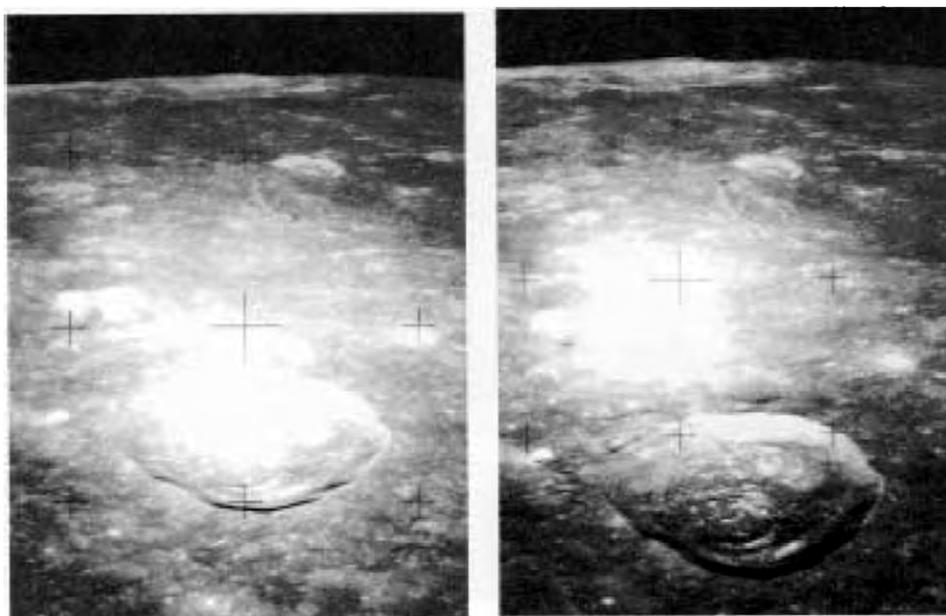

Fig. 68. Photos 62 and 63: Photos from Apollo 14, No. 14-10279 and 14-10280. Note that the large cloud or haze has moved north of the crater, covered them / it.

Fig. 69. Figure on the left - Figure 64 a. NASA LO IV, Ah: 187 2 . It shows a large cloud zigarrenformige or object.

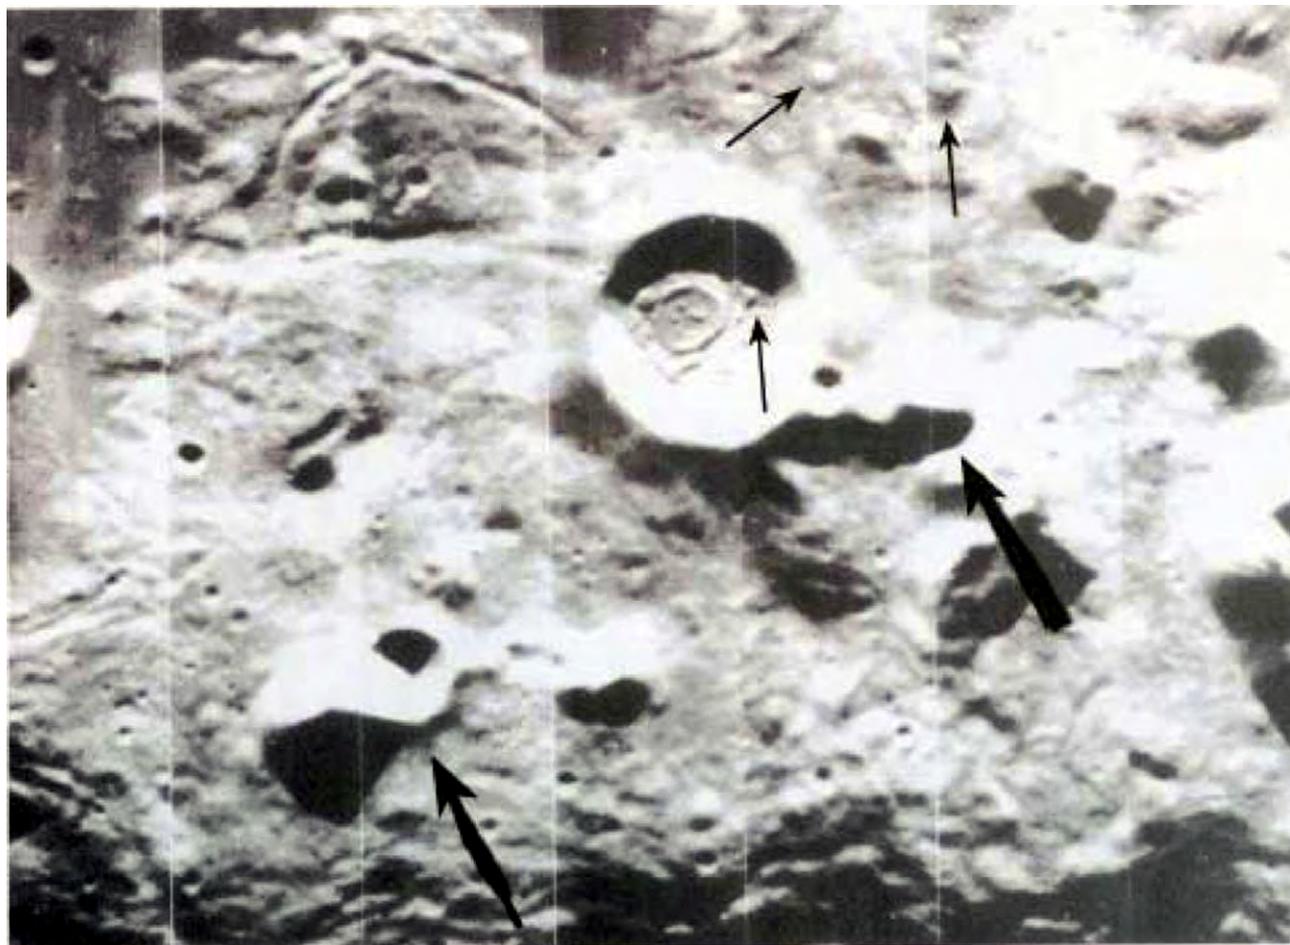

Fig. 70. Right figure - Figure 64: NASA LO 117, Ne Photo 1872 (Enlargement), area of the Alpine valley on the moon. Look for the large oval Object (UFO or cloud) 1.6 Kilometers above the large Crater. In addition, still more clouds on the top left To see photo and three domes, two to the left of the crater and top left of the crater

Fig. 71. NASA's Lunar Orbiter IV, No. HR 127 south of the crater Plato. Note the heavy cumulus cloud, which occupies the middle and the upper side of the photograph. (Numbered clouds 1 to 8)

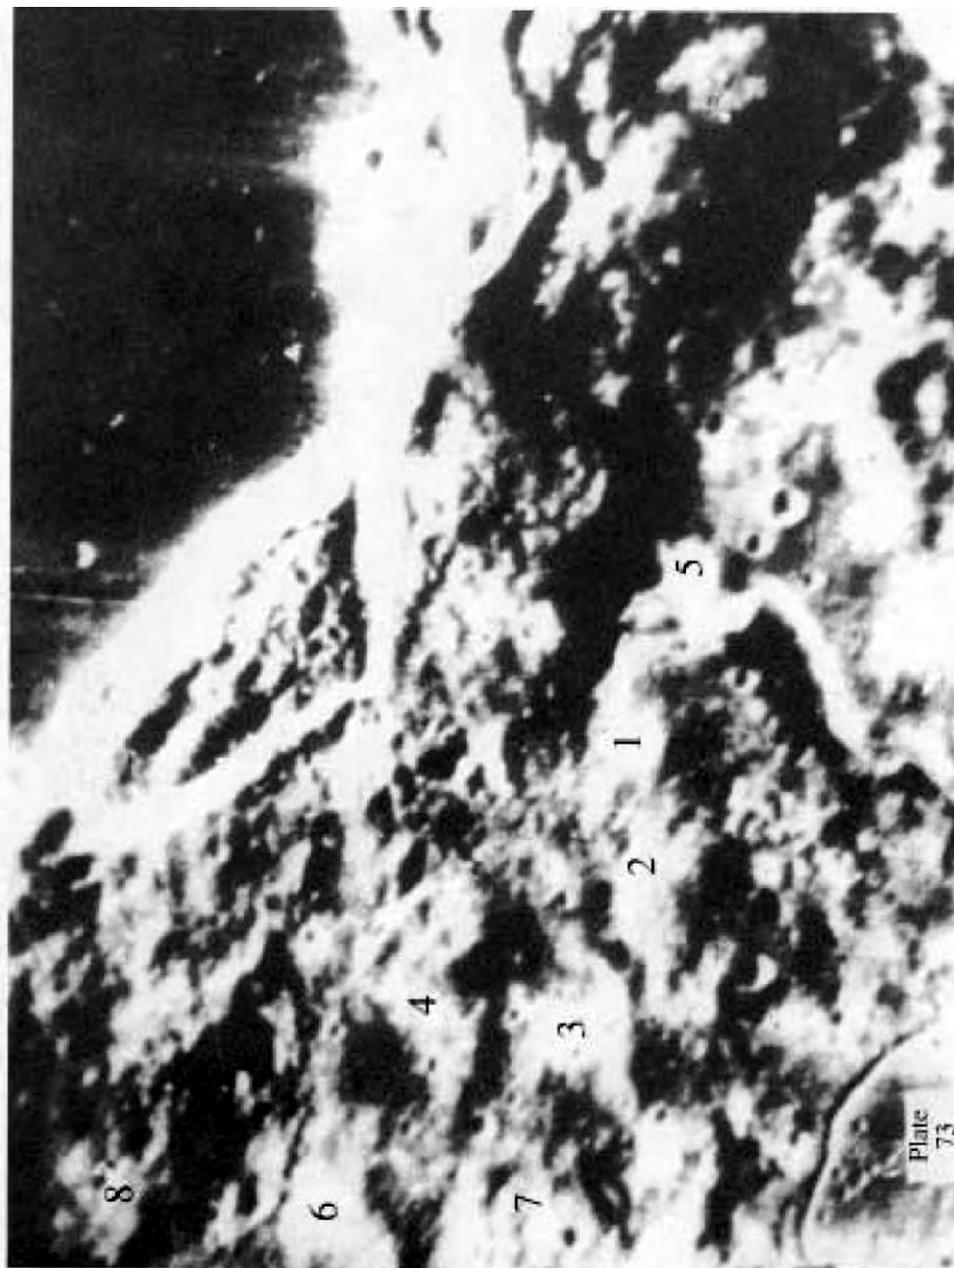

Fig. 72. Photo by NASA LO IV, Ne HR 128, the crater Plato, and its southwestern area. Note the changes in the cloud shapes and compare them with those 65 to image

Fig. 73. Photo by NASA orbiter Luna IV, No. 161', southeast of the crater Damoiseau D. 1st Damoiseau D 2nd Damoiseau 3rd A column of smoke that drifts from west to east. 4th Clouds over the Crater rim 5th A long platform, which forms the entrance to a hangar. 6th Constructions. 7th Constructions. 8th A large platform, which arches over a river bed. 9th More platforms.

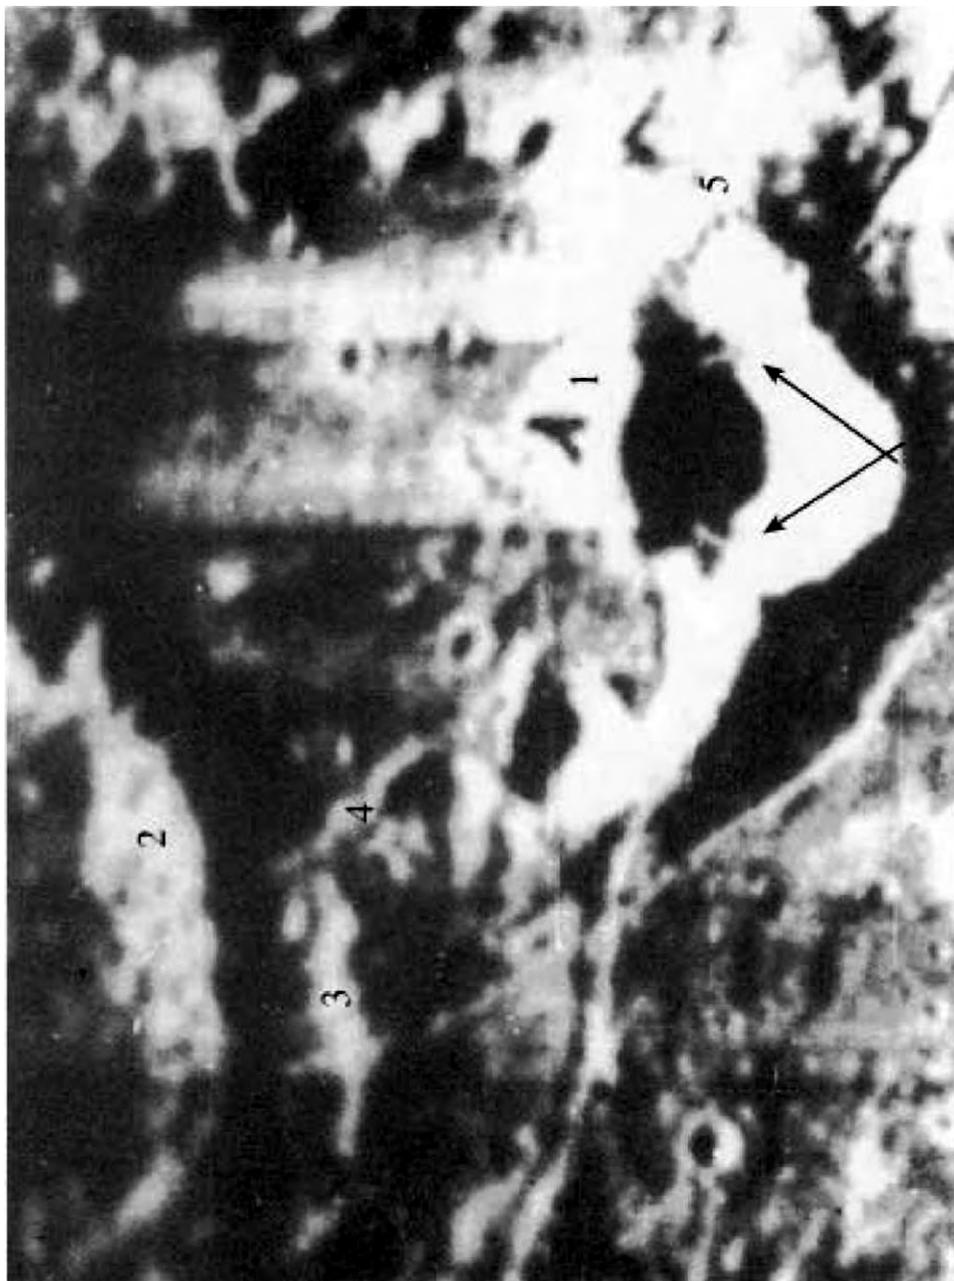

Fig. 74. NASA LO IV image magnification of 67, NI 161'. Note two double right and left walls of the crater Damoiseau D. Pay attention to the raft bed, from the northwest to the southeast of the crater Damoiseau No. 1/141. No. 3 is the column of smoke, No. 4, the cloud above the crater rim. No. 5: If this is a crater-insulated reservoir? One can, five evenly spaced structures are to see the pumping stations are very similar.

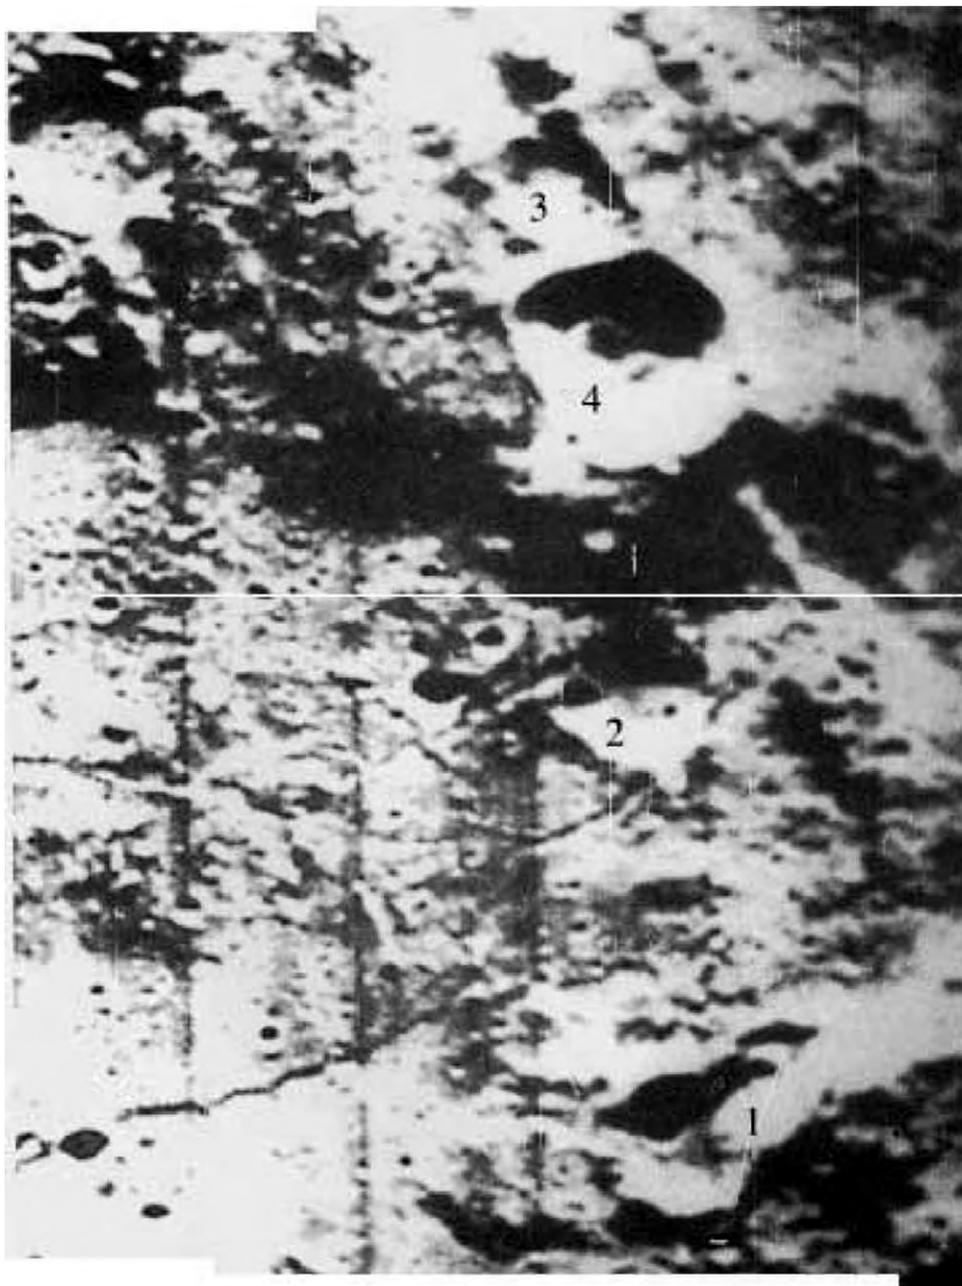

Fig. 75. Photo by NASA LO II No.: 161'; magnification image of the eastern part of 67th Note: No. 1 - the large construction, nr 2 and nr 3 - two platforms, No. 4 - maybe another platform?

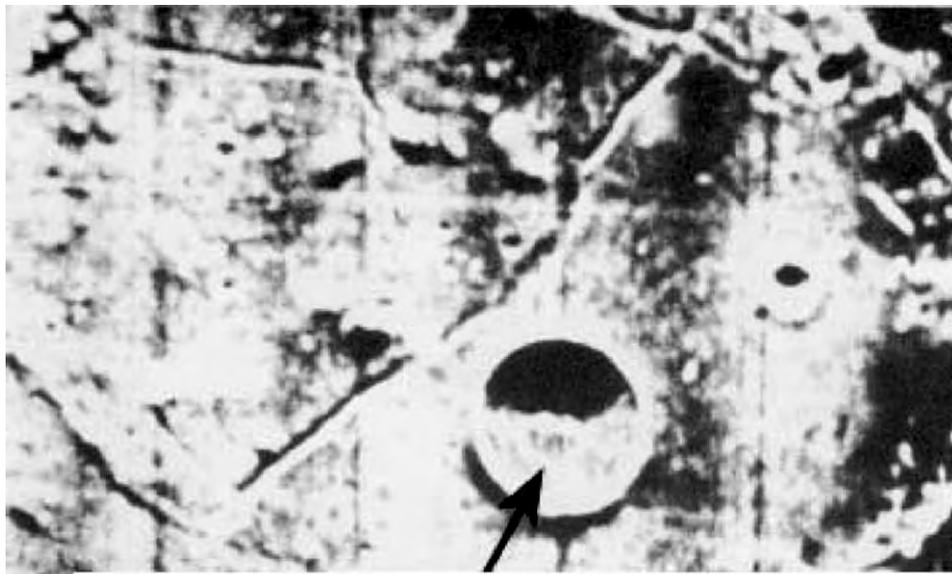

Fig. 76. Photo by NASA LO IV, N. 86 3 , and the crater Posidonius. Note the two oval objects on the bottom of the crater and clouds in the north-west, covering the great gorge.

