A serene sunset scene over a body of water. In the foreground, a small wooden boat with two oars is visible. The water is calm, reflecting the vibrant colors of the sky. In the distance, there are fishing nets and structures on the water. The sky is a mix of purple, pink, and orange, with scattered clouds.

One of the things I love about Minneapolis is how quickly a city can turn into a small town. In Northeast, there's a woman who suddenly finds herself a single mom. If you can donate, that's so wonderful. And if you can just send her some prayers or vibes or whatever your heart does, that's pretty good, too. Life is wonderful, but has so many unexpected turns for us. Be good to each other, and yourself. <3

Aaron Joseph Purmort

Purmort, Aaron Joseph age 35, died peacefully at home on November 25 after complications from a radioactive spider bite that led to years of crime-fighting and a years long battle with a nefarious criminal named Cancer, who has plagued our society for far too long. Civilians will recognize him best as Spider-Man, and thank him for his many years of service protecting our city. His family knew him only as a kind and mild-mannered Art Director, a designer of websites and t-shirts, and concert posters who always had the right cardigan and the right thing to say (even if it was wildly inappropriate). Aaron was known for his long, entertaining stories, which he loved to repeat often. In high school, he was in the band The Asparagus Children, which reached critical acclaim in the northern suburbs. As an adult, he graduated from the College of Visual Arts (which also died an untimely death recently) and worked in several agencies around Minneapolis, settling in as an Interactive Associate Creative Director at Colle + McVoy. Aaron was a comic book aficionado, a pop-culture encyclopedia and always the most fun person at any party. He is survived by his parents Bill and Kim Kuhlmeier, father Mark Purmort (Patricia, Autumn, Aly), sisters Erika and Nicole, first wife Gwen Stefani, current wife Nora and their son Ralph, who will grow up to avenge his father's untimely death. A service will be held on December 3, 2014 at Shelter Studios, 721 Harding St. NE, Mpls 55413 at 6 pm.