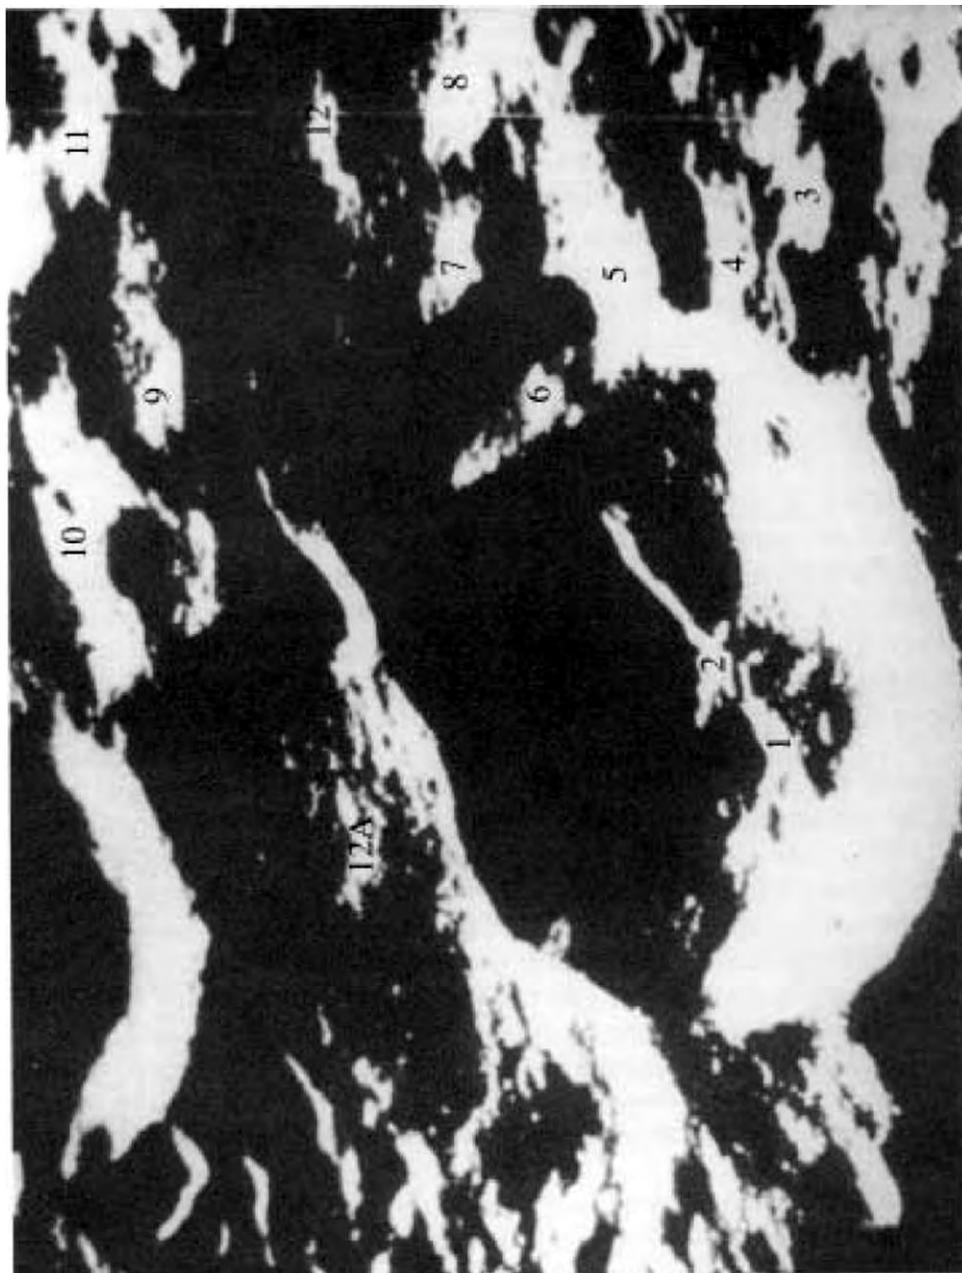

Fig. 77. NASA's Lunar Orbiter V HR No. 181', unnamed crater on the side of the moon. From 1 to 12 seem to be all platforms or structures. Note the objects on platform No. 9 Also look out for the step-like platform No. 12

11. SYMBOLS, SIGNALS AND MARKINGS ON THE MOON

Although the symbolism and the art to convey messages through symbols of Western civilization has largely been lost, but it is still used in other parts of the world.

However, there are some kinds of symbols that we use in daily life such as traffic signs, crosses to hospitals, mountains, churches, airport runways, etc. A symbol, a message can simplify significantly, since it is understood by many people of different nation and language. For example, directs the Wild Animal Park in San Diego, who is visited by people from all over the world, a simple symbol of the visitors to the outdoor enclosure of the birds. The symbol consists of a flying eagle with an arrow underneath pointing in the direction of the square.

For thousands of years, huge animal symbols and runway markings similar to the high plains of Nasca in Peru in South America have been engraved. No civilization would spend the endless hours of work and effort to construct such a mammoth marks, unless they contained a very important role. Since these marks and symbols only from at least a thousand feet up in the Lull can be seen and fully identified, it must have been in those days aircraft in order to benefit from these symbols can benefit. These symbols were erected without a doubt either of visitors from other worlds or for those of Earth humans. While even the symbols of Nasca amazed almost all serious researchers of history have, we can still find many other marks of the world probably similar meaning.

In my studies of the thousands of moon photographs I found on dozens of these images and symbols raised markings. Thus, for example, south-east of King crater seen on the moon back of some huge marks a big mirror-inverted "L" appear to represent, followed by a "B" and then a third letter, again a reversed "L". Indeed, many strange to monitor activities inside and around King crater, which lies east at 120.5 longitude and 5.5 north latitude (see Figure 72).

The area around the capital letters looks very much as if it had been cut off or flattened. Please note three equally sized objects at equal distance from each other, the point directly beneath a glade of the major characters in the Southwest. On closer examination of this photo is pushing a resemblance to the large bulldozers, seen from a great height. If we are talking about the King crater, I would like to mention two other interesting findings in the NASA photo enlarged. Approximately 145 kilometers northeast of King crater smoke or dust is seen getting out of a small crater with about 7 or 8 miles in diameter. This suggests either volcanic activity or that the dust from mining machinery inside the crater is blown out (see Figure 73).

Another unusual sighting of ten closely in rows parked objects can be several kilometers east of King crater are observed (see Figure 74). I very much hope that this neatly parked objects are not just stones, which are rolled up neatly in this position and here have settled. I think that even the unyielding skeptic can agree that these objects - whatever they may be, whether Lullfahrzeuge, mining machines, or whatever - have been placed there by intelligent beings. The truncated crater directly see these objects from the right as an input to an underground hangar or warehouse storage.

Fig. 78. Photo of Apollo 16, NASA, Ne 16-19273 (enlargement). Three symbols and three objects below the Royal southwest crater.

I discovered another huge mark or symbol, which is against the west wall of a small crater to the crater sit Proctus seemed the crisis between the sea and the sea of silence. This huge, sublime symbol resembles the swastika very similar to that used on the ground and "unity" is what did all previous civilizations. Even though this symbol has been abused during the Second World War, still revered former civilizations, of which the symbol was borrowed from the very swastika connects the people and all things in unity. One can say with certainty that those people who have installed this huge symbol on the moon, with its meaning in its entirety were familiar.

If you carefully study these craters, we can, if somewhat difficult to detect, southwest of the great symbol of four equal-sized objects that look like big domes. Assume that nature has placed by blind chance in this crater so any reputable scientist would the intelligence insulting. This symbol may be used on the moon still, for the same principles that were long ago lost our civilization shall survive here. It is about three hundred feet high. Anyone who buys the NASA photo of Apollo 16 AS-16 121-19438 can identify this symbol itself (see Figure 75 and 76).

It can be found so many letters and numbers in as many places of the moon. Therefore, it is evident that they were placed there by intelligent beings. It is true that sometimes random nature of the effect of light and shadow brings letters and numbers, but not in so many cases, how it comes across on the moon.

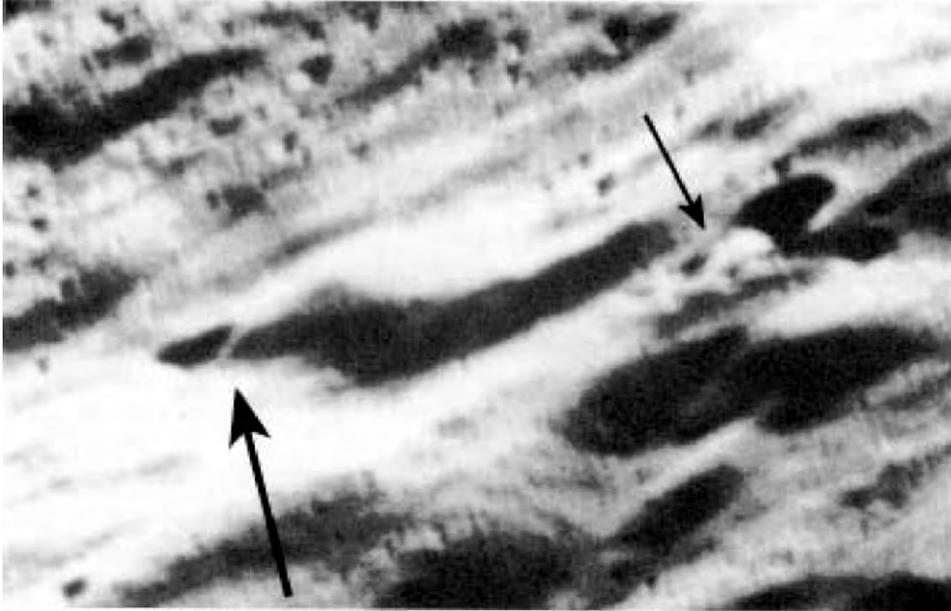

Fig. 79. Photo by NASA Apollo 16-19273 (enlargement), northeast of the crater King. Note the dust being blown up left out of the crater. Anyone operating on the moon mining?

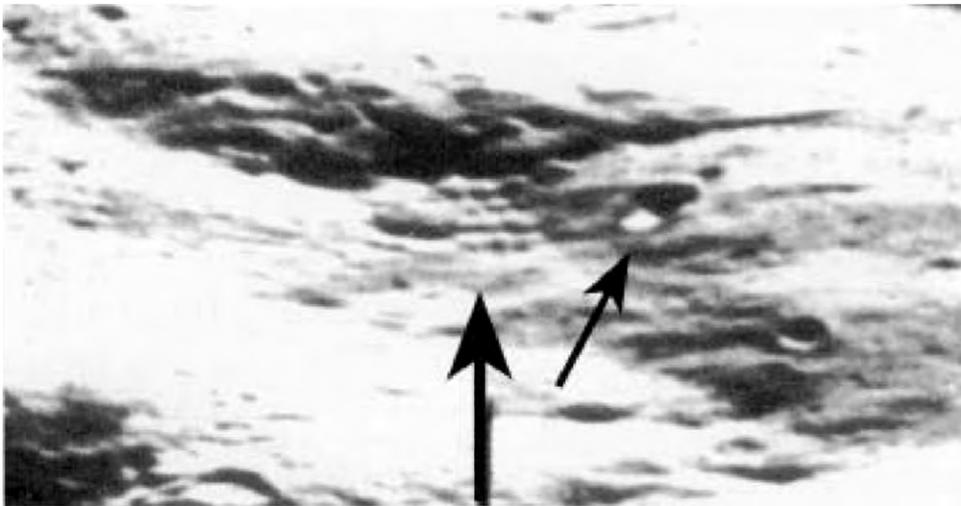

Fig. 80. Photo by NASA Apollo 16, No. 16-19265 (enlargement). Note the ten objects in addition to a specially cut crater, which looks much like an underground hangar, parked neatly in rows.

Simple crosses are also quite numerous, and they seem like the same purpose on earth to have (see Figures 77 to 79). The capital letter "E" seems to be the central point of the crater Gassendi crown. This crater contains numerous tubes and tunnels, of which I have already spoken at previous point in this book. It seems that the point "E" for this point of the crater was cut (see Figure 4, page 37).

Fig. 81. Figure 76 (enlargement): Note the great symbol of the inner crater wall. Be sure also to the four dome-shaped objects.

A few miles south of the crater Archimedes has a symbolic platform designed high on the summit of the mountain range some, very much up in the mountain carved letters. The first symbol is like a flying bird. He is followed by the capital letter "Y" and "Z" and a few others that are identified with the help of our alphabet is hard. These symbols are miles long and extend over at least twenty miles, if not more (see Figure 7, see page 40).

To another letter, a vague but nevertheless easily be recognized, "R" can be discovered in the upper ridge of the crater. I could not find the name nor the location of the crater, except that he had been photographed by Apollo 8th You must know that - although ninety-nine percent of the moon were photographed - most areas and craters on the back yet unnamed forever.

Interestingly, a white cross was erected upright on the mountain in the middle of this crater, and just below it, at the bottom of the crater is a large white structure visible. This is like two connected "T" s couple of miles south of this crater is in the plane, a large raised letter "S" clearly visible (see Figure 80).

Close to the central summit of the crater, which has called the crew of Apollo 11 "IAU 308" is clearly a huge mark in the form of a cross visible. This crater has a diameter of seventy-seven kilometers and is located on the side of the moon. Around eight kilometers southwest of the cross marks are two identically designed, dome-shaped structure at the bottom of the crater, which seem to have six and a half miles in diameter. Just south is the two domes, a large white platform, the U-shaped, about 2.4 kilometers long and half as wide. directly behind and a little deeper, there is another circular platform, parked in the two dark, equal-sized objects (see Figure 81).

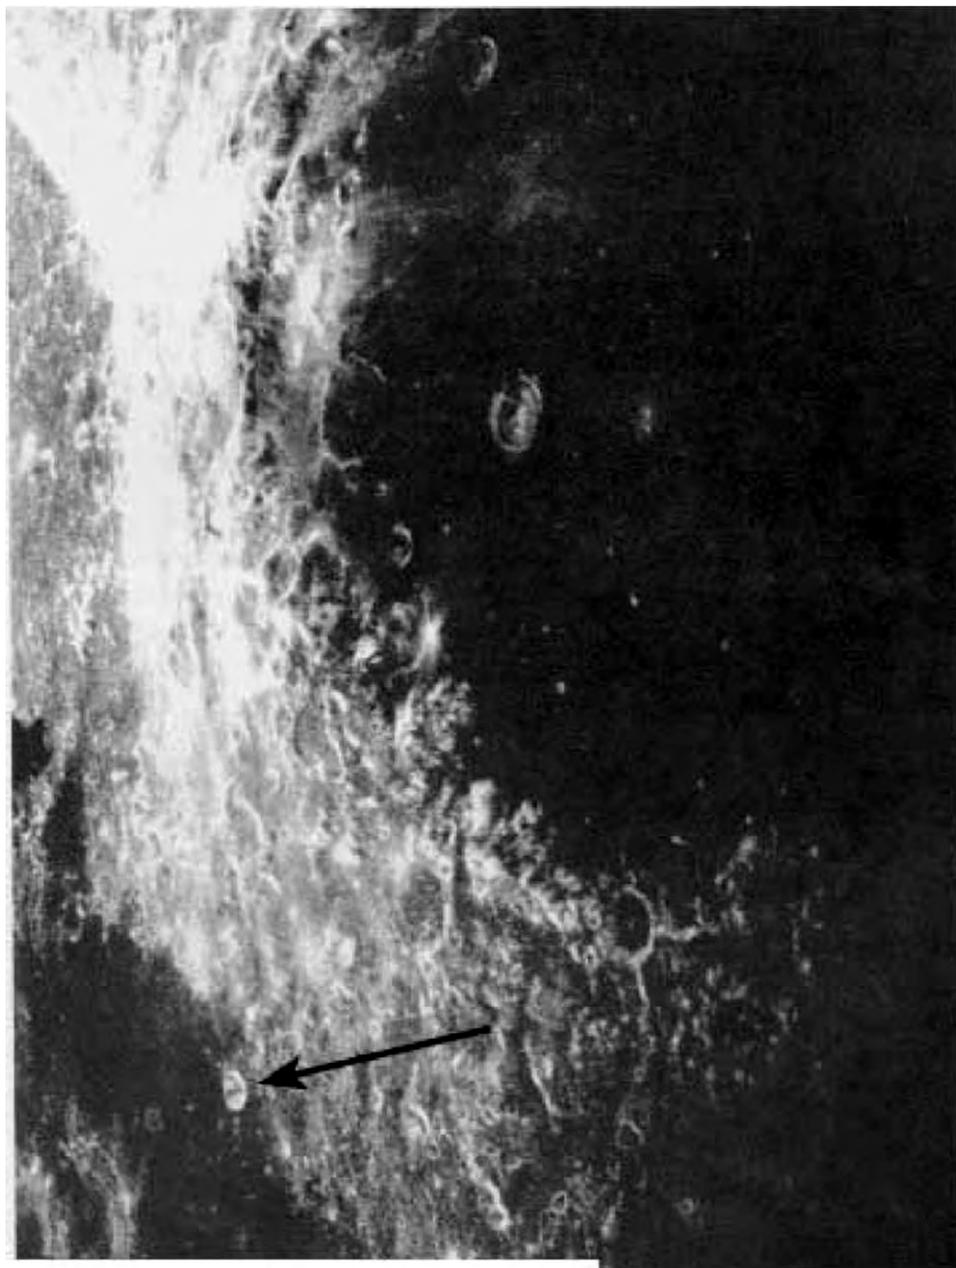

Fig. 82. Photo by NASA Apollo 16, No.: AS-16-121-19438th Note the large icon on the inner wall of the crater left near the Sea of Tranquility.

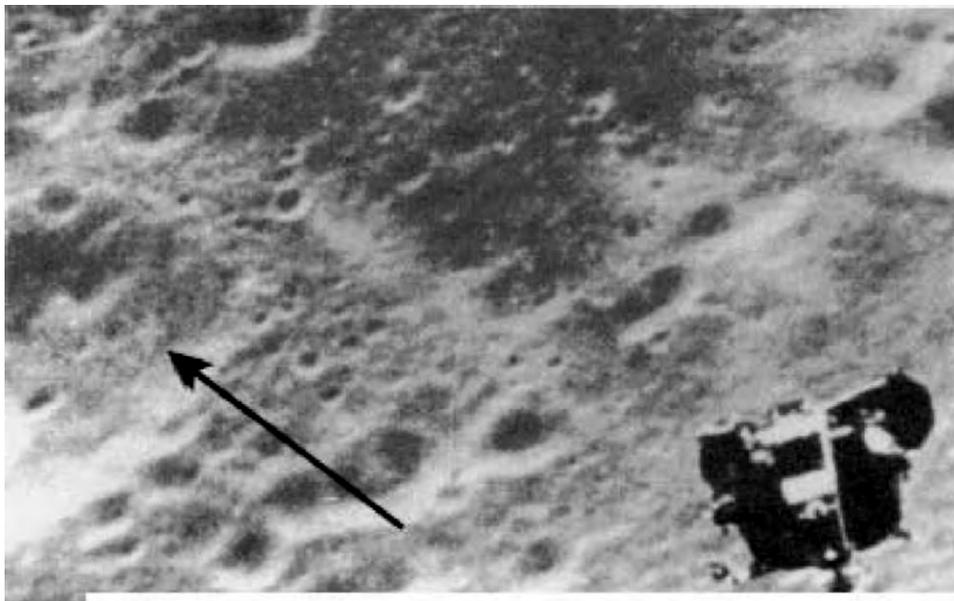

Fig. 83. LO III, M Photo: 67-H-201 (magnification). A large lofty Latin cross ('X') in the vicinity of the crater Kepler.

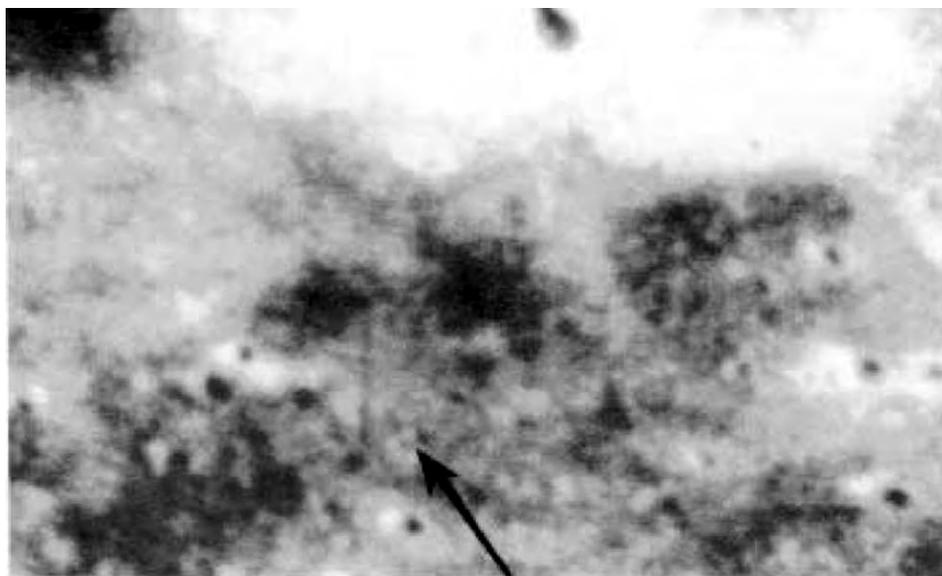

Fig. 84. Photo of Apollo 16, No. 16-19386 (enlargement). Latin cross.

Fig. 85. Photo of Apollo 16 (enlargement). King Cross area around the crater at the edge of the central crater No. 16-19228

Fig. 86. Photo of Apollo 8, unknown territory. Note the crater cut above the left and the designs and symbols in the two craters on the left and right of center.

Also, Maurice Chatelain, in his book Our Aneestors Came From Outer Space elaborates on the symbolism of the early civilizations on earth. He suggests that we have on earth a common origin and that the earth was colonized long ago. Other authors suggest that the Earth was colonized by the agitators of higher civilizations that the world - just

Note the dark cross on the summit of the mine and the dome-shaped objects and the platform.

Australia as the British - used as a dumping ground for its convicts. If this is true, it would also explain why these early settlers have little or no advanced technology has been given. So they were forced to solve their problems peacefully and simultaneously prevented from building spaceships, so they remained bound to the earth and were not able to take revenge.

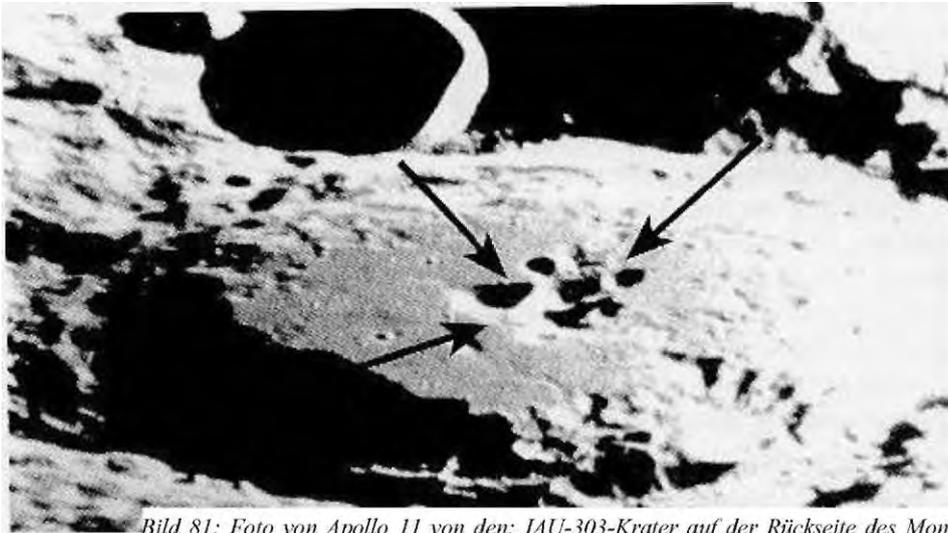

Fig. 87. Figure 81: Photo of Apollo 11 by: IAU 303-craters on the side of the moon. Note the dark cross on the summit of the mine and the dome-shaped objects and the platform.

Use the following example: If a plane crashed in a remote and inhospitable mountain region, would destroy it, but most of the passengers survived, they would - return to the existence of a cave man - regardless of their technical background. Without the modern tools of advanced technology, even the smartest people are helpless. If these survivors will never be found, so were their children born in the wild, not Able to understand what their parents tell them about their history. This example may serve to explain how easy to lose a man his technical skills.

The British Air Marshal Sir Lord Downing once said that the earth was a kind of penal colony and lunatic asylum for those who have been removed long ago from another planet. Since this is a highly accusatory statement, in fact, one wonders what brought Lord Downing to represent them so strongly. Some religious students of the subject are now talking of clues ensure that the early "twelve tribes" of which the Bible speaks, races or groups of people were the deposed from space to earth brought. on different continents, they had to learn to live together in peace. Whether this Now true or not, the thought of it already has its advantages. This would essentially like this, like if you removed the bad apples before they spoil the good barrel.

This could also explain the early visits from outer space, have spoken of so many authors. They wanted to see what we do. If this is true, we should be on the other hand, do not despair too much, because they gave us a beautiful planet to live, although we exert ourselves mightily to destroy our civilization. I think we - no matter where they come from people, whether in front of the moon or other planets - all of which are related to each other and that man is a universal manifestation.

12. NASA EXPERTS REVEAL THE FACTS

Maurice Chatelain was one of the top scientists at NASA's contract, which the Apollo spacecraft have planned and designed. He was also concerned with the communication equipment of Apollo and back both with respect to the transmission of voice as well as the results of measurements of the Earth to the Moon.

In his aforementioned book Our Ancestors Came From Outer Space, he made this startling findings ". All the flights of Apollo and Gemini were accompanied by spacecraft, which did not originate from Earth." (UFOs) Whenever the astronauts from a UFO. sighting in space reported associated to the mission control was absolute silence. Astronauts Mercury flight 8 reported UFOs in the vicinity of the space capsule. The same did the astronauts of Apollo 8 from behind the moon, after they had regained radio contact with Earth.

Gemini 7 photographed two UFOs in Earth orbit. They looked like giant mushrooms and burned her bottom. Gemini 12 photographed a UFO just 800 meters from its capsule and reported having seen two more. It is even in scientific circles of the Soviet Union announced that our Apollo moon missions had encounters with UFOs. One wonders where the Russians have received this information. It is quite possible that they intercepted our radio calls. The Russians believe that other civilizations, and our radio signals our intention to visit the moon, have taken.

Mr. Chatelain, now retired, told several reporters that the astronauts of Apollo 11 not only strange noises heard on the radio, as they approached the Moon approached, but surprisingly had the company of two UFOs observed our first moon landing. There is no reason to doubt the testimony of this former NASA expert, and one can say with certainty that if anything had gone wrong on the moon, the astronauts would have been saved.

Professor Oberth, the rocket specialist, came after the Second World War from Europe to the United States. He worked until his retirement End of the fifties for the Bell Laboratories. When he retired, he told the press: "Gentlemen, we can not take full credit for the rapid technical progress of our civilization in the last decade for us alone to complete. . We had help, "When he was asked who would have us for help, he replied:". The out there from the other planets, "This statement is the good professor quickly brought the honorable title of a person" with a jump in the bowl "is a . However, those who are responsible for this promotion have never explained how it should be possible for a top scientist to lunatics overnight.

Dr. Fred Bell, another former NASA scientist, said: "The astronauts have kept quiet about their encounters with UFOs, because they'd been led to believe that it is a matter of national security." Dr. Bell admitted that he had seen photographs of UFOs, the astronaut had taken. It is accepted by the scientific community in general, that the governments of the world hesitate to admit that we really are helpless against advanced beings from other planets. Many experts now believe with certainty that something goes on the moon in front of him.

Mr. Chatelain said that Apollo 10 also reported from its orbit around the moon by UFOs. When Apollo 11 landed on the moon, viewers saw a UFO, which is about six seconds of coming into moving right into the picture. It was photographed from the screen, and this picture is here in this book as Figure 82 reproduced.

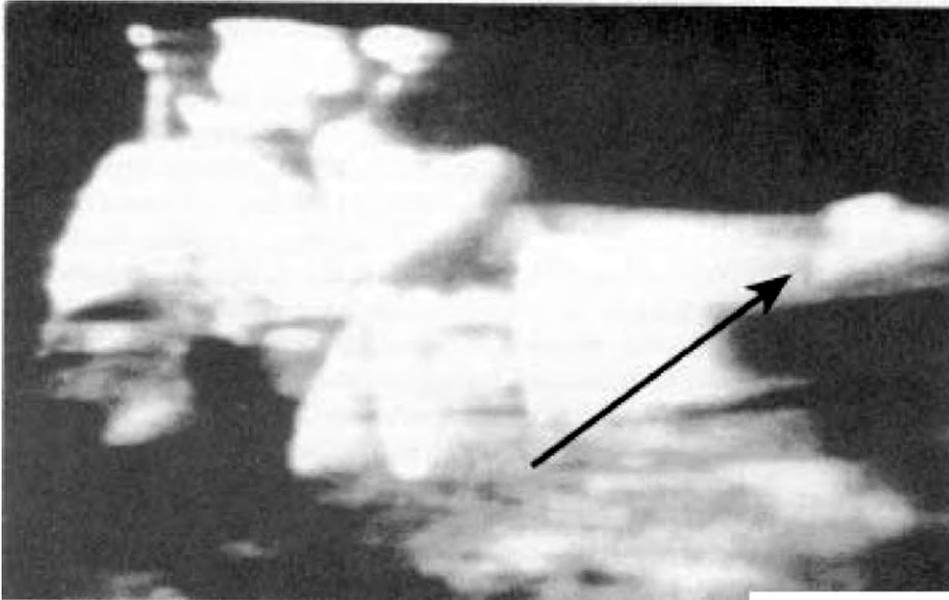

Fig. 88. Apollo 11 on the moon. The picture was photographed in Europe from the screen and shows a white, bell-shaped UFO right in the photo.

Apollo 12 had its share of UFO experiences. Apollo 13 experienced an unexplained explosion of one of their tanks before the landing had to be canceled. Mr. Chatelain also said that many radio messages and radio signals were received from outer space, especially in the vicinity of the moon.

In an article in the San Diego Union, 23 July 1980 was that the great inventor Nikola Tesla, who discovered the alternating current, had claimed that he had radio contact with extraterrestrials. Tesla systems are very powerful channel for energy signals. In the same article it was mentioned that Westinghouse and Marconi also claimed publicly to have received signals from another planet. The article is from the Center of Advanced Technology (Center for Advanced Technology) in La Jolla, California. Former astronaut Gordon Cooper is the President.

Astronaut Gordon Cooper once said on national television that he chased hundreds of UFOs as a combat pilot over Europe have. Mr. Chatelain says in his book that Mr. Cooper, one of the most highly qualified astronauts for the Apollo missions - had been withdrawn because of his encounters with UFOs in the previous Mercury flights from this program.

1928 radio signals were received from the moon in France, Germany, Norway and Holland. This discovery was kept secret for a long time. Mr. Chatelain also reports that our solar system has twelve planets instead of nine, of whom we know so far. This agrees exactly with what the late George Adamski, in his book Beyond The Mystery Flying Saucers reported.

Recently, coded messages received from another solar system on earth. Soviet communications experts received radio signals from planets in our solar system. Mr. Chatelain concluded that certain legends point out that some visitors from outer space came to Earth from Venus. "That is not impossible." He said. Dr. Jane Harder, a professor of engineering at the University of California, Columbia, reported that after very careful research on your field of UFO's on the tapes to the radio traffic of the Apollo flights discovered was that several Apollo flights UFOs were met, he also said that he had discovered the records of the conversations between your spacecraft and mission control clear evidence of UFO sightings, he mentioned Apollo 11 and Apollo 12,.. the latter was followed by a UFO while three Mondumkreisungen. Harder says that these incidents have been omitted because of possible public panic.

Donald L. Zyistra, head of the Department of Public Information of NASA in Washington DC, made this revealing statement: "ch during the manned Apollo flights, there were sightings of the ship, they could not explain our astronauts." (See Figures 83 to 97 .)

More interesting moon photos from NASA, the reader is referred to the images 98-135 found.

Fig. 89. LO III 162-M (enlargement). The large cigar-shaped object increased fourteen-fold: it is about four kilometers long!

Fig. 90. Figure 84: LO III 162-M (enlargement). The large cigar-shaped object fourteen-fold increase, it is about four miles long!

108 FRED STECKLING and GLENN STECKLING

Fig. 91. Hasselblad photo of NASA's Apollo 16, Picture Ne 16-19238. Photo of a cigar-shaped object in the air, flying over the lunar surface.

Fig. 92. Figure 86: NASA AS No. 13-60-8622. Photo of Apollo 13 a unknown glowing object in the vicinity of the moon

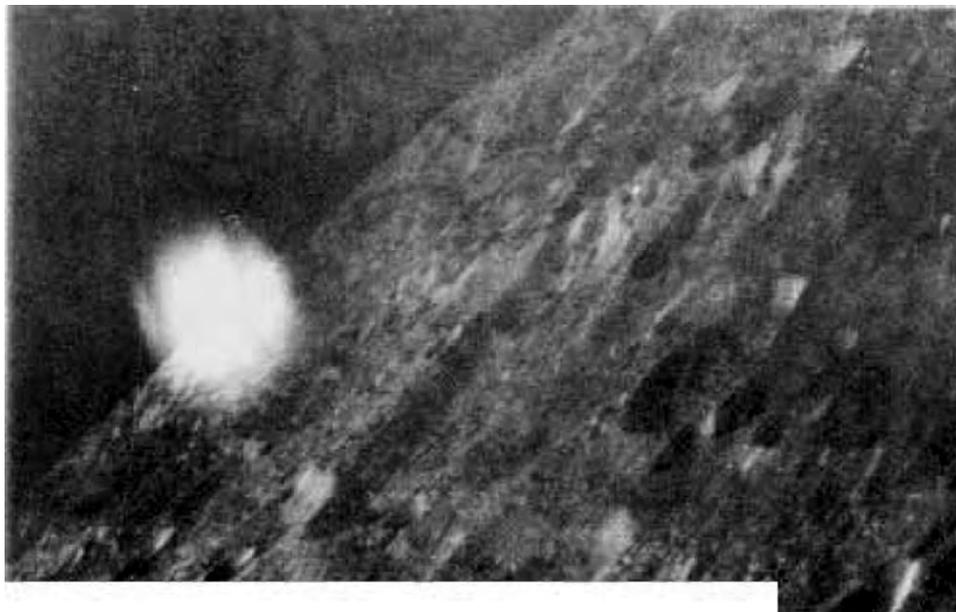

Fig. 93. Figure 87: NASA AS No. 13-60-8609. Apollo 13 photo of a UFO. on the Moon

Fig. 94. Figure 88: NASA AS No. 12-51-7553. Strange white object in the air high above the Surface of the moon. It has been photographed by Apollo 12th

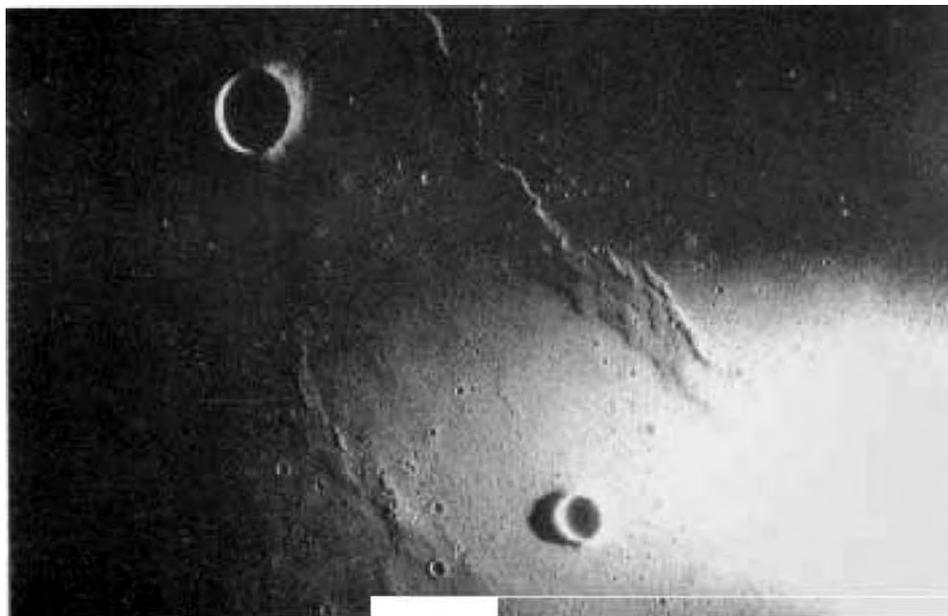

Fig. 95. Figure 89: NASA Ah: 12-54-8118 AS. White glowing object between Apollo 12 and the moon.

Fig. 96. Figure 90: NASA AS No. 11-42-6334 (Apollo 11). Glowing objects on or near the lunar surface

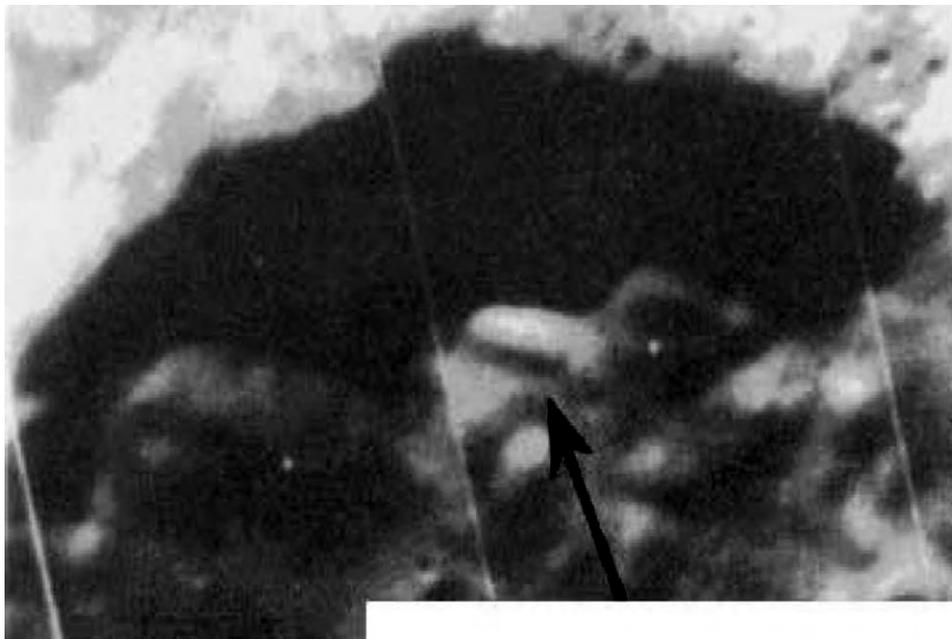

Fig. 97. Figure 91: Photo of Lunar Orbiter IV NASA's No. LO IV 89 '. White cigar-shaped Object in the vicinity of the crater Romer

Fig. 98. Figure 92: Photo of Apollo 14, NASA Ne AS 14-9837. Photo of seven glowing objects close to the lunar surface

Fig. 99. Figure 93: Photos taken by Apollo 16 UFO moves across the lunar surface and it leaves a long trail.

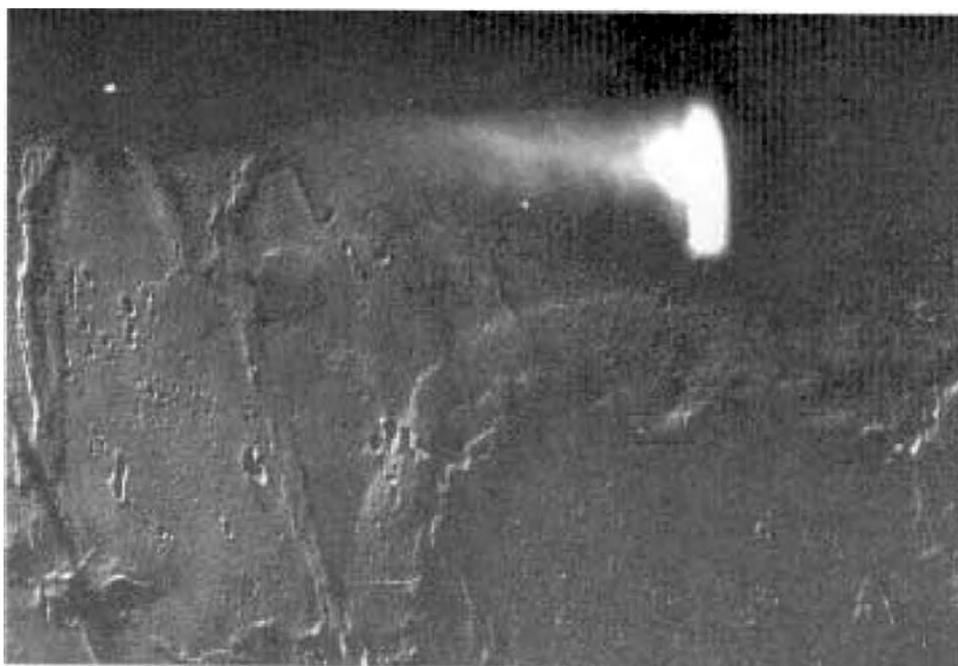

Fig. 100. Apollo 11 a glowing cigarette-shaped object near the moon in the

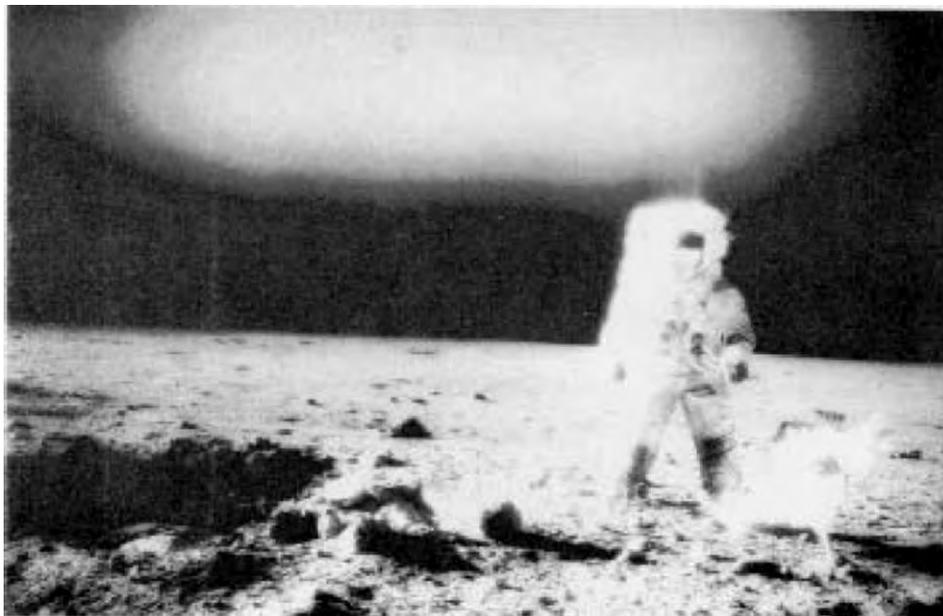

Fig. 101. NASA's No. AS-12-497319th Strange white glowing oval object hovering over an astronaut from Apollo 12th

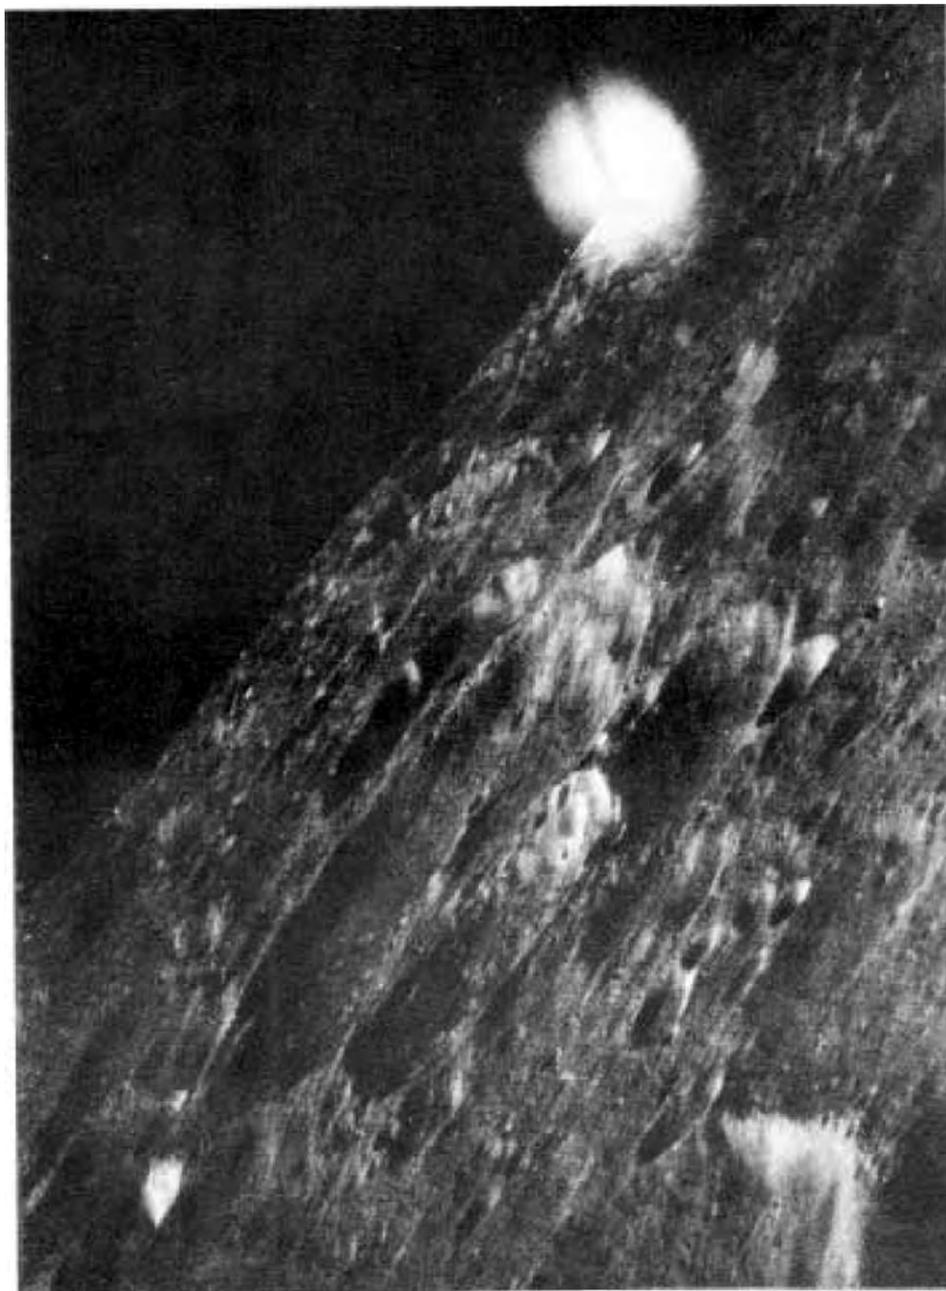

Fig. 102. NASA Ni: 13-60-8609. UFO Above the Moon, photographed by Apollo 13

Fig. 103. NASA Ni: 11-37-5436. Apollo 11 photo of a cigar-shaped object in the orbit of the moon. Note the seven or more rings around this strange object.

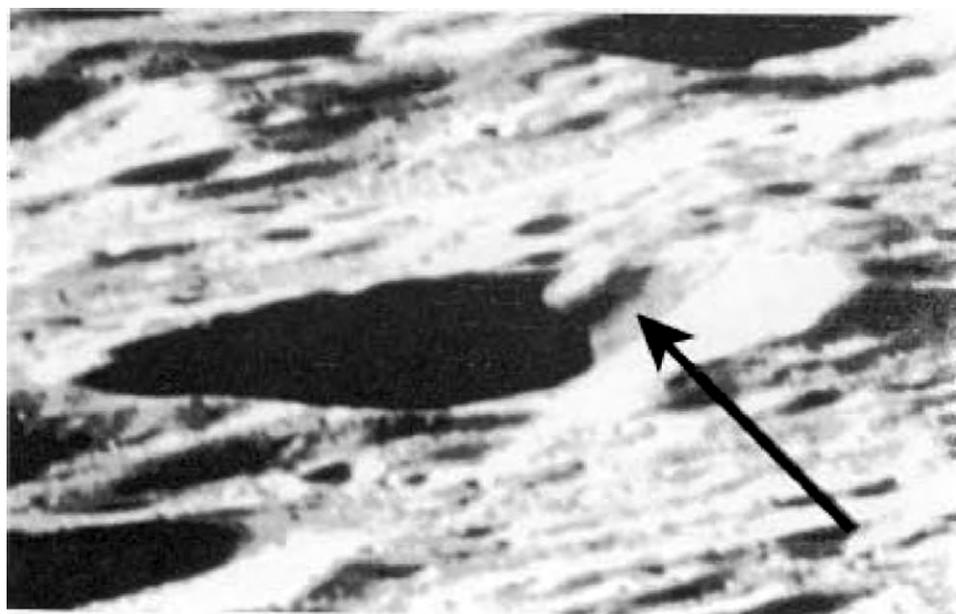

Fig. 104. Photo of Apollo 16, No. 16-18918 (enlargement). Oval object in the large crater

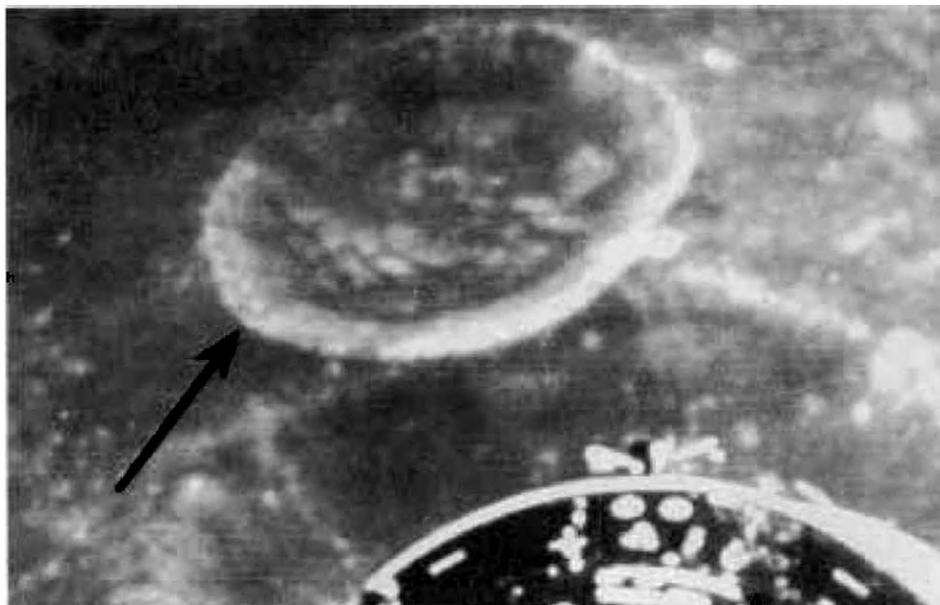

Fig. 105. Photo of Apollo 10, Ne unknown. Four white egg-shaped objects that are parked in the large crater.

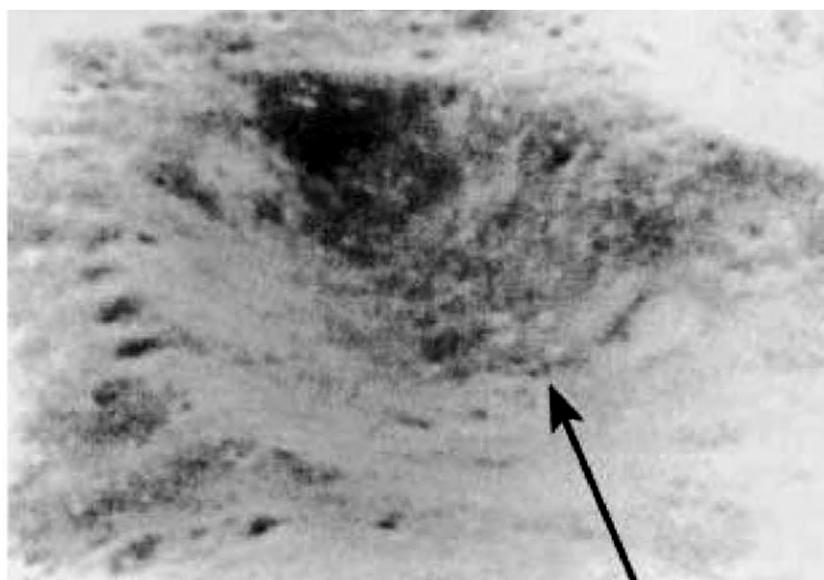

Fig. 106. Figure 100: Photograph of Apollo 10, Ne unknown. Four white egg-shaped objects in the large craters are parked.

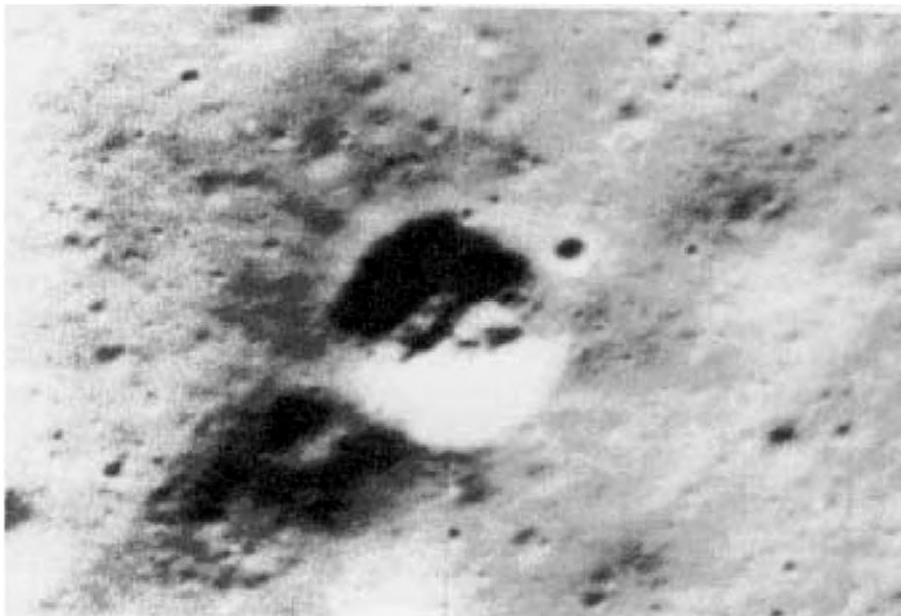

Fig. 107. Figure 101: Photograph by LO III, No. 200 3 (enlargement). Strange objects in the This crater is parked.

Fig. 108. Lunar Orbiter III, No. 194 Photo 3 (enlargement). Note the large letters .. S "in the interior of the crater in this photo.

Fig. 109. Figure 104: LO IV, Ne Photo LO IV 893, Crater Romer Note the large platform and the long object on the mountain in the middle

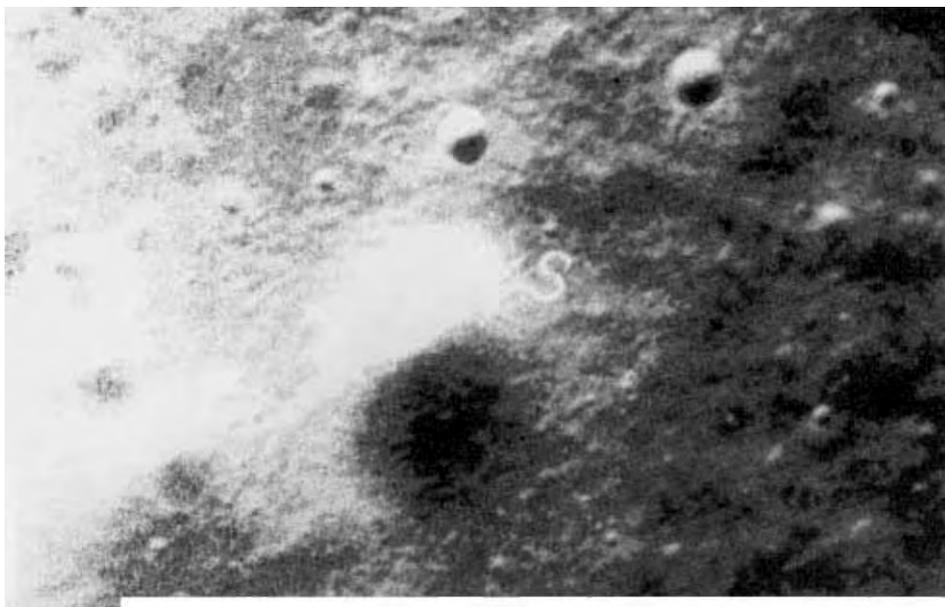

Fig. 110. Photo of Apollo 14, Ne 14-80-10439. Another letter "S". This time, besides this crater.

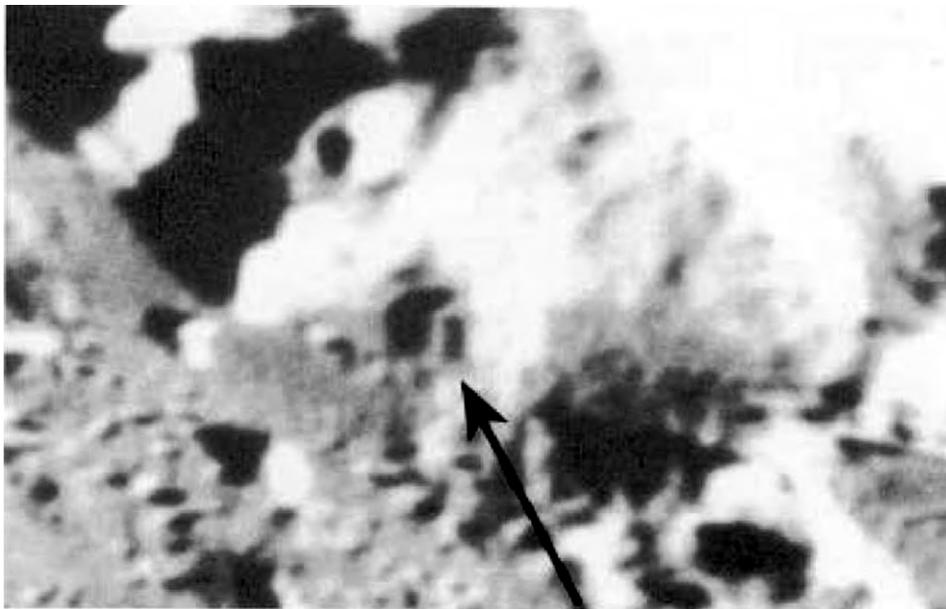

Fig. 111. Photo of Apollo 10, No. 10-32-4810 (enlargement), 130 kilometers north of Triesnecker
Note the cathedral-like entrance, which was cut into the mountain

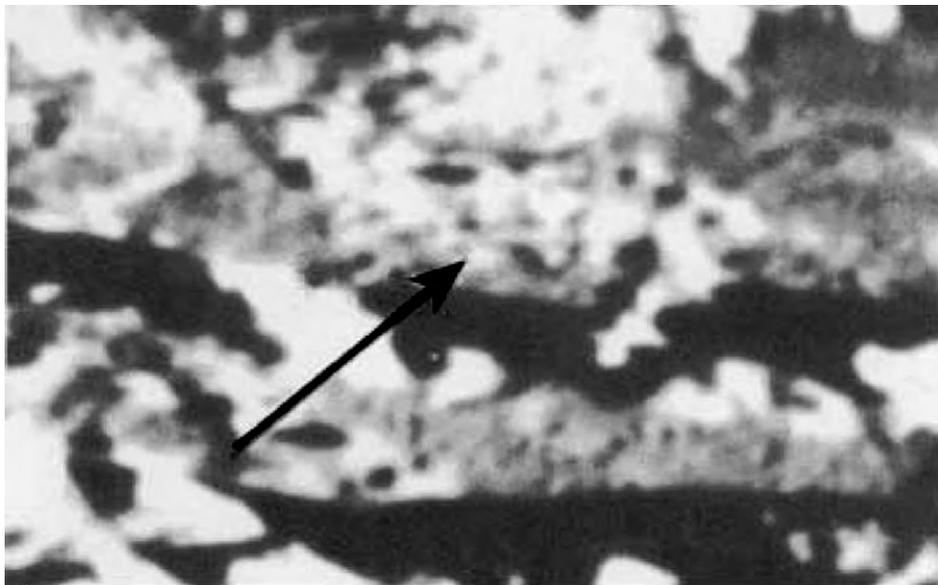

Fig. 112. Photo of Apollo, No. 10-324810 (enlargement), 209 kilometers north of the crater Triesnecker. Note the white bridge-like structure between two mountains

Fig. 113. Photo by NASA Apollo 12, No. 12-7419, the Humboldt crater and its surroundings. Note the dark spots that look just like the dark riverbed vegetation and also between these spots.

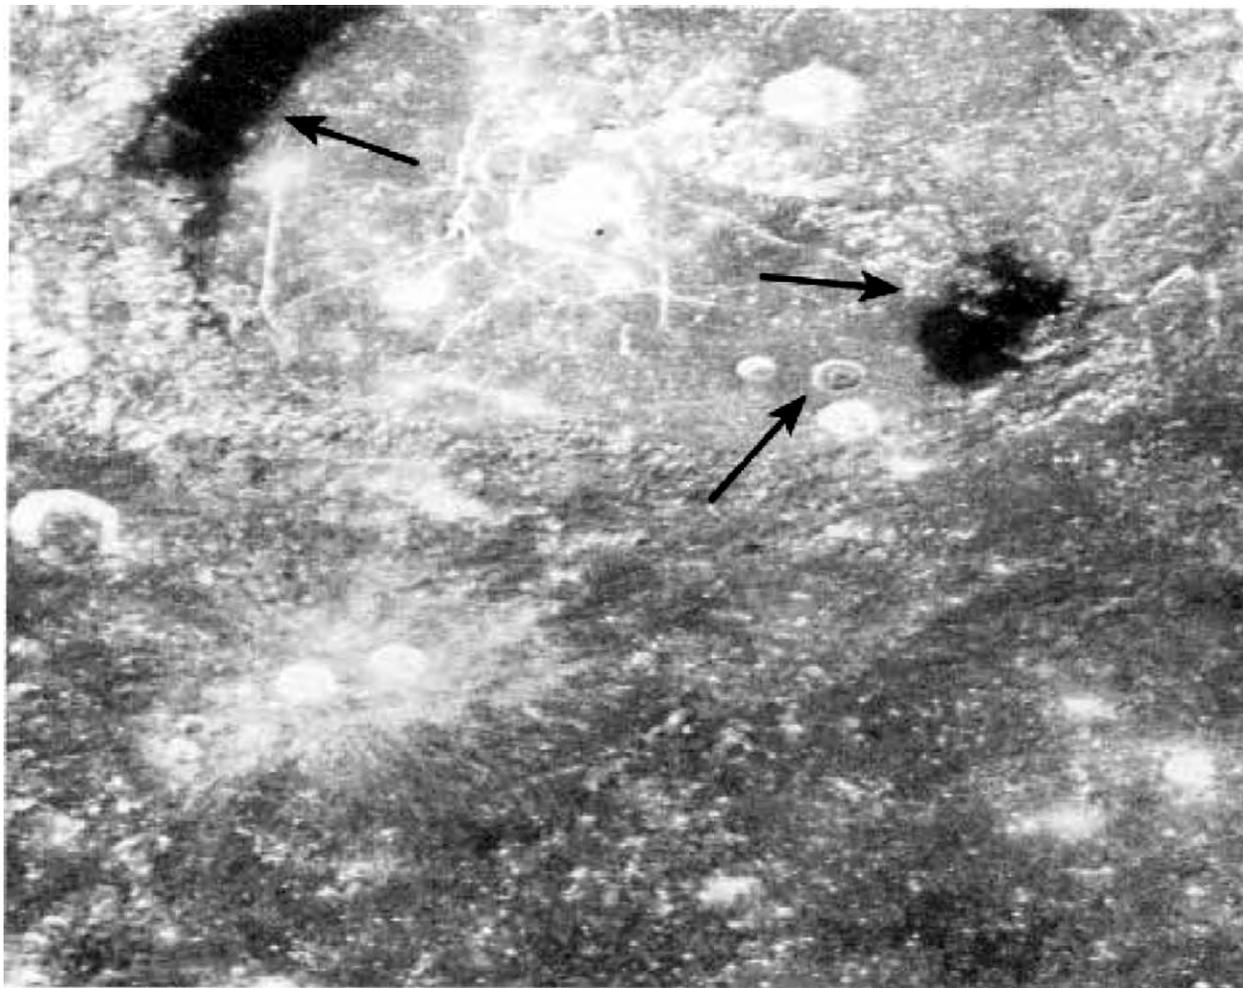

Fig. 114. Picture 108 Photo of Apollo 8 the crater Humboldt and the Southern Sea. It shows spots of potential vegetation and moisture. Also note the crater with the two rings.

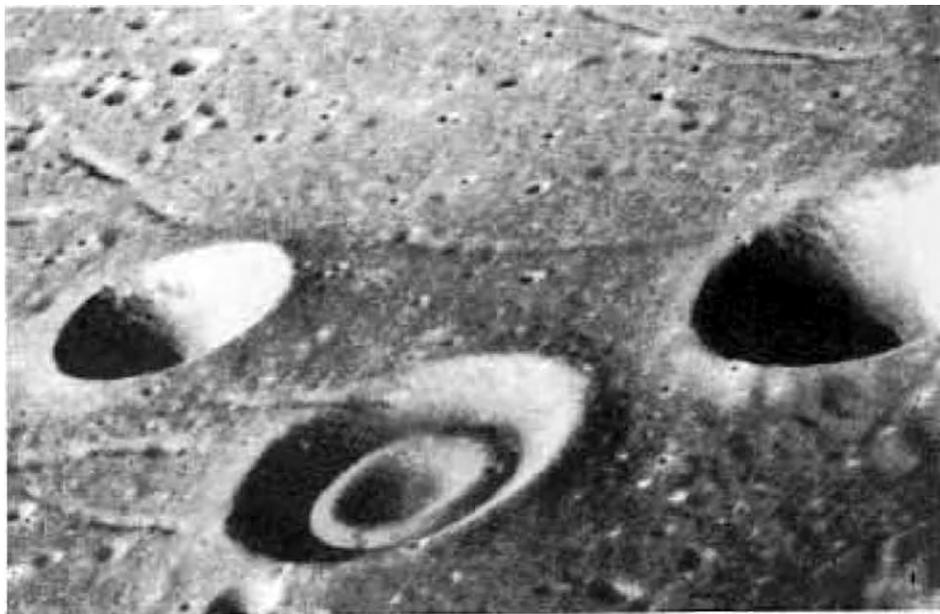

Fig. 115. Photo of Apollo 15, No. 15-12640 (enlargement). The crater with the two rings in the large crater Humboldt This looks very artificial, mining or the product of a large explosion energies (perhaps nuclear?).

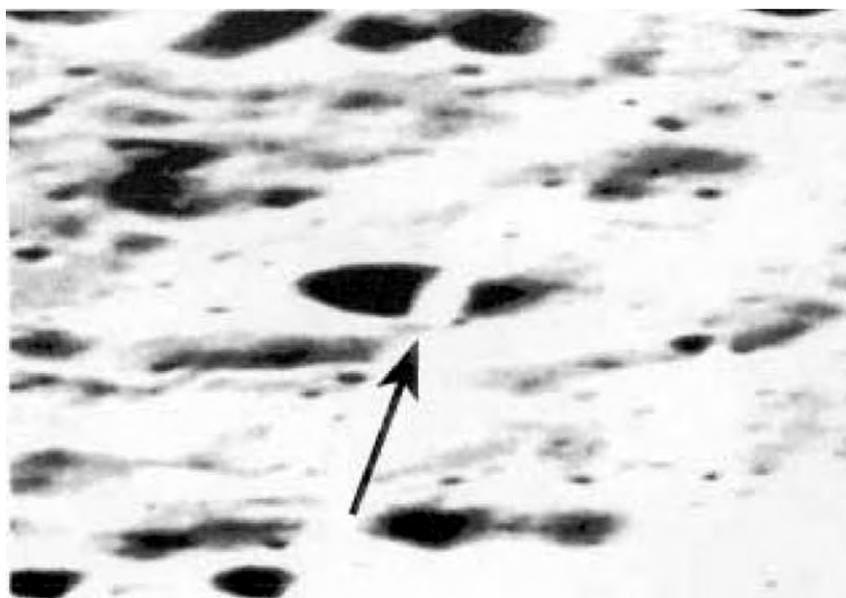

Fig. 116. Apollo 16, Ni: 16-18923 (enlargement), this photo of Apollo 16 shows a crater that appears designed.

Fig. 117. Apollo 16, No. 16-18918 (enlargement). Again, this crater appears clearly in his mind a kind of design show.

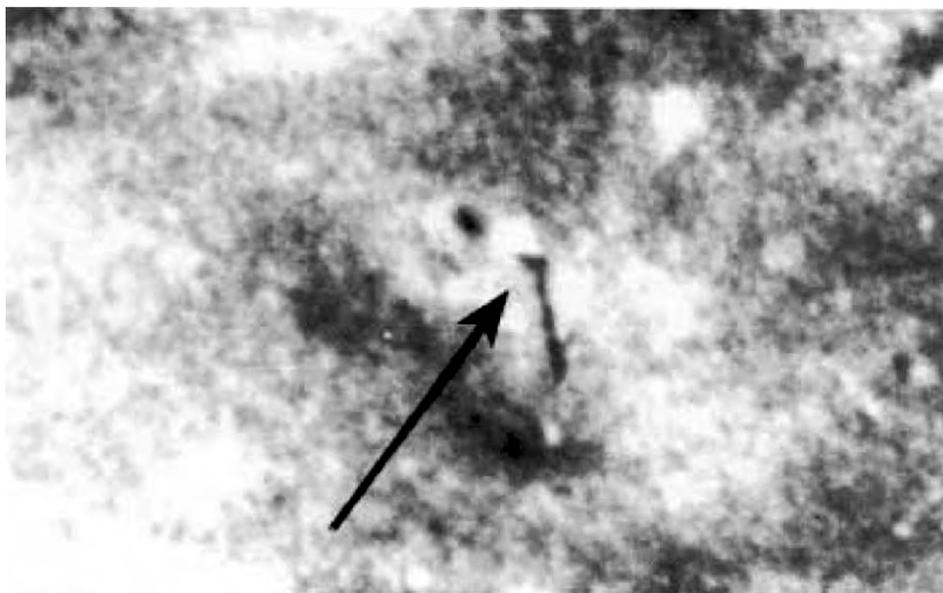

Fig. 118. Photo of Apollo 16, Ne 19 386 (enlargement). Please note a kind of tube or pipe that looks like a spiral. It leads from the bottom to the smaller crater about it. Note the seven or more rings around this strange object.

Fig. 119. Ne 16-19386 (enlargement). Two objects or structures in the interior of this crater, taken by Apollo 16

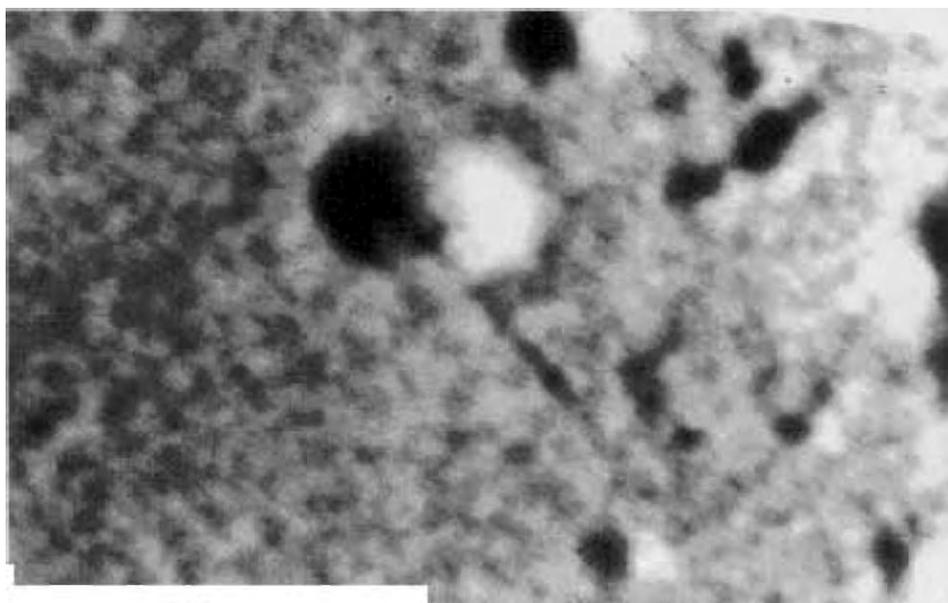

Fig. 120. Photo of Apollo 15 (enlargement). A long tube that rises from a crater.

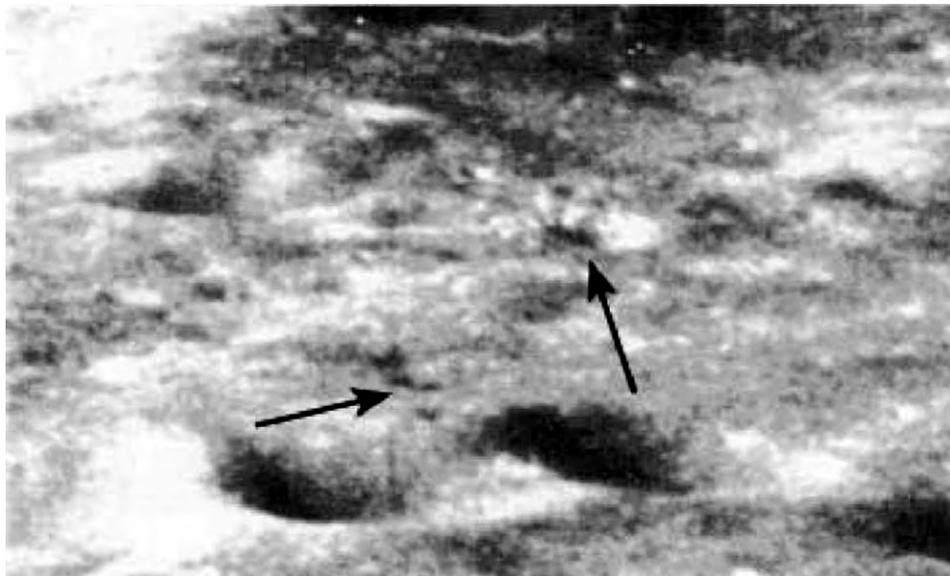

Fig. 121. Photo of Apollo 16, No. 16-19376 (enlargement). Another tube or pipe between two craters. Also note the strange objects in the smaller crater about

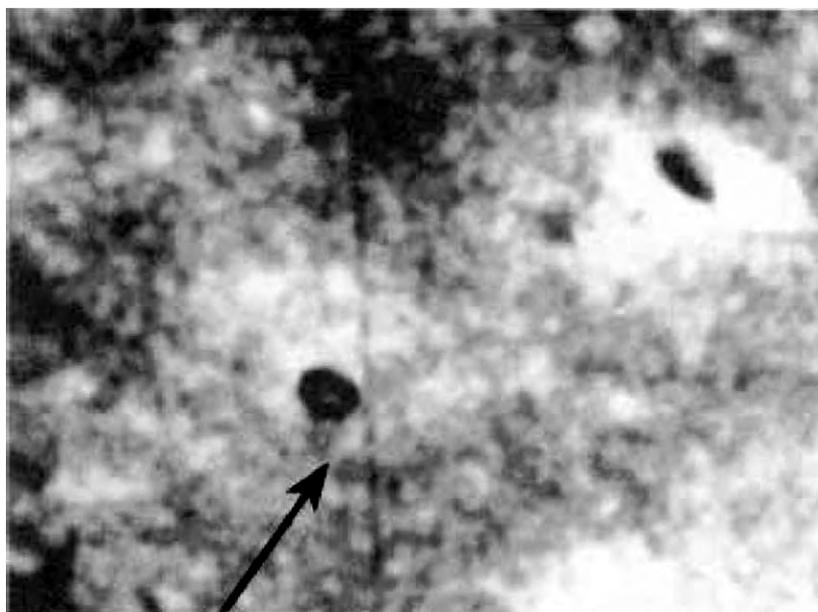

Fig. 122. Apollo 16, No. 16-19386 (enlargement). This photo shows a small pond with an island at the bottom of a shallow crater. Note the long spiraling tube that runs from north to south next to the edge of the crater. They turn the principle of the Archimedean screw?

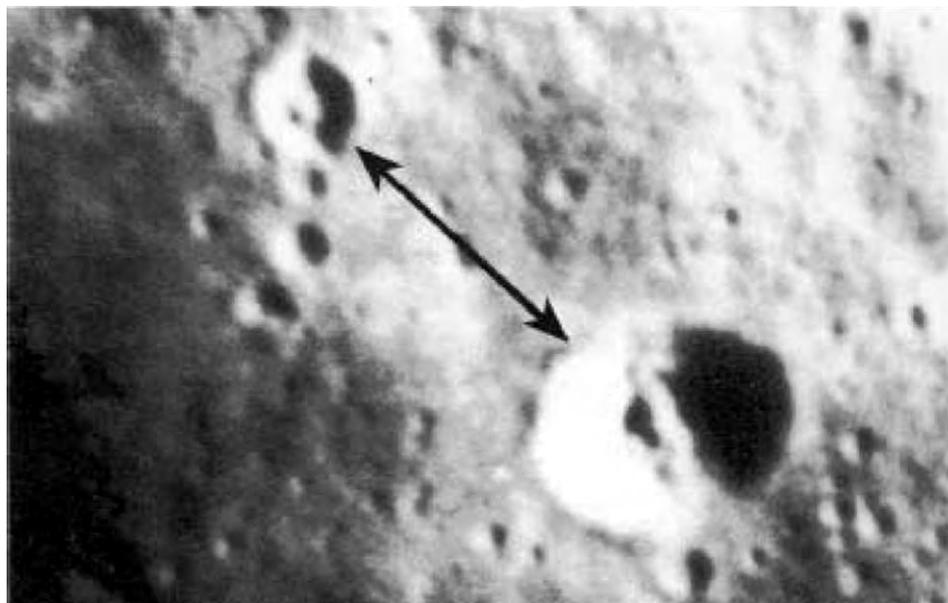

Fig. 123. Photo by Lunar Orbiter III, No. 6H. It shows smoke rising from the bottom of a crater. Note also the white dome in the crater to the northwest.

Fig. 124. Photo by NASA LO HI, No. 133H2 (enlargement) It looks like some kind of construction in this crater

Fig. 125. Photo of Apollo 16, 16-18923 Ne (enlargement). Artificially-looking platforms, recorded on the side of the moon.

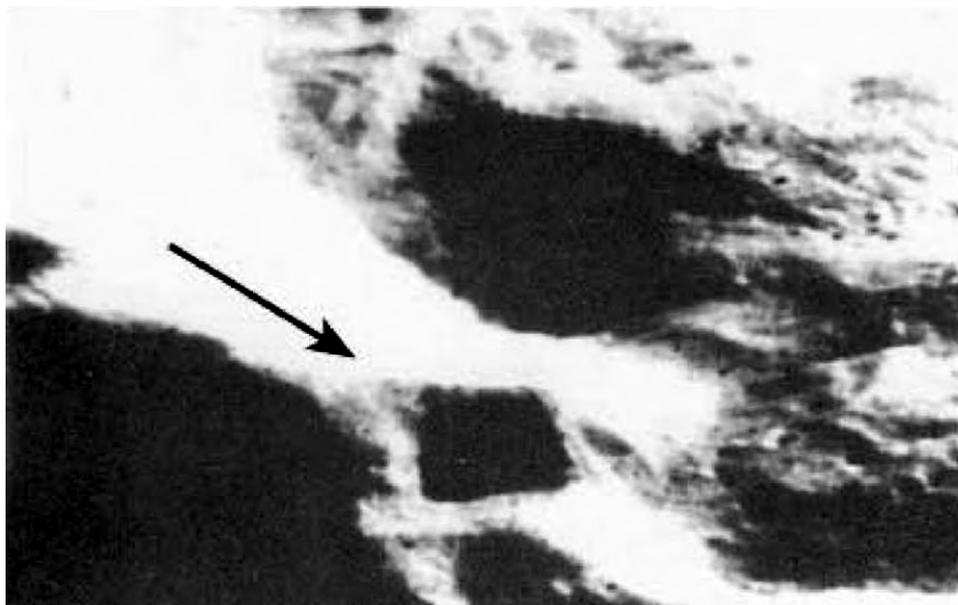

Fig. 126. This photo of Apollo 16 (enlargement) shows a square crater produced on the nature of the moon "square crater"?

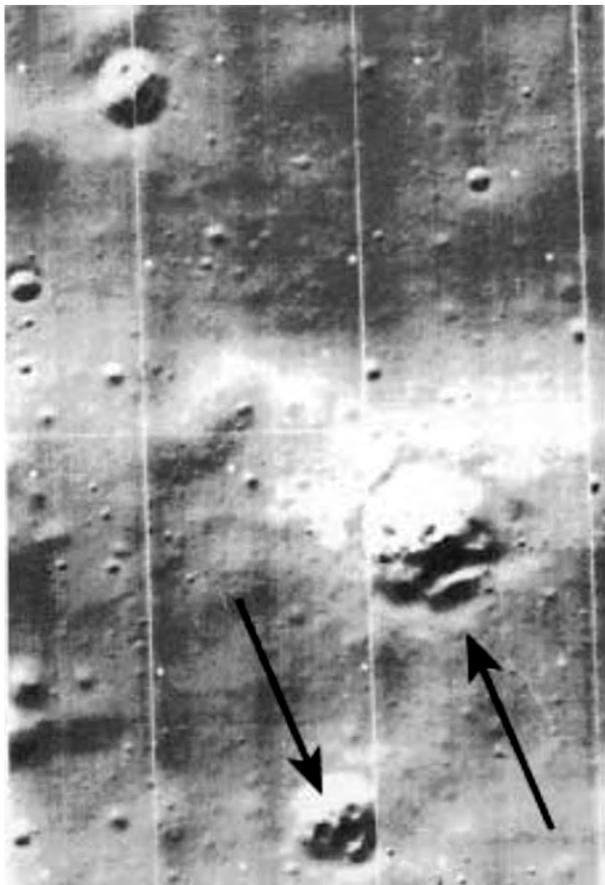

Fig. 127. Photo of LO 111, N194H3 (enlargement). It shows at least three craters with a type of construction inside.

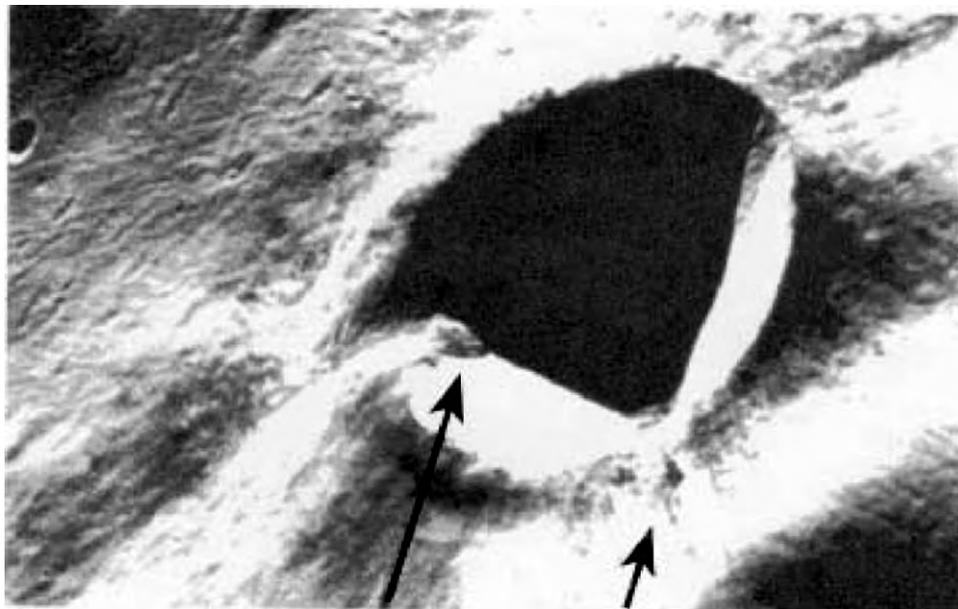

Fig. 128. Hasselblad Photo Ne 15-13181 (enlargement). A kind of machine seems to blow the earth from the crater, which looks suspiciously like mine. Also note the two oval objects south of the crater rim.

Fig. 129. (enlargement). Has photographed Apollo 16 on the Moon pyramids? At the bottom of this crater appear to be at least three.

Fig. 130. Photo of Apollo 8, Ne 8-17-2704 (enlargement). This photo shows two pyramidal structures on the moon.

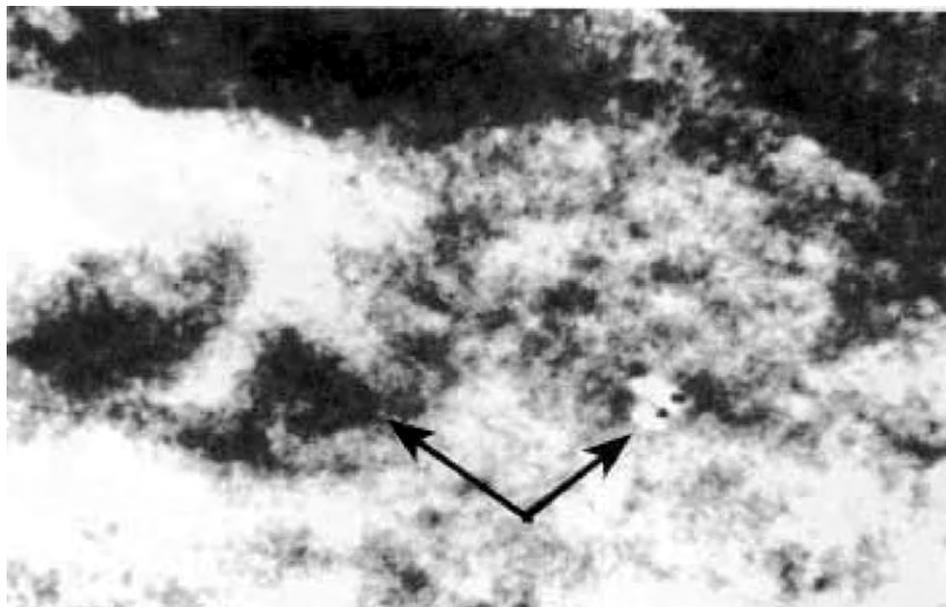

Fig. 131. (enlargement). The same three-sided pyramid-shaped constructs increased 14-fold. Note the two dark objects that are parked in the arrowhead-shaped clearing.

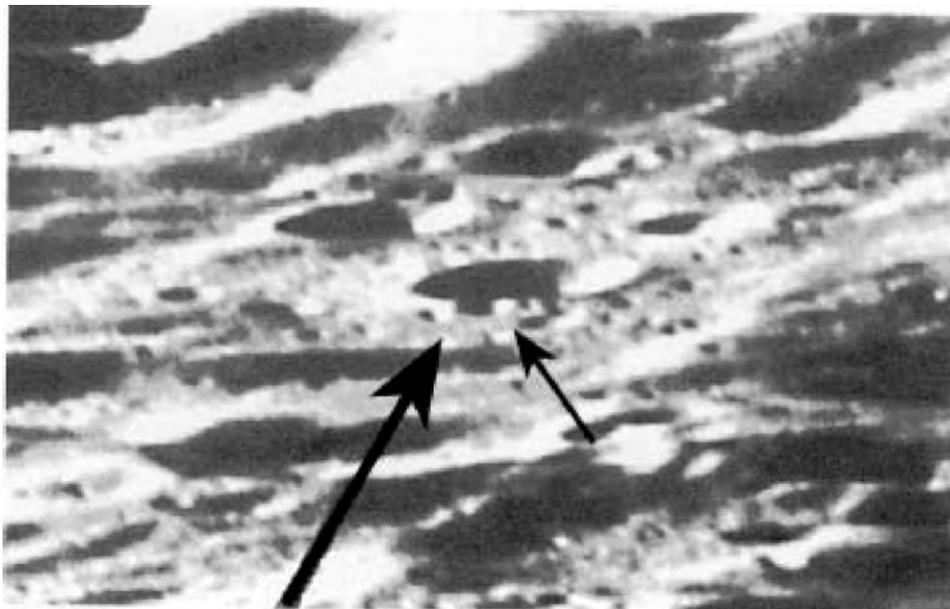

Fig. 132. Photo of Apollo 16, Ni: 16-18918 (enlargement). In this photo are constructions seen that look all the way to tanks or towers

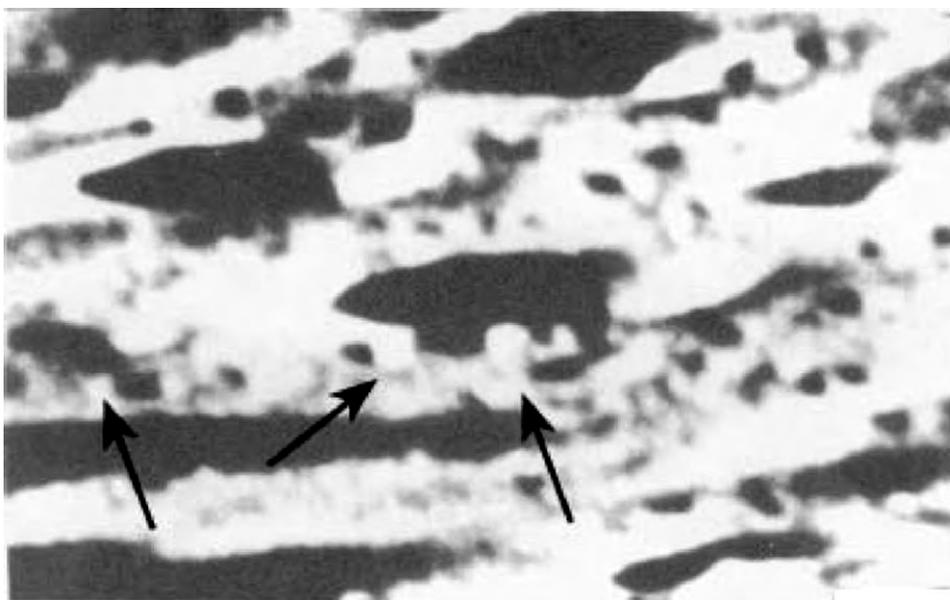

Fig. 133. On the 14x enlarged photo of Apollo 16, the towers or whatever they are also seen clearly.

Fig. 134. NASA Photo nr AS16-120-19229th Near the crater King. Unusual shape, curved formation on the lunar surface.

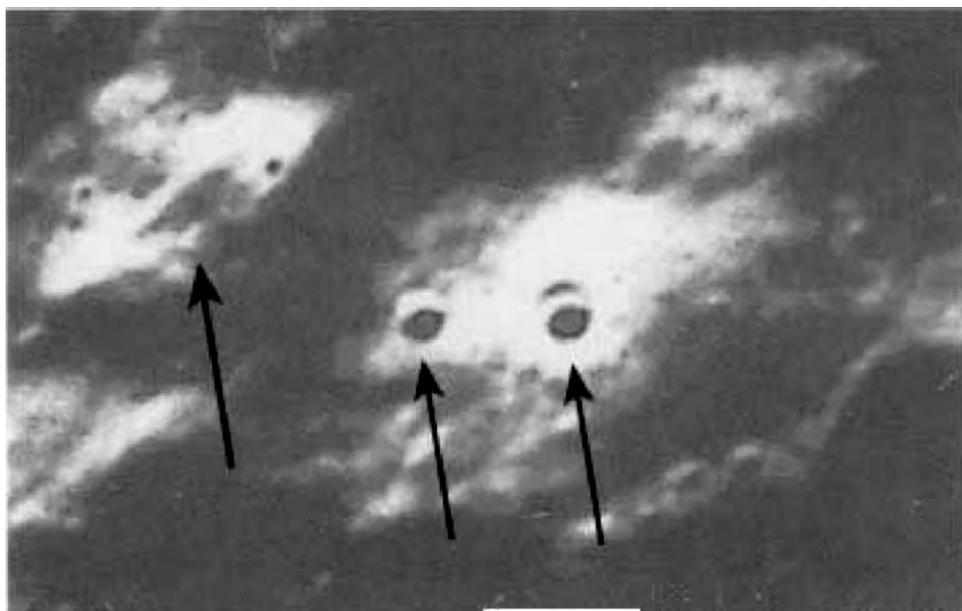

Fig. 135. Figure 129: NASA photo Ne 67 H 1651st Middle: Apparently concentric Dome structures. Top left: Apparently a bridge-like structure. Note the shadow underneath

Fig. 136. Picture 130 Photo of Apollo 16, 16-19376. Area in which objects appear to be numerous disposed on the surface in a symmetrical formation are.

Fig. 137. Picture 131 Messier craters: Note the flow pattern in the double craters.

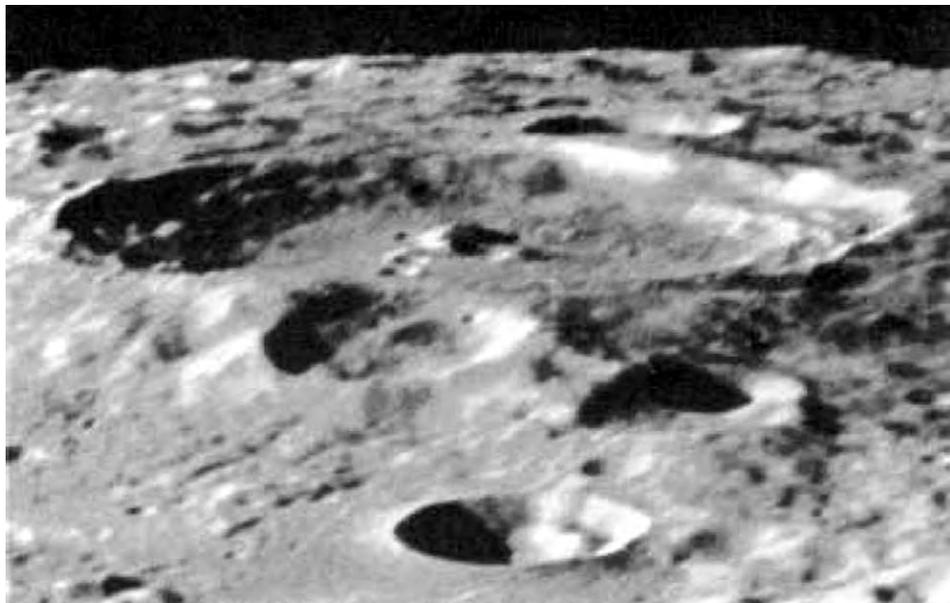

Fig. 138. Figure 132: Allollo 13 - near the crater Bullialdus. Note another Area in which there are apparently more activity, smoke, dust or mud flows from the smaller to the larger craters including crater above

Fig. 139. Figure 133: Enlargement of image 132

136 FRED STECKLING and GLENN STECKLING

Fig. 140. Figure 134: Photograph by NASA's Apollo 16, N.: 16-19265 (Enlargement). Luminous object in the area around the small Crater / the small cave.

Fig. 141. Figure 134a: Enlargement of the area described above.

Fig. 142. Figure 135: The author, Fred Cuttings, pilot and amateur astronomer.

13. Adamski ALLEGATIONS TO THE TEST

George Adamski, who died in 1965 could be the first true pioneer in the field of UFOs are mentioned. He was the author of three famous UFO books, though to take their time very controversial, but some light on the following:

Where did they come from? What are they doing here? Can knowledge be helpful for us? What they do on the moon?

It managed to Adamski, who was also an excellent amateur astronomer to photograph more than a dozen UFO through his telescope. This UFO photographs, probably by far the most detailed in private hands, were part of the great controversy of our time. While many of these pictures as the facts in accordance with recognized and compared them with their personal sightings of UFOErscheinungen, others reported it back with the attitude: "I must see it to believe it." Or "have seen it and believe it is still not."

Between 1948 and 1955, Adamski photographed a number of photographs of glowing UFOs near the Moon. He was able to photograph these glowing objects that so many others: professional and amateur astronomers had seen over the centuries. Adamski photographic evidence was so overwhelming that have been enabled on a global basis to an organized opposition forces to discredit his work. However, there were people who recognized the tremendous courage that this man possessed, when he presented his findings to the public. But Adamski claim for themselves, took on 29 To November 1952 at Desert Center, California had contact with the crew of an extraterrestrial spaceship have been, the critics furious. Adamski was called a madman. "Impossible," was the response of the critics. "UFOs flying around with it. Not you land."

Adamski said the UFOs come mainly from our Solar System. Again, critics trumpeted "Impossible! Because life as we know it can exist elsewhere in the system."

In July 1968, during a second session of Congress, introduced the members of the Committee of prominent scientists, the following question: "Could UFOs in our solar system come from? "Answer:" You could certainly We have no data of any other celestial body in our solar system, which exclude the existence of advanced civilizations definitely ".. This hearing was held before the Committee on Science and Astronautics of the House of Representatives of the United States behind closed doors.

The scientists have been asked a question: "If we have been visited, why are they not land?" Answer: "The fact is that there are many reports of landings, at least 200, which took place in 1954 alone."

On 25 December 1969 printed the Washington Daily Newt following explosive article ". The textbook teaches the Air Force Academy, UFOs might be extraterrestrial visitors," the article notes that there is evidence that UFOs are material objects that are either manned or remote-controlled by beings who are alien to this planet to the often asked question. "Why do these creatures have not been in contact with us?" The textbook offers the following explanation: "We could be the object of intensive sociological and psychological studies, and discussions could have taken place in secret." The textbook concludes that the UFO phenomenon for many thousand years ago a global phenomenon.

The UK space scientist and author of two UFO books, Mr. Leonard Cramp, presented in his recent book, A Piece For A Jigsaw Puzzle states: "Whether Adamski critics like it or not, the Adamski Untertassen are vehicles with a per-gravity propulsion and as well as electromagnetic devices." Laboratory tests of this saucer type have proved that this is so.

The Japanese scientist Shinichi Seike up in the last edition of his The Principles of Ultra Relativity states: the Adamski saucer-type work with a G-field of negative energy. An orbiting, polarized electromagnetic field produced by three spherical capacitors, which are in turn charged by three-phase power converters bring fuel contained in the state of negative energy. "

Mr. Seike, who heads the Japanese laboratory for the study of gravity has, with vehicles of this type successfully conducted experiments and tests.

The British scientist John RR Searl has done over the years experiments with inverse-gravity spacecraft. The rotating electric field of an inverse-G-motor is provided by "A" loaded or unloaded spherical capacitors on the vertices of a regular N-poly-gons sit, charged with N-phase current or rotating electrical dipoles of a pair of balls. The vehicle itself is a large electric generator. Mr. Searl and the National Space Research Consortium at the moment to build a manned space vehicle with a diameter of 45.2 meters and a height of 4.8 meters. The pressure in the cab of 0.35 kilograms per square-

Inches up to 0.49 kilograms per square centimeter set, which happens to be identical to the pressure in the Apollo rocket. These vehicles emit a translucent glow and leave a glowing trail, the negative energy brings.

Adamski reported in his 1955 book, Inside the spacecraft, the moon has a thin atmosphere and that there are also surface water and vegetation. Perhaps we should now see the basis of this evidence his claims in a new light.

When we lived in Washington DC, my family and I were witnesses to a 1963 UFO sighting over the city of Washington. The object looked exactly like the ones photographed George Adamski. This sighting convinced me of the authenticity of Adamski's claims for which the person attacked so violently and as one with a "jump in the bowl" ("crack-pot") was called.

Because of my earlier studies of the slow development of human progress in many thousands of years, I quickly realized that the few participants in our society that we pot crack- called, often precisely those who were helped to lead our civilization from the intellectual and scientific stagnation and they raise on the higher rungs of the ladder of technological progress. Some of these crack-pots were Archimedes, Gutenberg, Copernicus, Columbus, Galileo, Newton, Watt, Franklin, Fulton, Morse, Burbank, Bell, Edison, Pasteur, Marconi, Curie, the Wright brothers, Ford, Einstein, Steinmetz and many others - too many to mention them all.

I realized that someone who has this "honor" is great knowledge and great wisdom. Only the best people in the world, the incumbent in all fields of science without fear and without regard to theories had a lot to give, were with the honorary title awarded crack-pot.

What is the definition of crack-pot? We can explain it with these simple words, by crack, better known as a jump, an opening is created by the flow of ideas extensive influence. A cracked bowl can do what she has received through this jump issue, again. A closed basin is neither.

It is not my intention to offend anyone. My only interest is to tell the truth - to clarify what was previously misunderstood. Because of our new discoveries on the moon I would like to suggest that his critics review their opinion about Adamski claims and consider his point of view fairly, impartially and with scientific acumen.

14. Long overdue CHANGES

The possible discovery of life on the moon will be for some people, especially from the scientific community to accept. If it is almost impossible even to trade long-standing theories against new ideas, so it should have such open-minded people, wherever they may be too gentle, will find the opportunity to do so reasonably priced. Many textbooks must be rewritten if any information would be published on the moon. Our idea of life as we know it would have necessarily to be modified to some degree. It is not easy to give up the attitude of "Knowing". Need it this time, determination and maturity.

From a military point of view of the moon promises much as a strategic area which is not far away from Earth. If the living conditions there so that they can get the people of Earth and its bases, we have in fact discovered a new frontier. It is understandable that the military is trying to protect our country. Perhaps they have so much held in relation to the moon as secret as possible, although I think that if the public wakes up and asked for this information, hopefully the leadership will listen. During the "protection" of the ignorant public to be good in some cases may even be one there can be excessive "protection" of the intelligence of the people are very detrimental. It is also not easy to admit that a power not of this earth, could make all of our defense efforts useless.

There seems to be a great technology to exist on the moon, could participate in if we would only cooperate. Facts have proved that they are friendly to us, because they have allowed our astronauts to explore the moon, to photograph their space ships and facilities, and they allowed them to return safely again. This means that they would like us to know that they are there. We need to work only with them, and we would gain much knowledge here - whether it be about improving our energy sources or the much-needed social change. This is not an easy decision, even though we know that "they" are good for us!

If we accept their technology and trade with them on an interplanetary basis trading would, it would possibly also imperative that we work together on earth and create a united world. This goal can not be achieved easily, as long as from our conflicts and aggression is to beat each other profit.

On the other hand: what opportunities we have for their advanced technology to show where the aliens are hostile intentions should? We could see the problems and unite together in the eye. If we do this but again, we would be forced to cooperate with each other, which would cause us basically to echo a unified world, which does not differ much from those on other planets.

Although officials have not released anything that goes on up above, we still have some of the facts disclosed. It is imperative that we - the people work together, ask questions and demand an answer from time to time in exchange for our hard earned tax dollars. In this case, I am convinced, would sit up many a leader. One thing we have found out for sure, however: The moon does not belong to us. Someone else has already succeeded on a long time to reach him.

Perhaps because of this overwhelming evidence for life on the moon four very important scientists immediately stepped down after the Apollo 11 landing on the Moon: Bill Hess, senior scientist at NASA in Houston, the geologist Albert King, curator of lunar samples in the Lunar Receiving Laboratory (laboratory that the data and samples from the moon took it and examined), PR Bell, chief of the Laboratory LunarReceiving, and Donald Wise. These four highly respected scientist, went to Houston to begin einehrgeiziges program of scientific research in manned space flight. Why should they withdraw all at once in their greatest hour? It seems that they, as the evidence for life on the moon was so overwhelmingly decided to withdraw rather than to live with the secrecy of such a vast knowledge. It is not easy to know as much truth and not to talk about it. Perhaps this is also the reason why some astronauts who flew to the moon, and later changed their way of life and very deep thinking and acting people were.

Despite reasonable or unreasonable secret conversations in space research program that NASA should be supported by all citizens, morally and financially so that they can continue to explore space. No doubt in time will depend on the survival of the people of Earth from NASA research.

All nations of the world should learn from the space program benefits. Today we are faced with large, translucent unsolvable problems such as pollution, energy and food shortages, unemployment, etc.

I would not be surprised if those who live on the moon, a positive solution to the plague had. I am convinced that there are thousands of photographs taken by NASA because of the reduction in funding may not be analyzed, but I also know that many close-ups were taken for obvious reasons in secret files.

I personally have nothing to do with classified material, to be published because this would mean bringing to embarrass the government, and to do this I have no intention. All the evidence I needed, I found in the materials and photographs that were released to the public. Granted, most of the photographs in this book were never shown to the press, but they are a serious researcher nonetheless accessible. The disregard of this book, as I said earlier, it is not to insult anyone's intelligence, but simply to plant a new idea into the minds of the people in the hope that this might in the coming time our life on Earth better.

Former astronaut Anders W. remarked: "The earth is not really the center of the universe. If one considers it from the moon, and it is just as big as one's own, then you see really is no international boundaries. If we look at this grain of sand in the universe can not work together as one humanity, and use this new medium for the benefit of us all, then we will probably never agree on anything, and conjure up our own demise. "

15. WHY SPACE RESEARCH?

It is the nature of man. new frontiers to explore. In any case, the curiosity has led the people in fields that previously were thought to be unattainable. To name a few: the exploration of the Arctic and the erection of Ba-sen there, some of which are operated continuously, deep sea diving and mapping of the seabed, the further penetration into the fascination of flying and exploring the microscopic world of cells, molecules and atoms. The study of magnetism, gravitation, Progravitation, relativity, and the ultra-relativity has shown the people a glimpse of a wonderful future, if he only chooses. to walk the road of progress.

It is only logical that we seek to investigate after the discovery of new frontiers in space, other planets and their satellites, in order perhaps to settle at appropriate times as well.

Many economic benefits would accrue to our civilization, if we could resolve to push forward to this new frontier. This would be nothing more than the many discoveries on Earth that were not previously considered impossible. We also must not overlook another factor, namely the sense of achievement and success that satisfies the human heart with such new adventures. This feeling, which may well have most of us felt that a couple of times already, can be more satisfying than financial gain, although of course, a harmonious combination of both is desirable.

So often we hear how the public and its leadership to vote against the Space Research collects and claims to be a waste of money. Fortunately, the world, though full of such individuals, despite their skepticism, and developed further doubt to a modern society. Ironically, those who oppose progress in all areas of human entrepreneurship and fear him, also the first to indulge in the comfort of new things when they have gotten used to the more luxurious lifestyle.

However, we must be against these people not be too critical, that will be, in time, a part of that progress, which they so studiously evaded.

In the modern society of today, almost all of the technological achievements are interrelated. This is also the space program has proven with its specialized technology in our society already countless benefits to the average citizen is not often seen. Perhaps because of the lack of interest in events that do not affect our personal life immediately. To name but a few of the sites which have brought the space research benefits: the textile industry, the computer science and its applications, communications, electronics, insulation, food, metallurgy, all of these industries were directly affected by the development and application of space science affected.

The combined efforts of many industries in the United States and elsewhere, who joined forces for a common goal were rewarded in 1969 with the successful landing of a man on the moon by the United States. Without doubt this achievement will remain in the minds and hearts of people around the world's largest and most daring adventure of civilization.

We must stop now. The exploration of the moon was only preliminary and has many questions left unanswered, we are only able to meet, if we continue our manned space flights to the moon. It is on the moon too many secrets that need to be explored. The Apollo program can be compared with the first officially recognized discovery of America by Christopher Columbus. He also discovered a new frontier, which was eventually colonized by any country in the world. Today's technological advances have opened the universe to man, and he is now able, through advances in technology, almost every planet to colonize.

Even if the moon had no air - even though we know that he has - so it could deliver only fifty pounds of moon rocks enough oxygen for one person to receive twenty-four hours of life. Today we complete the necessary technology is available to build in any condition bases on the moon. There is really nothing else to emerge as the orbit of the underwater world with nuclear submarines without, to master a completely alien and inhumane environment.

However, we know that the moon is giving life, if sparse, without doubt, because he is not as rich as our planet. Since man on earth was the master of nature and vegetation, he can apply this knowledge to the moon. I think the destiny of man lies in the discovery and subsequent colonization of the infinite cosmos. These new ventures will help to expand the horizon of man and his view of life. He will recognize his individual significance, but also its irrelevance in this range, of which he is but a small spark. Without doubt, the earthly man, as evidenced by the favorable impact gene demonstrated its expanded horizon has already learned at least to a limited degree, with problems on this planet to be done, he has not previously identified or overlooked.

Seeing the world from space to work on the laws of nature, offers a revealing look. Trim the budget on space exploration would have little impact on the social problems on earth, should be diverted those funds in that direction, as some skeptics suggest. Today forty-three percent of the national budget, equivalent to over a hundred billion dollars allocated to these social problems. The actual cost of the space budget amounts to only 3.2 billion or 1.2 percent of the state budget. To escape the space program, these funds would be unwise, in fact, because of the benefits that could be drawn from it, has exceeded the costs many times over.

Spacecraft ever to serve us in the field of communications, navigation, weather observation and monitoring of the environment. We can now consider the planet Earth from space, by special cameras. Infrared, etc. to explore the secrets that lie beneath the surface of the earth, to discover which parts of the earth bring forth the best grain and corn later this monitor for signs of disease or drought. Observations and monitoring from space have helped the Forest Service, the Agriculture, hot sea trials and allowed to produce maps of the earth, as it was previously not possible. For example, a high rise area from the air of a manned spacecraft from one hundred and ninety kilometers altitude was mapped in three minutes what previously required aircraft over twenty-five years, but still much remained to be done left.

Although a large number have been placed by NASA satellites in orbit for scientific purposes, the military operates its own top-secret space program. Many hundreds of secret satellites were put into orbit the earth in order to obtain information on other countries in the world. The space photography has improved to the point that you can shoot a person from outer space.

New killer satellites have made headlines. its purpose is to unwanted satellites of other nations you r ch destroying laser. Every nation is feverishly busy trying to win in the space science and its application to technical superiority.

The industrial production in space will allow us, unaffected by gravity and stronger plastics to produce alloys. We speak now of future factories in space, the earth will hopefully rid of the big problem of pollution. In space, the free energy can be used to the sun and also by focusing on specific microwave receiver stations on Earth sent. Today, some forty foreign Nations willing to contribute 1.5 billion dollars to this program. Many parts for space vehicles will be built in Europe. We can say with certainty that every single penny of every dollar of tax revenue that flows into this program, has been well spent.

Recently conducted at the Aerospace interested individuals to support a collection of NASA. The Washington Post reported on as January 1981 that about 100,000 dollars were collected to help the national space agency, whose budget was slashed. Dr. Robert Frosch, head of NASA, said that this donation show that the public of their leadership in recognizing the importance of space exploration has to be well ahead. He added: "As important as the money you have collected and donated to the deep and abiding commitment to a strong and continuing exploration of space is by many people."

This money is to the effect that NASA used to be for the analysis of data from the Viking mission to Mars and to create global maps of the planet Earth, Viking 1 and 2 were in the summer of 1976 in the orbit of Mars, and both dismissed landers on the surface. Over 52,000 pictures, and Mountains of data obtained from the Viking mission. The Viking 1 lander of work in January 1981 still - after four and a half years on the surface of Mars. At one time, more than half of our nation, directly and indirectly to do with the space program.

To land a man on the moon, was a very worthwhile goal that we set and achieved. Why not now explore the moon, as we have explored the earth and then go beyond to the planets in our neighborhood and maybe even to other solar systems?

It seems that many young people today are looking forward to the challenge. However, many show very disappointed that their intelligence to the various fields of space science, space flight and space exploration can not provide. The new generation is waiting for their chance.

16. BEYOND THE MOON

This chapter covers not just the moon, but it goes beyond our solar system. Today, despite our Mariner and Viking Mis-sions to Venus and Mars, the mystery behind our neighbor planet Teten only become larger, and many questions still remain unanswered. The most urgent question is: Is there life on these worlds? Many scholars have her conviction that the secret about the life on these worlds can not be satisfactorily resolved until we send a manned spacecraft to the planet and explore it thoroughly. The late Wernher von Braun, rocket expert at NASA, once said that manned space flights are much more efficient than remote-controlled devices. The man eventually leads his roles in space more efficiently than any computer could be made of this ever. "Besides," remarked Brown, "Man can also be produced by unskilled workers in mass."

The mysteries are piling up, because after the first analysis of MarinerMission the United States and the Soviet Verena mission was reported by many contradictory findings. Because these secrets can not be studied through telescopes, because the planets are too far away, we must fully rely on the data that the satellites transmit to Earth. For centuries, for example, our moon is the target of endless hours of telescopic observations. These observations have shown us that at least some unexplainable things happen up there. The problem is that even now exist for our Apollo landings these secrets still. This shows that we know to a certain extent, what happens, but feel free to talk about it.

We receive from our probes to Venus and Mars on accurate information, and that makes it even easier to conceal information if we so desire. Therefore it is up to officials to determine whether they want to publish these truths or falsehoods, which they have complete control, or not. If we lived in an honest world, it would be easy to believe everything we are told. But most of

We know better. Considering the very real possibility of the "great cosmic cover-up" as some writers have called them, the public should always be vigilant about the validity of the statements from the authorities. A lot of "reading between the lines" and a tireless search for conflicting opinions to the press and the public are needed to pull the web of the public eye, before it is too tightly woven.

We live in a privileged country and our constitutional rights allow us to question the officials and our leadership. In our country where the government of the people is the people and for the people must this relationship be preserved under all circumstances, so that our freedom is preserved.

Freedom is only to do as opposed to the belief of many, not only the right for everyone, what he likes, but it also includes the duty to seek in things political, economic and religious truth and to preserve. Without doubt, the technical achievement, a remote-controlled spacecraft into the endless expanse of space is to control and to target its target with such accuracy, a great engineering company. Complex mathematical and ballistic problems must be solved in order to fulfill these missions. We know they have arrived - but the data they send, and reliable? Were in the receiving stations on Earth received data sent in a code that could be deciphered only by top scientists with advanced Dechiffriergerten.

My point is simple: Even if those beeps, dots and dashes are literally one of hundreds of scientists, how many of them really know what this language before it is decoded? Obviously, only a few know, and we must trust them. I remember the discrepancies that arose when the probe Mariner of the United States and the Soviet Union, the venous probe differences in the temperature of Venus up to 200 C to Earth lagged. Of course, both nations claimed technical superiority and insisted. dal3 were their instruments better, respectively. Because of this conflict, secret meeting between the space experts of the United States and the USSR in Europe were held. to coordinate the publications, since such disagreements lead to dissatisfaction among the public, curiosity, skepticism and anxiety.

The soft landing of probes on Venus caused more controversy than expected. We were told that Venus, Earth's sister planet, almost as large as the earth, but he was charged atmosphere hundreds of times more dense and with sulfuric acid. The people have accepted that. But when told the officials that the spacecraft had landed with a parachute on Venus, exceeded the imagination. The Declaration is a-times. It is impossible for an object this size, that weight and the density with a parachute through the atmosphere, which is a hundred times as dense as the Earth, to land on the surface of Venus. It is as if one would try to bring the same device with a parachute to six hundred meters deep to the bottom of our sea, because there the pressure ratios with those of the Venusian atmosphere are the same. Even NASA scientists admitted this is an indirect, not in relation to the planet Venus, but in terms of Titan, Saturn moon. The NASA press release of 12 Said in December 1980. that Titan has a four hundred and eighty kilometers thick atmosphere and its surface can not be seen as a result. The conditions there seem to be identical to those on Venus. Should be called if future spacecraft, Cronos probes sent to Titan and landed by parachute, then pointed to NASA's space expert James Murphy, the parachute would not work because the atmosphere of Titan is too tight.

If the atmosphere of Venus really is a hundred times denser than the us-engined, a lander would of itself - like a pearl on the ground of a shampoo bottle, float to the surface. This would make a landing by parachute unnecessarily. In addition, a temperature of 430 C produces an enormous thermals. Because of the thermal activity, I seriously doubt that even if the Venusian atmosphere would be identical to ours, would be an easy thing to land with a parachute there. When the Soviet Venera probes, one of her on the surface of Venus landed, they sent some excellent photographs, which showed a bright landscape of hills and rocks, just like our deserts on Earth. This brought out even more surprising, because such a dense atmosphere would cause total darkness on the surface of Venus. As she brought it about, this well-lit area in a flood of sunlight to photograph remains a mystery.

Further questions arise, such as the reports, the surface of Venus would be mapped by radar. If this were possible, then we should be able to map our seabed by means of radar. However, this is not possible, because on Earth the radar beams reflecting off the water and continue to do so clouds of water vapor, which were also discovered on Venus. One would assume that the density and consistency of water, we should rather try to use the mapping of the Venus surface sonar. As is evident from the recently published maps, allows the radar seems to be working well, what can doubt the fact that the Venusian atmosphere is really as close as we are told.

Recently published findings of the USSR, which shows great interest in Venus reported by electromagnetic discharges in the form of lightning on the planet. Your spaceship vein 11 also reported by a powerful storm, one hundred forty-five km wide and twenty-five Blitzendladungen per second. Scientists from the United States found it quite remarkable, because no one had expected. To see lightning on Venus. Of course, they are surprised, because a hundred times denser atmosphere than ours, which were loaded with sulfuric acid would be self-earthing and lightning would make it most unlikely. Does this mean that we are deliberately geflittert with inaccurate information? Or it meant that the officials are trying to tell us something, just like they did with the moon? No complete revelations, only here and there a little bit contradictory, to bring us food for thought ...

There are more surprises on Venus. One of them is their cloud formations that surround the planet completely. The rotation of Venus, a time about its axis, was determined by means of radar inter alia, on two hundred and eighty days. Let's hope that this was done correctly. Photographs of the Venusian cloud pattern and the behavior of their weather, at least in the upper atmosphere, we are quite familiar, for they seldom exactly like our Earth from. The cloud patterns move in and counter-clockwise away from the equator to the northern and southern hemisphere, and it takes about four days to orbit the planet once. One begins to wonder why these clouds behave exactly like the one on the earth, which also need about the same time to orbit the Earth. In other words, which move the clouds?

The contradictions continue. One has been that it was important to sterilize all the spaceships of the United States, which should land on Venus to carefully. Here the question arises as to the necessity of sterilization in an atmosphere with more than 430 C which is still more than four times as hot as boiling water.

It is true that certain bacteria can survive in many hostile conditions and can even multiply, such as in cooling water for nuclear reactors in the tanks of jets or barrels in gasoline, as I demonstrated a scientist at Los Angeles. Even deep in our seas in the vicinity of hot volcanic geysers survive certain strains of bacteria and algae. But I'm secure that ordinary bacteria we are exposed daily to the surface of the earth would, enjoy long life on Venus none, it should be there actually as hot as you would have us believe.

When speaking of the contamination of other planets: it has even the remotest corners of space scattered microorganisms found, which were probably deposited there by the trail of Earth's atmosphere, or perhaps from another planet. Since these organisms seem to "survive the winter sleep almost indefinitely, they could be with time, attracted by its gravity, part of the atmosphere of another planet, slowly float to the surface and multiply there. If this is true, then we in fact live in a chemical universe in which "infect" one planet to another with the seeds of life would be. This is certainly an interesting idea, which it in our search for the secrets of nature in space and on other worlds worth considering.

We have high temperatures in the ionosphere of the earth. In about two hundred and ninety kilometers above where the cosmic rays hit our atmosphere is produced by the decay of atmospheric molecules have a tremendous friction. There, temperatures were measured up to 980°C. Could it be that the measurements of high temperature on Venus originated in the Venusian ionosphere, as our probe flew down with it? This is to be noticed.

Another interesting explanation in terms of temperature, is positive that the sun and the planets are negative and all swimming in a sea of electromagnetic energy. The sun rays are of every planetary body to its size attracted to different degrees and at different rates. If that's true, it would also explain why the temperature in space is 360 degrees below zero, no matter where in the room, around the Earth, Jupiter, Saturn, or even further afield. It would also explain why the larger planets like Jupiter and Saturn reflect more heat. When the sun emits heat, why then 360 degrees below zero prevail in space? The gravity of Jupiter and Saturn is much larger than the gravity of the earth. In this case, would these larger planets, if my interpretation is correct, tighten the sun's rays with much greater intensity and speed than the Venus and the Earth and the moon itself. In fact, should have the idea of cosmic rays in this case, only one-sixth of the intensity as on Earth.

On the other hand, makes the friction that occurs on Jupiter and Saturn, when these rays hit their atmosphere created on this planet heat and warmth. This explains, making her crack is made.

According to current theories behind each planet Mars, a world of ice or frozen rock. This theory was shocked when our Voyager spacecraft discovered volcanic activity on Jupiter's moon Io. In fact, Jupiter and Saturn, with its many satellites it can be discovered every day and always give us new puzzles, compared with independent solar systems. Granted, my theory has not proved correct, but at least I can offer an explanation for the large number of unanswered questions.

On the other hand, our old accepted theories have certainly provided no satisfactory explanation. In other words, their ideas are no better and no worse than mine.

The next planet, I want to mention is Mars. As the United States in 1976, it succeeded, Viking 1 and 2 to land successfully, brought great joy among the people of the earth. This was a success that the

Was worthy of celebration. After the excitement had somewhat subsided, some nagging questions have been raised in relation to the reports about Mars, which had been released to the public. I followed these events carefully and the end of August 1976, I saw myself obliged, for a national magazine published an article titled Life on Mars to write. This article was reprinted later in Europe and Japan. I give it here again with only minor changes:

„, For centuries, man has asked on this earth, whether it elsewhere on the distant planet that you see at night across the sky, life exists or not. Mars, the fourth planet from the Sun would, along with Venus, our second nearest neighbors, the place could be the most logical to assume that there is life similar to how we know it.

Probably it all started with the Italian astronomer Giovanni Schiaparelli in 1877 by the famed Canali reported or canals on Mars. Only intelligent beings could have created such structures has been suggested.

Later, around the turn of the century, Percival Lowell was in his observatory in Flagstaff, Arizona, 1906, the outstanding expert on Martian observations. He also told of Schiaparelli's Canali and supported them.

Even later succeeded the famous newscaster and actor Orson Wells, millions of Americans with his famous radio plays of 1938 War of the Worlds in fear put in which he portrayed it as a report of an actual invasion of beings from Mars, the New Jersey had landed.

Decades later, in the sixties, Soviet astronomers announced to an astonished scientific world that their intensive studies of the planet Mars have shown that the two moons of Mars as an artificial, should be considered by man-made satellite. Their observations were based on a number of very remarkable facts led to this conclusion. Both Martian moons orbiting the planet in an orbit too close, only six thousand miles away. Normally, they would fall over time on the planet. Also reflected both moons too much light to be naturally. Perhaps the most surprising fact was that both the planets circling clockwise. All other known planetary bodies and satellites rotate in a counterclockwise direction. Even the entire Milky Way, with its countless stars rotate counter-clockwise, not just the small moons of Mars. Granted, the idea that two of a planet orbiting a celestial body with eight kilometers of the other sixteen kilometers in diameter - could be artificial, is somewhat controversial and is beyond the imagination.

On 16 November 1969 found the well-known scientist and astronomer Dr. Harold C. Urey, a few things that were as surprising as the his Soviet colleagues. Dr. Urey told the center for manned space vehicles in Houston, Texas: "We should be very careful not to send manned spacecraft to Mars, since life 'there might be hostile.." Dr. Urey received the Nobel Prize for Chemistry in. same article he also defended the space program and said that we could afford it, because it would cost only half a percent of gross national product.

We continue to browse the pages of history until the year 1976 and our last Viking missions to the red planet, it seems that we have proven with certainty that all these men wrong is not it? It may surprise some of you have to say but after endless hours of study and exploration of our two missions to Mars I: No, we have absolutely no evidence that these men were wrong. On the following pages I will try to explain to you my findings in the most logical way, so you can make your own mind.

The public reaction can be approximately summarized as follows: Forty per cent were disappointed firmly of the wholly negative view of things the Viking mission, and fifty percent, that exists on Mars, intelligent life and that the officials who are responsible for the program to conceal it for a reason, while ten percent think that was the Viking probes to Mars at all, but rather sent to the moon. All in all, there is a large general distrust of official agencies and their ethics. Undoubtedly comes from the obfuscations present some distrust in the past and the charges, the accused, some of our government agencies against each other.

I think we managed to land these two probes to the planet Mars, but that is their real discoveries and most of the images classified material that has not yet shown up to this day the public.

My search resulted in the following findings:

We were told that Mars is about half as large as the earth, enjoying a gravity at the surface by about forty percent of the Earth's gravity and that the atmospheric pressure amounts to about 7.7 millibars compared to about 1,000 millibars on of the earth. It is reported the density of the Martian atmosphere was less than one percent that of the earth. We were also told that the temperatures would be enough on Mars from -30 C in the early afternoon, up to 86 C at night. Viking 1, which landed near the Martian equator, drew a colder temperature than Viking 2, which went down about one thousand six hundred miles farther north, closer to the polar caps.

The amazed scientists discovered a hundred percent error of measurement of the hot atmosphere. The argon content of the Martian atmosphere was not thirty percent, as they had thought, but only three percent. A fault the same magnitude was admitted when a much higher water vapor concentration was measured, as we had expected, according to measurements from the Earth.

Dr. George Sand said of the mission control: "It is obviously more humid than we assumed. While parts of the day there was ground fog at the landing site. In the atmosphere, 30 were found My water is enough not only to have caused ground fog, but frost and snow. '

I'm no scientist, but I have enough time on meteorology to be able to say that the existence of ground fog on Mars shows that the temperatures are much warmer than where we are told in the official reports. Ground fog is the product of warm, moist air moves over cool water or land masses. Ground fog, like every cloud, is the product of temperatures above the freezing point of 0 C.

Interestingly, one can also notice that was photographed at an altitude of approximately 4,500 meters above ground level water vapor clouds. I can assure you that it's not like all the other clouds Kondenswolken including simple ground fog at an atmospheric pressure of only 7.7 millibars can give. Water vapor clouds on Earth, extend to 4,500 meters altitude, but even at this level is still our atmospheric pressure 200 millibars - enough to get those clouds.

We are told that there is on Mars to four and a half thousand meters in altitude water vapor clouds. The temperatures must therefore be at least four and a half to three thousand feet above the freezing point. When moist air rises, it condenses and forms in a certain amount depending on the temperature at a certain altitude clouds. This is called the "dew point level." At this point it must be noted that lower temperatures, there are as determined as the said 85 °C in some regions on Mars, but not everywhere. We have here on earth temperature records from -88 °C in Antarctica, and we know that life exists on this planet.

With regard to the Viking probes, we also find a few more points on which it is worth thinking about.

It was reported that the Viking landers did on Earth weighs five hundred forty-four kg. Our reports on the gravity on Mars, according to the probes would prevail there almost two hundred and eighteen pounds. The parachute had a diameter of fifteen meters. A fifteen foot tall parachute, at which a weight is two hundred and eight of ten kilograms would slow down the charge in the atmosphere sufficient to their speed appropriately to the firing of a recoil-raketeinzustellen. However, in the low density of the Martian atmosphere would have, as we were told (less than one percent of ours), a fifteen foot tall parachute absolutely no braking effect. It is even doubtful whether in

This fabulous atmosphere ever existed enough air molecules to open the umbrella. If you calculate the size, needs a parachute in such a thin atmosphere, he would have an approximate diameter of 2.3 kilometers. It does, however, the question of where we wanted to put a thing and what's weigh a charge would be. Surely at least nine hundred pounds. It would take about 18.5 m<sup>2</sup> space to accommodate him. That's more volume and weight than the probe itself. Because they so a fifteen-foot parachute used to air on Mars is much closer than we were told. I would say it has a density of about forty percent of the density of the earth.

The probe triggered at 1220 meters above ground level of the fifty-foot wide parachute descent and activated its three missiles that they abbremsen like three giant flares up to a successful landing. However, producing these three rocket engines r s not only thousands of degrees crack, but also the enormous pressure. These two factors not only sterilized the landing area completely before touchdown, but also blew away all ground of biological value within a radius of at least thirty yards of the probe around. We should ask ourselves how we can find in such ground any sign of life. The scientists should have asked this. Maybe they did it so well. In the meantime, this little shovel digging and looking further into the sterilized soil.

The magazine Scientific American had to say in a recent article about Mars: "The environment on Mars is not nearly so hostile that it excludes life. We should not make too much hope to receive from the Viking mission, a definitive answer. "

You can still find more interesting points. For example, the sand dunes on Mars that were taken from orbit, the same height and the same distance apart as the sand dunes on Earth in the Sangre de Cristo Mountains in Colorado. In an atmosphere of Mars is less than one percent of ours, it might give these sand dunes, under any circumstances!

It has been suggested that hurricane-force winds moving from 320 km / h or more are needed to these grains of sand on Mars, but until now there was no logical explanation, where in an environment of constantly below zero degrees Celsius, these winds of 320 km / h are to come. Again, Mars must, at least in some regions, be warmer to make first ever arise once the wind. As we know, wind caused by the fact that warm air rises from the floor to be replaced by colder air masses that fill the gap. The Viking spacecraft recorded just winds up to 64 km / h and not up to 320 km / h. So how the dunes got there? Or better yet, as the wind was there, in an atmosphere that is only one percent of Earth's atmosphere and hot a temperature of - 85 C?

I think we need to be very sensitive to these things, because it turns out that just happened too many things no logical sense. If we can find that out, it can certainly also the scientists and others working on the project. They seem to "speak with forked tongue" talk.

Viking 2 has revealed that the polar caps of Mars are pure snow, just frozen water. Also, it often snows and that the atmosphere is saturated with water vapor over the polar caps. Sounds good? Let's move on. In an article from NASA reported that the poles of Mars are made from frozen water with temperatures of - 68 C to - 85 C. The article continues: "At the North Pole in the summer time, so the ice cap on. moment at least. "I would like to know how to ice at temperatures below zero degrees melt may have been reported as!

Dr. Martin, who recently returned from his position at Pasadena Viking Control resigned, said before the Academy of Astronautics, "Our biological instruments on Mars positive signs have lives measured in a biological form, even if we can find no organic substances ". It is amazing that they have ever found such little evidence has at such a flared landing. An analysis of the environment on Mars by proving that there carbon, nitrogen, oxygen, and sufficient amounts of water vapor there. Are these not the basic elements of life?

I quote from Pasadena to NASA: "If we had placed the Viking landers in our parking lot in Pasadena and get the same chemical and biological results knife, as we now get from Mars, we would have definitely called signs of life." I leave you to imagine what that might mean.

I believe that we continue to unproductive and irresolvable difficulties will be plagued with questions, as long as we always continue to send probes to other worlds in the assumption that there is life solely on our little earth, instead of that we are able to see that all the worlds basically the same "stuff are made.

The planet will not only heat of their sun in the form of friction when rays hit its atmosphere, but by the same process is also removed from the planet body heat that radiates and heats the atmosphere. All planets need atmosphere, just to balance the pressure that comes from within. No planet could exist without air, otherwise it would fall within a certain time.

Analyses have endure, that the amount of water would be enough on Mars to the planet with an ocean of 1.6 km depth to cover, if all the water in the soil and as would be brought to the surface, while the polar caps even a thickness exhibit of 800 meters.

Perhaps the earlier published reports of the Italian astronomer Schiaparelli did not have the channels on Mars, so impossible, if they compares with the latest discoveries of Dr. Daniel J. Milton. Dr. Milton, a geologist at the U.S. Geological Survey, said in Science Newsfront "We have photographed the Martian mystery channels. They resemble huge flood channels, such thirty-nine kilometers wide and several hundred miles long, shaped by sudden discharges of water, as they can be the Amazon river getting smaller."

Finally, here's a telegraphic report from AP:

"New images of the northern regions of Mars exhibit similar patterns mysterious plow marks on the red surface of Mars, and scientists say they can not find any natural explanation. We get strange things. It is very confusing," said Michael Carr, a member of the team that analyzes the images of the probe Viking 2 on Mars. Carr said that the latest model of the target area showed a striped pattern that an aerial photograph of a freshly zerpfligten similar field. The stripes are too regular to be of natural origin, said Carr. But what has caused it? I can not really list them all opportunities that have been proposed, Carr said, however denominated, many proposals that they were made by human hands.

I would like to draw your attention to the highly significant fact that the assumptions that humans plow there, were made by the Viking scientists, after Viking 1 on Mars, no life as we find it investigated could.

At the end of this article I would like to give credit where credit is due and tell you that we have won in spite of the duplicitous statements about the discovery of extraterrestrial civilization, but as a vast knowledge of our undertakings in space. We have learned through observations of out there and photograph more about our world than is currently perceived by the public. Space satellites in Earth orbit have made clear our global problems of environmental pollution. We learned more about the climate, ocean circulation, mineral deposits, soil analysis, control of floods, forest management and areas with particularly high agricultural harvests, both those that are already being cultivated, as well as those that are still undeveloped.

Our probes in orbit of Earth, we have also discovered that we are not always perfect. In the beginning, we received reports that might not even exist on our planet, no life. These probes reported that there was not enough water vapor or oxygen in order to preserve our life as we know it on Earth! So we now know that the probes do not always work well. Much depends on the pressure and the strength of the magnetism that prevailed at the time of measurements in space around the probe.

Show as we shall see, the future of mankind on this earth will depend on our space exploration, because he only out there, this little world, which he now calls his home, can really protect. But if one that we inhabit can.

Day things get unbearable, we will be forced to go into space to find other worlds

Every dollar invested in this program is a good investment. Thus man is engaged in a peaceful manner, while he learns. The space program has the potential to be, one day enable humans to explore space and work together as brothers, as intensely, that there is no time for senseless wars that bring people only additional confusion and misery.

The man calls himself the most intelligent beings on earth. Soon he will have a chance to prove it.

Bradford D. Smith, NASA scientist and head of the photographic Voyager mission to Saturn in 1980, had this to say that, I think, explains some of the mysteries of outer space, which we have so confused. He said: "With any scientific research of this size many of our long-accepted theories, these oh-so-valued interpretations of the universe around us, to scientific accidents."

Dr. Robert Jastrow, founder and director of the Goddard Institute for Space Studies of NASA, science correspondent Marcia Golub from the Special Science Digest interviewed for the spring issue 1980th In this revealing article titled Life on Mars, Dr. Jastrow fixed very firmly that life exists there. After his studies of the Viking data there is no doubt that on Mars there is at least a form of primitive life.

Dr. Jastrow now teaches at Columbia University and the College at Dartmouth. "But even primitive life forms, such as microbes, are complicated," concluded Dr. Jastrow, "because this would raise the question: is there life elsewhere in the cosmos, we can be confident that humanity is not alone, that on planets orbiting around other stars, of life must teeming and that can be used in solar systems that are older than ours, this life is far more advanced than the human race on Earth. " Reporter Golub, Dr. Jastrow, the following important question: "Do you think that there is life on Mars? Some Scientific reject this ... ? why "Dr. Jastrow said," My only comment is that scientific caution is in order when you spend 30 dollars of your own money, but if you spend millions of dollars of other people, you have to face the facts, too afraid. scientists are against mistakes.

During the microbial testing of Viking 1 on Mars Martian microbes possible food was offered with radioactive carbon. If the microbes were eating the food, they would exhale radioactive carbon dioxide, and if the Geiger counter ticked, the microbes would have assumed the feed. The Geiger counter ticking relentlessly. While many scientists Viking this positive Result of trying to explain only a chemical reaction passed, many others, such as Dr. Jastrow, that this was a biological reaction. The fact is that the test of Viking 2 was exactly the same positive reaction and the microbes on Mars, the devouring of radioactive carbon-laden food. Nevertheless, continued the argument about whether these tests were then chemical or biological reactions.

The soil samples were stored for several months in the hold of the Viking probe and the microbe test was then repeated once more. This time, the signal disappeared of the Geiger counter. Dr. Jastrow explains that living organisms die when they are kept in the dark for several months without food and water.

This was the compelling facts that spoke for the existence of Martian microbes as the first signs of life on Mars. Dr. Jastrow also said that Dr. Levin believes, who conducted the test microbes, also, that these test results are evidence for life on Mars. But to speak with Jastrow's own words: "Dr. Levin was a bit reluctant, because he, the Viking team sat in the neck. "

The chief biologist Chuck Klein now admits, that is to take stock of the microbial testing of the Viking 1 and 2 conclusion that definitely in all tested soil samples were organisms with metabolism. "This means that there is life on Mars," said Dr. Klein.

Dr. Jastrow concludes with the remark: "The taxpayer has the money he has invested in Mars, get a better value than he realized. But he has also said yes nobody. This has killed the program for the exploration of Mars. "

In certain academic circles has been known for some time that there is life on the moon, on Mars and on many other planets. Just because the public is not aware of this fact, it is no less true. While Dr. Jastrow is a very cautious man, who speaks only of primitive life forms on Mars, some scientists are more open in their expressions.

A retired physicist with whom I could spend an afternoon in the summer of 1980, spoke quite frankly to me about life on other worlds, UFOs and their drive ways. This 1-Lett told me with disarming candor, that some of his friends, all leading scholars - were taken by the aliens to the moon and to Mars. There are several secret bases on the ground in mountainous areas above 4,500 meters, where alien spaceships landing. These voyages, the well-known scientists across from me, are not junkets, but they have a very high scientific value.

In addition, George Adamski, in his book Inside the spacecraft, that on many of his trips during the fifties and top scientists were taken. Whatever these men learned on these trips, was later implemented for the constructive application, without, however, have indicated the source of their information.

Adamski was by people from outer space. with whom he had contact, said that while the air on the moon is generally very thin, there are still certain areas. where people go around the earth without even a space suit and oxygen tank could, but it would be a twenty-four hour pressure adjustment is needed to acclimatize their bodies to these conditions. He was also told that people from other planets visiting the moon, through the same procedure to adjust the pressure.

The scientists with whom I talked in the summer of 1980, gave me exactly the same information. He said that they had arrived as a select group of scientists on the moon, they were told by their hosts that they could do without space suits for a walk on the surface. Yet they were given small bottles of oxygen with the explanation that they are under these conditions to which they were not used, a short time would dim very sick. They went through the twenty-four hours is not pressure adjustment. This group was later to Mars g ebracht, whom they found to their surprise, inhabited by human beings. They were told that about six hundred million people live on Mars and that he was on the surface air pressure at sea level, a height of six thousand feet would correspond here on Earth. Since Mars is a little less than half as large as the earth, the air pressure seemed sufficient because of the smaller attraction. A man of the earth would weigh hundreds of pounds on Mars is less than fifty pounds.

Even if this story sounds pretty fantastic, but I have no reason not to believe this gentleman, who seemed to me mentally very lively and sincere man, and the deals for a private company still using electromagnetic research. In fact, he was invited to undertake the same journey into space, as his friends recently. He told me that he would tell me all the information on his return, when was ever the same.

The Book of Alternative 3 is called a secret mission to Mars in the U.S. and the USSR 1962nd According to the authors of this book was a copy of the tape with the records of Mars and the special decoder NASA in the United States stole and brought to Canada to Great Britain. There, the band end of the 70's highest points and top scientists has shown. The band revealed that the two superpowers on 22 May 1962 in a joint action, a remote-controlled spacecraft on Mars, landed, reported by a temperature and atmospheric pressure, sufficient to support life as we know it. Alternative 3 was written by three well-known British television reporters, a television movie with produced the same title that was shown on television by the BBC in 1977, the book was followed in June 1979. The physicist, who had given me the information about the moon and Mars hinted that the Book of Alternative 3 would contain much truth.

Look for this kind of truth, is no easy matter, because the governments that are dealing with such projects, prefer to keep their discoveries under lock and key. However, the truth in time will always come to light. because very few people can take those secrets to the grave, and sooner or later seep through the information.

To get the complete picture of the truth, do those who are interested, never cease to explore every little part of it and patiently assemble the puzzle before we can see the picture clearly. "Know the truth and the truth shall make you free." It's not enough to use the human intellect or mind to us because the truth is often revealed through intuitive feelings or hunches that come to us through conscious attention.

I think that man has no chance to see the full picture of the truth, until both elements of his nature harmoniously applied: his intellect and intuition. Only then he will know the full picture of the truth and deal at the same time it can also.

17. LATEST DEVELOPMENTS

Since the publication of We discovered alien bases on the moon in November 1981, much of importance has occurred. The U.S. Air Force Col. WC Stevens, even inquisitive investigator of UFO phenomena, had read my book and I immediately arranged for an appearance on the radio at KABC Los Angeles in September 1982.

This show, hosted by Bill Jenkins, called Open Mind , and lasted two hours.

The moderator told me that about a million people listened to the show, which has the largest audience in the United States does.

The show was so successful - the telephones in the office ran hot - that I was invited back the following year for two hours. In the last two years I have received thousands of letters consenting, although some have criticized my attempts to wake the public. I received many letters from astronomers, most amateurs, but also some pros. Most praised me that I had the courage to unravel the mystery of our discoveries on the moon. Many were seen moving, glowing lights and other phenomena through their telescopes.

The amateur astronomer, Mr. Smith set out on a newly discovered enormous structures on the tops of the mountains cape Agarum attention. Cape Agarum lies in the sea of the crisis and the 2135-meter unit is close to a huge Van de Graaff generator. Other similar structures and bunkers surround this huge mushroom-like domes object.

Those readers who have their own telescope can see this design on the southwestern shore of the Sea of Crisis, 14 degrees north latitude and 65 degrees east longitude. The best way is observation about two to seven days after the new moon with at least 250facher magnification. Smith, an astronomer who has studied this area extensively, visited me personally. He explained that the area of Cape Agarum was Apollo 15 and 17 have been carefully photographed. Both mapping and panoramic cameras were used, but, as Mr. Smith stated, ". These photos were retouched to erase the big entity," The earlier photo of the Lunar Orbiter IVHR177 of Agarum and the southeastern sea of the crisis is redacted in part.

A professional manufacturer of telescopes and astronomers from Ohio writes: ". Your book fascinated me so much that I devoured it in one evening," Even this was an astronomer in his letter that he had seen a lot of unexplained objects that relate to the Moon in the area of the Alpine Valley and around the Pitton moved back and forth. He even worked on a book on this topic.

In the fall of 1983 I received a visit from former NASA scientist Dr. Fred Bell. Mr. Bell had read my book and said that he would fully support it as best he could. Our meeting lasted three hours.

At this time reached the memoir of a former astronaut of the Mercury project earlier my desk. This astronaut was selected to fly the top secret X-Mercury flight to the moon in 1962/63. He should have two years left on the moon, send information to uni via microwaves back to Earth. This astronaut was to be brought back later in another top-secret mission to Earth, as he revealed to me, but I can not talk about it in this book. Since the Mercury capsules were very small, it would have been impossible, the necessary equipment, oxygen, water and food for such an extended journey to the moon with you. This mission would be possible only when the moon makes life possible, and that he must, because otherwise they would have official sites for such a flight is not considered.

I bought in the summer of 1983 a very large and powerful telescope with a 4e-inch mirror, which I under favorable viewing conditions on permits before 1000fa-magnification. Since that time I was witness to many additional activities on the moon. For example, I studied on 16 February 1984 at 22.18 clock pacific time the crater Archimedes, as I at the head of the Western Wall noticed two large, white, egg-shaped objects moving slowly along the edge of moving, and a very black, also egg-shaped object that stood on the northwestern edge. Other observations related to a dark, almost ten kilometers of the crater Calippus object. A huge object, about forty-eight miles long, which resembled a huge tube, was among the craters Pallas and Murchison found. Another design that looks like a giant hangar that can accommodate at least two ships of a mile, is located in the crater Alphonsus, or just about sixteen miles west of the impact area of the early U.S. Ranger 9 probe.

The sharp observers was that great hangar in the left corner of the TV screen visible, about fifteen seconds before touch of Ranger 9th But no one asks about his existence, because most people had only paid attention to the target area in the top center of the screen.

I went with my telescope nor a discovery: a fifty-six to sixty-four km long mountain, built in five sections of Clean eight miles long and four miles wide. This mountain is about twenty-four kilometers southeast of the crater Azophi find.

Another report reached my desk that dates back to the early fifties when the Palomar 200-inch Hale SLR telescope on the summit of Mount Palomar was in California used intensively to the mysterious moon bridges on the mountains surrounding the Marc Crisium study. Were made as a spectral analysis of these bridges, it was found that they were made of metal and therefore had to be artificial. The public hearing, of course, nothing of this new information. Thus, the government even knew since the early fifties of these things on the moon. During this period, also reported Frank Edwards, the famous news commentator on the air that many astronomers, both professionals and amateurs, the so-called lunar crater in the road Piccolomini had seen.

In February 1984 I received a letter from his lordship the Earl of Clancarty from the House of Lords in England, where he invited me to speak in front of the Research Committee for extraterrestrial phenomena in the House of Lords. Lord Clancarty and some other members of the House of Lords, had we discovered alien bases on the moon read. I was invited on 3 July 1984 to speak to the House of Lords. After my arrival in London I was about 15 clock brought to the House of Parliament, where I was invited to attend a meeting of the British Parliament. I was surprised to meet with the officials so much interest. I was told that some members of the royal family on the subject would be very interested and I was promised that a copy of my book would find its way into the hands of Prince Philip, Duke of Edinburgh. This promise was then on 30 August 1984 actually redeemed, and to my delight, I received a registered letter of Buckingham Palace with the words: "Lord Clancarty has handed me the copy of your book. Thank you for this. I will read it as soon as possible. Yours sincerely, Philip." I can say with complete justification, that my trip to London was a complete success.

Before my flight to England, I ordered another showed several additional photos from NASA, the construction and surface water on the moon. The panoramic photo of Apollo 15, No. 8936 shows a crater with water in the bottom. Even NASA discovered that a man looked exactly by using explosives made crater in Canada, which was filled with ground water, subsequently recorded on the black and white photo like this crater on the moon.

A very interesting photo of Apollo 17 No. AS 17-150-22959H will show at least a dozen objects and structures, a huge curved tube and a little matter that pours from a smaller to a larger crater. In fact, this particular scene looks exactly like a waterfall, mist rises from the base of the larger crater.

This color photo was on the front page of the book Apollo Over The Moon published. The very large twin craters named Van de Graaff crater. This crater has at least two hundred and forty kilometers long and is on the back of the moon. This area is the area of known magnetic anomaly that is associated with your remote highlands in combination. The gamma ray spectrometer on Apollo 17 discovered here, the highest concentration of natural radiation, which was measured up to now on the moon.

Of course, over time, even more discoveries to reach the public one way or another, and perhaps others are the subject of the public continue to keep in mind. One day, our survival will depend on this information.

EPILOGUE OF GLENN

For fifty years, government authorities in many countries have focused efforts made to provide themselves with internal and secret classified information, while avoiding any further outward publication of reports of UFOs. If they are also using code names like Project Sign, Grudge, Saucer, magnetic, Blue Book or London Report mask, it's evident that you are interested in sufficiently for the continued sightings of alien spacecraft, and it considers to be of sufficient importance to them so many to devote years of attention and concentration. And finally, even if we wanted to be so naive as to believe statements that numerous sightings were nothing more than just different weather phenomena, or marsh gas, balloons, high-flying geese, reflections, ghosts or the boasts mentally Confused, I will but it seems that then the continued study of these incidents over so many decades of little value - or logic - would have. If these alien spaceships are observed everywhere in the world, some with people waving from inside or trying to communicate, or when they race at speeds of thousands of miles per hour on radar screens or perform alongside commercial aircraft maneuvers or sea followed while under the surface water pulsate, of course, such statements appear more ridiculous. And even if we accepted such absurd explanations for the phenomenon remain still about twenty-seven percent of these sightings, which according to the United States Air Force with such terms could not be explained and can.

So I add the following to a short, selected chronological history of reports of UFO observations in order to provide insight and stimulate critical thinking about the various explanations that the governments, the media or other sources for the events related to UFOs have the past, present or future may be, and still are. For brevity's sake I have chosen an arbitrary start date, otherwise the long list would fill volumes.

1619, in Lucerne, Switzerland: An extremely long fiery object was seen, flying along a lake.

June 1750, Edinburgh. Scotland: Large fireball that moves slowly.

October 1755, Lisbon, Portugal: Huge bright flying spheres sighted many times.

August 1762, Basel, Switzerland: A pair of astronomers observed a huge dark object, which is surrounded by a glowing outer ring.

September 1820, Embrun, France: Wonderfully smooth formation flying objects in straight lines crossing the city turns ninety degrees and then flies away in a perfect formation.

November 1833, Niagara Falls, United States: For more than an hour will be seen as a big square light objects.

1838, India: Flying disc with long, orange-glowing appendages.

May 1845: Signor Capocci observed from the Capodimonte Observatory in Naples several luminous discs flying from east to west.

18th June 1845: Team members observed the brig Victoria, three light objects that come from the lake. The location of the ship was 36 degrees 40 minutes 56 seconds north latitude, 13 degrees 44 minutes 36 seconds east longitude.

From 1869 to 1871: Forty members of the UK Royal Astronomical Society report that they have long various geometric patterns, repeated sightings of a moving object opaque fifty miles, and observed great white dome of n-long bridge structures on the lunar surface.

Janua '1878: The Adension Daily News has a reputation of having been the first newspaper, called "saucer" reports of UFOs over used.

August 1878: The Professors Swift and Watson report of two balls of light that move between Mercury and the Sun.

15th May 1879: The officers and crew of the HMSVulture strange lights seen under water. The location of the ship at that time was clock 21.40 in the Persian Gulf. The commander of the ship saw the light pulses that are moving at great speed under water. The objects resembling giant rotating "wheels" and traveled with far greater speed than any conceivable vehicle.

July 1880, St. Petersburg. Russia: follow Big round brilliant airship, the two smaller moves, sent along a ravine. Three minutes visibly disappears silently.

November 1882, Greenwich Observatory, England: Huge green disc with dark markings. Stately luminous mass in the form of a torpedo. Is also seen in Holland and Belgium.

February 1884, Brussels Observatory:Extremely bright light spot on the planet Venus. Nine days later, he moves away from the planet into space.

November 1887 Huge fireball rising from the sea at Cape Race, moves against the wind close to the ship Siberian approached and then moved away. Five minutes visible. The captain said he had previously seen similar events in the same area.

April 1892: Large black disc slowly crossed the moon's surface as seen by the Dutch astronomers Muller.

March 1893rd 11MS Caroline between Shanghai and Japan: The team observed a disk formation, flying slowly north. You move between the ship and a 1,800 meter high mountain. Observation through a telescope shows that it is reddish-colored objects, leaving the tails. Two hours visible.

14th March 1907: Officers of the steamer Delta observe about three hundred meters long light rods. They move around a center like spokes on a wheel, this phenomenon was about thirty minutes or seven miles in length.

December 1909, Boston, Massachusetts is luminous object seen over the city. Three days later it is seen through Worchester, it sweeps a searchlight of tremendous strength across the sky. Two hours later it returns, and thousands in the streets see it. It is still in the air, flying to the south, then east to the sea.

May 1909, Cardiff, England: A man from Cardiff reported that he had been walking in the mountains and it chanced on a large cylindrical object that was parked on a lonely road. Inside, he saw two men, who, when they saw him, excitedly chattering in a foreign language. In the next minute, the machine stood silently in the air and flew away. The grass was in place, which he stated as the place of examination, found a copy.

1910: The longest flight of a Zeppelin in the records for this year

St. Cyr to the Eiffel tower a few miles. (Author's note: . This event I have included to show the date of the first flight of a constructed object of this size on Earth thus ruled out the possibility that UFO sightings before this date can be explained as Zeppelins.

January 1912: Dr. Urine observed an object of a dark figure that hovers over the moon. He estimates at least two hundred and fifty miles long.

1923, North Carolina: Reports of shiny balls or discs that move over a period of three years in formation individually or in the vicinity of Brown Mountain. Official investigations have shown no significant explanations.

1943 was watching the sheep man from an American ship in the waters in the Persian Gulf a huge slice. The object glowed a soft green light. The object increased its speed and then accelerated away from the U.S. Navy ship.

1947 Mount Rainier , Washington: The pilot of a private aircraft observed a formation of silvery "saucer objects."

March 1950, Denver, Colorado: A speaker at the University of Colorado, talk to students about the existence of UFOs. Mr. Newton stated three-saucer-shaped object had landed in an area several hundred miles from Denver. The army sealed off the area and recovered a number of small but clearly humanoid body. Thereafter, the spaceships were placed and transported for further testing and experimentation purposes in a military installation.

April 1952, Haliburton, Ontario, Canada: Two silver object, another just behind the move, five minutes by complex maneuvers in the air.

April 1952, Nellis Air Force Base, near Las Vegas, Nevada: Eighteen de-nm, dull white objects in irregular formation, about 12,000 feet altitude, speed seems to 1200 miles per hour. Responsibilities to the air base said there was no record of the rise of airplanes or balloons that day.

July 1952, Washington, DC: Many photos and sightings of UFOs over the Capitol, the White House and the Pentagon in Washington, several Weeks. Military radar screens and they do track interceptors to rise in order to clarify the situation. Government holds largest press conference to discredit the sightings and to reassure the worried public.

November 1952, Desert Center, California: George Adamski and six witnesses see a cigar-shaped object, several thousand feet long, floating above the desert. A small saucer-shaped vehicle landed and a man comes out. Adamski and draw pictures of aliens in the desert sand in order to communicate. The space pilot leaves footprints that contain symbolic engravings. A plaster cast is removed. Newspapers in Phoenix and California report on the event.

February 1954, Coniston, England: Two teenagers shoot a glowing saucer, which rises above a valley, turning circles and straight disappears upwards. The pictures clearly show the same Darbishire ship type, Adamski photographed a few years earlier in California had. The scientist and engineer Leonard grief ') used orthographic projects in order to compare the images in these photos, and notes that there are physical objects of comparable size. Wrote an excellent book: Space, Gravity. Flying and saucers.

July 1959, Honolulu, Hawaii: Five pilots of Pan American Airlines discovered one thousand miles east of Hawaii, followed by a very bright object, the four smaller ones in formation. The objects captured from an aircraft and accompany it for ten seconds to three hundred feet away, then make a sharp turn and accelerate with incomprehensible speed.

August 1959, Brisbane, Australia: A priest with a university education and twelve other witnesses in New Guinea Report bathed in blue light flying saucers with people on board, the wave, and send signals. The objects float in altitudes varying between one hundred and fifty and seven hundred and fifty feet. The report also includes an additional eight sightings of saucers and a larger cigar-shaped vessel in the course of several days.

10th May 1962, newspapers in Seattle, Washington: X15-pilot Joe Walker photographed mysterious flying objects. Five to six disk-shaped objects at a height of 246 700 feet (75,243.5 meters). The second flight under the command of pilot Major Bob White, met another mysterious object that was seen and photographed.

1965: The astronauts McDivitt and White photograph several UFOs hovering a short distance from their Gemini 4 space capsule in orbit.

From the book Our Ancestors Came from Outer Space by Maurice Chatelain, a scientist at NASA, who brought the space program of the United States on the way: "It seems that all flights of Apollo and Gemini was followed by space vehicles of extraterrestrial origin, sometimes from a distance, but sometimes quite close to flying saucers, or UFOs, if you want to call it that. Each time it happened, informed the astronauts that ground control, which then ordered absolute silence. "

June 1967, The Washington Post: "UFOs are Thant's primary concern," UN Secretary General U Thant had top people talk among the proponents of UFOs before the Space Committee of the United Nations Thant said that he regarded UFOs as one of the most important problems, which. The UN faces.

October 1968, Madrid, Spain. UFO caused traffic chaos in Madrid. The astronomical observatory observed the object at high magnification, and said it gave off a blinding light. A photo that was taken from the object revealed that it is a triangular, solid, and acted in some places transparent object. The Spanish Air Force was a rise supersonic warplane, but was outmaneuvered by the UFO.

October 1973, in Lima, Peru: An architect and other witnesses observed and photographed a UFO in untetassenfmiges fifty yards away, and twenty feet above the ground. The spacecraft flew silently for thirty seconds along the valley toward them, then it flew away. Portholes are clearly visible, it is identical to the Adamski type.

November 1975, Santa Cruz, California: A scientist from the University of California at Berkeley reported a symposium before, Apollo 11 was followed, halfway to the moon a UFO followed Apollo 12 during three orbits another UFO.

1976, Los Angeles, California: Astronaut Gordon Cooper quote: "intelligent beings from other planets regularly visit our world in an effort to contact us. I point to my various trips in space ships encountered. NASA and the U.S. government know this and have a lot of evidence. Yet they remain silent in order not to disturb the people. ”

March 1977, Los Angeles, California: Several witnesses reported two tear-shaped lights flying at high speed over the Santa Catalina Island and in formation over the airport. Witnesses say that in their opinion clearly demonstrated by these objects, that they were controlled.

August 1985, Beijing, China: In the sky over China have been observed over the last five years over six hundred UFOs. The latest sighting was made by the crew of a Chinese B747 over Mongolia. The object was described as a walnut shaped and flew for several minutes beside the jumbo jet.

December 1989 to March 1990, Belgium: Numerous eyewitness accounts of several large triangular platforms that maneuver across the country. The entire population of several villages reported to have seen these ships in about a hundred meters. The Belgian Air Force was able to determine the position of the spacecraft by radar and fired F-16 fighter aircraft for further investigation. In six of nine interception had the pilots, the objects in the target recognition. The rate fluctuated within a few seconds, the goals 90-1870 km / h About the event was reported worldwide, but there was no official explanation given.

1992: The physicist and former astronaut Brian O’Leary said: ”It seems for decades to provide contacts with aliens, but we want to admit it still does not.”

To this day there are still such reports, and they certainly arouse our curiosity, but one has to wonder however, how many proofs are still needed, so that they are finally convincing enough. As my father said so much: ”How many times you have something watching film and photograph it, examine it and think about it, how much evidence must collect it until we finally wake up and find out” The evidence, however, which he was well aware, is an individual process, and this book exists to underpin it.

To some degree, however, he found, we have it made us comfortable when we have presented our lives beyond our tiny sphere of light as something extraordinary. For years, educational institutions, theorists, and the representatives of science fiction have made the idea of feeding, that space and the planets beyond our a hostile, desolate vacuum represented.

This idea in turn has fostered the view together that wonderful just by pure coincidence, by the happy position of the Earth in just the right distance from the sun, just the right combination of molecules, elements, gases, and amino acids and has developed into the kind of environment has to understand the biological life as we can get. However, even the most cursory examination of life should bring us to this centuries-old notions shaken, and make the view of the senseless creation destroyed. For how can we seriously believe that the

Could act concept, which supports the development of life, the principles of science and nature, so randomly ... without a universal similarity exhibit?

Today, scientists gradually give that advice to be sought on the origin of life elsewhere in the solar system, stars and galaxies. That the biological process of organic synthesis chemistry and stable within the universe continues and went down before time immemorial on the planet. Recent research confirms the existence of a fundamental chemical similarities in living things in the universe, and the key components of all biological molecules, the amino acids that join together to form proteins, which in turn stimulate the production of genetic material RNA and DNA, and so on and so forth, appeared not to happen ... so that they point out that life is not just an odd coincidence.

If we imagine the vastness of the Wehraums, we think so really think about the endless expanse of the cosmos, which contains the essence of all creation. They surround us and out there in this world we call home: the fundamental elements of life merge manifest, and continue to develop, to express their functions. In much the same way as we unconsciously the composition of our environment, created out of air, earth and sea, we divide ourselves and the remaining selection of organic creation, ... each of our neighboring planet for billions of years participated in the creation of the same source. And we all were, and still continue to be bombarded have left to move through the womb of space from a variety of organic material, debris, and biological compounds, and the other planets, heavenly bodies and the elements.

Only in recent years we have begun to explore some fundamental things about the universal principles of life and to unveil: the physical laws of nature and the relationship between gravity, mass, and the centrifugal force; their unending quest to find a balance between to maintain the cranes and their expression, and the rules of the equal and opposite reaction, the laws of magnetism, the basic biochemistry that produce biological life. The basic principles we should all realize, yes, we should be familiar with them and put them not hastily or ignore when we created the heavens and what is behind them, exploring.

If we might develop greater understanding of what and who we are, how life evolves and adapts to the ground, we hope the lively speculation in question, imagine extraterrestrial life as something grotesque or bizarre. Let us be aware that travel over distances in space requires not only advanced and precise technology, but eons of personal development, intelligence and understanding, you want to accomplish this wonderful performance successfully.

And as a scientist said, 'If we one day land on a planet somewhere, do not be surprised if someone comes to you and shakes your hand '.

The wealth of evidence suggests safely out that they have come long ago, to shake his hand.